Vol. 46 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1912. No. [illegible]

RAIN COULD NOT REPRESS THE POPULAR ENTHUSIASM

Belleville's Labor Day Celebration a Great Success—Rain Fell Frequently During the Day, but Crowds Thronged the Fair Grounds—Fine Programme of Sports, and Over 4000 People Enjoyed it—Disappointment as to Aviator Had but Little Effect—Full Report of the Day's Proceedings.

Belleville has "come back" to its old-time position as the chief centre of public celebrations, with their attendant features of sporting and other amusements, in the Bay of Quinte district, of which it is naturally the capital.

For a good many years Belleville has been asleep in that respect. Other places in the district have annually held celebrations on some particular holiday, much to the financial profit of their business men; but the people of the City of the Bay, lacking amusement at home, have been compelled to go abroad to seek it, with the result that much money was spent elsewhere by them, which, under other circumstances would have been spent at home, together with much more by visitors from the surrounding country.

Now a new leaf has been turned; Belleville will hereafter annually celebrate Labor Day, and that in a manner becoming this prosperous and rapidly growing city. Such was the result of yesterday's celebration.

THE WEATHER.

Despite the heavy handicap of most unpromising weather and very muddy streets, caused by heavy rain on Sunday morning, there was a large influx of visitors by rail, steamboat and road, not less than 6,000 coming, and the streets were thronged with visitors, who admired the display of flags and bunting, which gave to the city a holiday appearance. During the morning the sky was heavily overcast and a sprinkling of rain fell, but that did not dampen the ardor of the holiday makers who thronged Front Street and were at intervals regaled by music furnished by the Oddfellows' Band and the 15th Regiment Band, which rendered a number of selections.

A DISSAPPOINTMENT.

Worse than that occasioned by the bad weather, particularly to those having the management in hand, was the announcement made by the Curtis Company of New York, from whom Aviator Hemstrough had been engaged for a flight at the fair grounds, that owing to an accident at White Plains, New York, the aviator would be unable to appear. Grave as was the disappointment, faith was kept by the management as far as possible with the public by bulletining the fact at The Intelligencer Office.

THE PARADE.

So threatening had the weather become at 1 p. m., the time appointed for the street parade to start, that very few took part in it. However, very shortly after the time announced, Mr. J. J. B. Flint, the Chief Marshal, formed them up and despatched them in the following order:

Oddfellows' Band.
Canton No. 8.
Napanee Fire Brigade.
Trenton Band.
Deseronto Fire Brigade.
15th Regiment Band.
Belleville Fire Brigade.
Dark Town Brigade.
Rube Band.

An immense throng was out on the streets to witness the procession, but it had scarcely got fairly started when a heavy downpour of rain commenced, which lasted for about half an hour. All but the processionists sought shelter, but the latter continued their march, although the route was somewhat shortened, until the fair grounds was reached, and there they dispersed.

FIREMEN'S RACES.

The fire departments of Napanee and Deseronto came to compete with our local department. The run was 200 yards in length, with two couplings to make, one at a hydrant 400 feet from te starting point, and the other at the finish. The last one was to break a coupling in the hose and attach a pipe, both couplings to have eight threads to the inch.

The Deseronto department won the contest by nearly 6 seconds, making the run in 37½ seconds, but ¼ of a second was added for not making a complete connection of the pipe and hose. Belleville came second with a time of 43½ seconds, and Napanee third, with 46½ seconds. Belleville made the fastest run, but lost in coupling.

Fireman Ground Beneath the Wheels

MONTREAL, Sept. 2.—At dawn Sunday morning, while extinguishing the headlight on his engine at the west end of the G. T. R. Turcot yards, a fireman name Joseph Goddard fell between the locomotive and the string of cars and was cut in two.

It was not possible to learn exactly how the accident happend as it was only after several cars had passed over the victim, and one of the gangmen had come across an amputated arm, that the unfortunate fate of the fireman was discovered. It is surmised however, that, with the breaking of the dawn, the victim climbed along the foot board to put out the headlight of the locomotive The locomotive was shunting cars ahead at the time and it is supposed that he was jolted off beween his engine and the cars, thus meeting his death.

Lucky Montreal K. C. Won $1,500

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Victor E. Mitchell, K.C., of Montreal paid the expenses of his voyage and incidentally broke the trans-Atlantic pooling record by winning the auction pool on the White Star liner Cedric, in yesterday from Liverpool, five days in succession.

Mr. Mitchell explained that when the prize came his way the first day he put it back in the pool, hoping thereby to lose it and ease his conscience, which was not altogether callous to the gentle art of gambling. When the stakes came his way five days in succession, however, he saw that fate was against him in his attempt at righteousness, and gave it up as a bad job.

Chatty Comments From Chicago

If anyone thinks Belleville is not going ahead, that one has another think coming. More than seventy new houses will be erected this season in addition to two beautiful school buildings, the Marsh & Henthorn Co's new plant, Wood Chemical Co's new plant, and so on. There is not a vacant house or store in the city. Land values are increasing. There is plenty of work for all hands, labor is at a premium, and everybody has money. What more do you want? Huh!

Do you know anything about these newspapers? "The Anglo Canadian," "The Phoenix," "The Hastings Times," "The Sun," "The Plain Speaker," "The Victoria Chronicle," "The Independent" and "The Free Press"? You don't? That's funny! They were published in Belleville at different periods. You may have forgotten them, though, seeing that the first one mentioned was founded in 1831, the next two in 1832, and the others in order in 1835, 1836, 1841, 1858 and 1879.

The young lady who superintended the free play ground in Belleville last year has been appointed to a similar position in London, Ontario, and the "London Advertiser" says of the appointment: "Miss Allison is well qualified to take part in the work, having had training and professional experience in the schools of Chicago, New York and Belleville." Surest thing, you know. Chicago—New York and Belleville. Three greatest towns on the continent. Kingston, Peterboro and other small town papers please copy.—Belleville Club News, Chicago.

Murder Witness At Liverpool

(Intelligencer Special)

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 3.—Thomas Couhe, formerly night clerk at the Elks Club in New York, and an eye-witness of the murder of gambler Herman Rosenthal, was met by detectives on landing from the Lusitania here this morning and informed that he was wanted by District Attorney Whitman at New York to testify. He was not arrested, but willingly accompanied the officers to the police station and afterwards went to a hotel.

Society Scandal At Rome

ROME, Sept. 2.—A profound sensation was caused by the arrest today of two prominent leaders of Roman society with five accomplices on a charge of alleged trafficking in counterfeit bank notes, and Government stock certificates.

The chief accused are Count Falzacappa and Count Barbiellini, who are accused of having issued illicit securities on an extensive scale. The organization with which they are said to be connected is believed to have widespread ramifications.

All the arrested men protested they were innocent, but they have been incarcerated in jail.

SO! SO!

A couple of "Hunkies" from the "Point" were placed in Limbo by reason of the fact that they could not, as Paddy MacMahon used to say, "Live in peace and amity together." Alderman Russell Chown, in the absence of the regular Cadi, was enacting the character of the Caliph of Bagdad. "How, now!" says Ald. Russell: "how, now! Why is the whichness of the thusness?" "An' may it please your noble sublimity," says the honorable Crown Attorney. "These here guys insists upon chiving each other every time they gets full, so we gathered them in and brought them before your Majestic Highness to see what we can see." "Ha! Ha!" says the Caliph. "So they are chivers, are they? Well, we'll soon fix their hash. What are their nams?" "Most Illustrious," says the Crown Attorney, "this here guy's monicker is 'Wadwzkysej Syzdramkowpskovitchsky.'" "Hold on," roared out Ald. Russell, "are yo trying to 'kid' the bench or are you practicing a new way of sneezing?" "No your Washup," resumed the C. A., "that is his name, and this geek here answers to the tune of Slomaktodok Kandonskovitskyeroffovitch." "Copy out these names and give them to Joe Doyle to use in his next comic opera—they should make a swell intermezzo," said His Honor, "and mark up a fine of—wait a minute. Ho! Chief, how much mazuma did these lads have on them when they were gloomed?" "One had $19.85, Your Honor, and the other had $17.60." "All right," says the "beak." Fine one $19.50 and the other $17.50 and let them go. Call the next case!"—Belleville Chicago Club News.

Canada Depends On British Help

TORONTO, Sept. 2.—Sir Edmund Walker, President of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and one of the leading lights of Canadian finance of this century, gave an interesting commentary of the position of the Dominion in relation to Great Britain in one of his recent addresses. He said in part:—

"We get 83 per cent. of our borrowed money from England. True Holland, Belgium and Germany all contribute proportionate shares, but the spine of Canada in the hour of need is England. No other country has trust in us but she. Again many will look askance when the mention of these vast expenditures is made, and wonder what is done with all the money and what is the need of it. But we have no choice. We must harness this country with the necessary facilities and other things to prepare for the great army of immigration annually coming over here to our shores. This is a problem in itself which no other nation has been confronted with and the combat of procuring the necessary funds for accommodating this large number is the heaviest task which Canada has to contend with. Financial men in London say there is too much money in our Canadian West. But I say no; it is only the evolution of trade.

"Then there is another phase to this loan from England. If she should stop giving us credit—it is hardly likely that she ever will—but if she should, what other country in the world would have the confidence in us to extend us such credit? Any independence or political fanaticism would utterly destroy our credit with England. Our financial future rests on our British connections. If we wish to conserve the power of that great west, we must preserve our patriotic connections."

THOUGHT THEY SAW VIRGIN.

Miracle Seekers in an Irish Village Dispersed by the Police.

DUBLIN, Sept. 1.—The reported miraculous appearance of the Virgin Mary in a house at Newry has been causing a great sensation there.

Crowds assembled last night, endeavoring to see the manifestation and the police were obliged to interfere.

Floods Cause Loss in England

(Intelligencer Special)

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Reports from all over the country show that the loss suffered by agriculturists as the result of floods is greater than most people imagined, and fine weather from now on will do little to ameliorate conditions. The loss can be reckoned in millions of pounds sterling and many thousands of British farmers face hopeless ruin and tens of thousands of laborers are confronted with untold suffering as the attendant result through curtailment of work.

Indian Melodies To Be Saved

BISMARK, N. D., Sept. 2.—That the songs, dances, traditions, secret work and many other interesting features regarding the famous and once powferwul tribes of Mandan, Gros Ventre and Ojibway Indians may be perpetuated for coming generations long after these aborigines have passed to their happy hunting grounds become extinct and are known only in history, the United States government is now taking steps to record these mysteries through the use of the camera and the phonograph.

This task, which would appear to be all but impossible, is being accomplished by the bureau of ethnology at Washington through the aid of the North Dakota State Historical Society. The person to whom this task has been asigned by the government is Miss Frances Densmore of the bureau of ethnology and who arrived from Washington a few days ago.

Miss Densmore's services have been given to the historical society for six weeks, and she has gone to Elbow Woods, on the Berthold reservation, accompanied by Dr. Libby, where they have begun their work. It is intended to take the songs and stories on a phonograph. By this process they will record the rhythm and notes of the songs, together with data on the parts these songs take in the various dances. Photographs of the Indians while performing are also to be taken. These songs are sacred to the Indians and have a great deal to do with their worship. This work has been carried out very successfully among the Sioux at Fort Yates.

It may not be generally known, but the Indians have secret societies, and probably the greatest accomplishment in this work has been the inducing of the Indians to give the secret work to the paleface. This has been accomplished with the Ojibways.

All this data is to be used by Miss Densmore in her report to the bureau of ethnology, and these records are to be deposited with the State Historical Society in this city.

Chambers of Commerce

At Boston on September 24th will meet 700 delegates from all parts of the world to discuss the resolutions and consider the "Orders of the Day" which are printed in sixteen different languages. Not merely will the gathering be cosmopolitan, but the agenda of proceedings will be world-wide in scope, all tending to the maintenance of peace, and the raising of commerce to a higher plane of international comity. All kinds of hospitality will be extended by Boston, and afterward by the United States in an extended trip, to the delegates. Belleville will be represented. It fell to the lot of a Belleville delegate in London to extend the Boston invitation to the British Chambers of Commerce, who are sending 57 representatives.

ONE WOMAN DEFEND HER FAVORITE HAIR DRESSING

While shopping the most annoying thing for me is to have someone try to sell me something "just as good" when I ask for Newbro's Herpicide. To be sure there are not many druggists who do this, but what few there are should know that such a policy will destroy the customer's confidence. When they try it on me I never wait for the story, simply hunt a store where they will sell me what I want.

It is absurd for anyone to say that a preparation is as good as Herpicide. I don't think they believe it themselves. Every druggist knows that there is but one genuine, original dandruff germ destroyer and that is Newbro's Herpicide.

It keeps the head free from dandruff, prevents the hair from coming out and stops itching scalp.

Herpicide is really a wonderful remedy which does just what you want and expect it to do.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

WAS FOREMAN DISHONEST

TORONTO, September, 1.—George Westman, No. 1 Winchester street, foreman in the Joseph Simpson Knitting Mills on Berkeley street, was arrested yesterday charged with stealing about $5,000 worth of goods from the company. Jonas Mudrik, junk dealer at 64 Alice street, is held charged with receiving property. Bail has been refused. The company has for six months been missing what is known as "waste," odd bundles of knit goods done up in parcels of a few pounds and used for lining sweaters, coats, etc. In replenishing the stock, the company officials recognized some purchased material as having been made in the factory. The goods were traced through several junk dealers and the arrests followed. Search of the premises of Rottenberg & Son, 145 Elizabeth street, revealed four or five wagon loads of goods. The property was seized by the police and is now being held pending the disposition of the case. The police say that other arrests will follow.

Monet Still Fighting.

St. Johns, Que., Sept. 3.—Judge Monet has returned from California and intends to raise the Monnoir question once more. He proposes to hold a mass meetng at St. John next Saturday, Sept. 7, and give the conditions of the Monnoir priests' resignation.

By a peculiar coincidence the date of the mass meeting is the very day Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal announced for his pastoral visit. His grace stated in his letter that his visit was to do good and not to aid in any strife over past difficulties. As the passions of some might be aroused by ill-advised clamors he thought it more prudent to defer his visit.

SEMI-WEEKLY DANCE.

The semi-weekly dance was held last evening at Johnstone's Assembly Hall. A large and select gathering again enjoyed themselves dancing to suitable music. A large number from Deseronto and Napanee were in attendance. That these dances are becoming more popular is evidenced by the large crowds that now attend.

A SUBJECT OF INTEREST.

"Sweethearts" was the subject of the sermon in Emmanuel Church last Sunday evening, listened to by a large and appreciative congregation. The sermon was the first of a series of five on "Marriage its antecedence and sequence," to be preached by the Rector on Sunday evenings during this month. Mr. Hubly spoke from Cor. vi, 3—"I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine." He said in opening the subject. There is no institution on earth with power to bless or curse the human race, equal to that of marriage. There is too little thought given to the sacredness of this divinity ordered manner of life, and too little instruction given, by the church and by pedagogy to the young people of Christian countries. The purpose of these sermons is to elevate in thought word and deed among the young men and women the Holy Institution of marriage to the honorable and reverent position to which God primarily assigned it, and to emphasize its divinely appointed relation to life and happiness. Sermon next Sunday is the Betrothal.

POLICE NOTES.

Magistrate Masson, looking hale and hearty, after his trip to the old country, occupied his accustomed seat on the bench yesterday. He allowed Frank Sheridan, a drunk, a chance to celebrate the holiday, and remanded Percy Horton who was brought from Toronto on a charge of theft, until Wednesday.

MILITARY FUNERAL.

The funeral of Nelson Keller took place on Saturday afternoon. Services at the house were conducted by Rev. Mr. Osborne. There were many floral offerings and the great number in attendance was a fitting testimony to the high esteem in which the deceased was held in this locality. A military escort from the 15th Regiment were in attendance in charge of Sergt. Tilley and bearers from the regiment were Messrs. Joe. George and John Lucas, Thos. Benson, B McConnell and C. Ellis. Interment took place in Belleville cemetery.

MR. DANDO HONORED.

A highly pleasing social event took place on Saturday afternoon when Mr. T. R. Dando, who has been foreman of the Marsh & Henthorn Company's machine shop for the past six years, and who is about leaving for the west, was presented, on behalf of the men who had been under his supervision, with a handsome gold fob, with Masonic and I. O. O. F. emblems in relief and suitably inscribed. Mr. John Baker was the chairman, while Mr. D. Brown read the address and Mr. Jos. Mills made the presentation. Mr. Dando, of whom many kind things were said, made a feeling reply and a highly pleasant social hour was passed.

CONCERTS BY GREAT ARTISTS.

Without doubt the most looked forward to concerts of the coming season will be those of the All-Star Artists Series. The opening concert on Sept 16th will be given by David Bispham, the baritone of the golden voice, who has sung his way into the hearts of all lovers of the best in music.

The second offering of the series will be Mme. Lillian Nordica, the most beautiful and best beloved of all prima donnas, and who on this occasion will be assisted by Rummel the eminent violinist; and Romayne Simmons, pianist, Oct. 21st.

The third concert will introduce to us Mme. Hallock, a pianiste of great charm and individuality. Mme. Hallock is half Oriental and was born in Syria. Her playing is said to be characterized by a subtle charm and remarkabble psychic power. Nov. 27th.

That the musical public is keenly appreciative of the unusual attraction of this great combination of artists, at prices within the reach of all, is shown by the host of inquiries and requests for Course Tickets which the local management has received since the announcement of the Series.

Prices to the concerts are as follows: David Bispham concert 50c, $1.00 and $1.50. Madam Hallock concert 50c., $1.00 and $1.50. Madam Nordica concert $1.00, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50. Course Tickets will be sold for $3.00 which entitles the holder to best seat for the three concerts.

Treasure Island Is Now German

HONOLULU, Sept. 2.—Christmas Island, the original "Treasure Island" of Robt. Louis Stevenson's great story and around which many another less famous tale of piracy, treasure and blackbirding has been written, on whose coral shores lie the skeletons of many a wreck, has been sold to a German syndicate for a mid-Pacific depot for steamships. The price is said to be $272,000 cash.

Father Rougler, vendor and vendee of islands negotiated the deed by which the Greig family disposed of all its interests in Christmas Island.

William Greig, a member of the family which is known all over the Pacific, was educated in Honolulu. Until yesterday he had not visited this city for eight years, and his visit this time will be very brief, for he will leave to-morrow for San Francisco on the Wilhelmina. Contained in a little hand satchel which he carried are the documents which will give the new owners their title to the copra island.

Applied Christianity

Undoubtedly the greatest strength of the Salvation Army has lain in its rescue work, and in its practical helpfulness to the unfortunate of every kind. It has been able to bring to the masses of the people the magnetism of the "personal touch," and with the machinery at its command to accomplish much which other religious denominations have scarcely been able to attempt. A few figures as to its strength and its work will be of interest at this time:—

Corps and outposts	8,972
Officers, cadets and employees	21,203
Local Officers	59,270
Bandsmen	22,916
Services held annually	3,000,000
Weekly attendance at same	5,000,000
Persons annually professing conversion	250,000
Countries and colonies operated	59
Weekly and monthly periodicals	59
Languages in which printed	25
Circulation per issue	1,112,597
Ex-criminals' homes	17
Rescue homes	115
Slum posts	131
Food and shelter depots	240
Labor bureaus	51
Labor factories	171
Farm colonies	21
Children's homes	23
Total social institutions for men and women	959
Officers and others employed in same	2,611
Accommodation in same	332,502
Poor persons daily assisted	21,000

Figures at best can afford but an inadequate idea of the Army's achievements, but those above given are sufficient to show why the Salvation Army has been so often called upon to co-operate with the state in philanthropic and immigration work, and why at the death of the founder even royalty is eager to pay tribute to its worth.

Sir Wilfrid Not Asked to Confer

A good deal of speculation has of late been indulged in upon the question of joint consultation between Premier Borden and ex-Premier Laurier, upon the navy question. The Globe has expended some thought upon the question in direct opposition to such conference. It may set its mind at rest upon the subject. The Right Honorable Premier of Canada, Mr. Borden, has given an answer to the numerous rumors upon the subject. Just before leaving England in an interview, Mr. Borden said:—

> "Several unfounded and inaccurate rumors with regard to the outcome of our present visit have gained currency in the British and Canadian press. It would be impossible to enumerate all of them. Allusion may, however, be made to one. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has not declined to meet myself in conference with certain British Ministers for the very good reason that he has not been asked to do so, and for the further reason that no visit of British Ministers to Canada has yet been arranged."

This declaration of Mr. Borden is just what it ought to be. If the Conservative party are not capable of governing the Dominion without the aid of Sir Wilfrid and his anti-British policy, they had better abandon office.

Canada is not thirsting for military or naval glory. Those of us who are advocating a Canadian navy are hopeful that it will never see a real conflict. We appoint police to keep society peaceful, not to provoke brawls and riots. So a navy which is not primarily intended to help guard the peace of the world is a sin against humanity and a menace to civilization. —Canadian Courier.

Complaint has been made, and not without reason, of the profuse display of the stars and stripes and other foreign flags among the street decorations on Front Street. This is not as it should be. The flag of any foreign country is out of place in Canada and ought not to be displayed in this country, excepting on some occasion when people from that country are being entertained. This is a hint which, it is hoped, will be acted upon in the future.

The announcement from London that the British Institute of Journalists has accepted an invitation by the Canadian Division, to meet in Canada next summer is a decided tribute to the progressiveness of the Dominion. A recent official publication of the British Government shows that Canada is increasing proportionately faster than any other considerable part of Great Britain, or for that matter of the world. The figures of the population increase for ten years per cent. are as follows:—

New Zealand	30.5
United States	21.0
Germany	15.2

Of the colonies and nations decreasing in population Ireland loses least, while Norway is losing population faster than any other country in the world. The list of decreases is:—

Italy	6.8
Norway	6.8

When decreases are shown they are usually to be ascribed to emigration.

Sermon by
CHARLES T. RUSSELL
Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

ONE SACRIFICE FOR SINS FOREVER

Christ's Offering Left Nothing Further to be Done —Long Standing Mistake

London, Sept. 1.—Pastor Russell's text for to-day was, "After He had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, He sat down on the right hand of God; * * * for by one offering He hath perfected forever them that are sanctified."—Hebrews x, 12-14.

The Bible is most explicit in its declaration that Jesus, as the Antitypical High Priest, offers but one sacrifice of Himself for the sins of the world. In our context St. Paul points to the fact that the typical priests of the Jewish Era repeated their sacrifices yearly, on each succeeding Atonement Day. He notes to us the fact that these were merely typical sacrifices, which could never take away sins; and then he tells us that the one Sacrifice, on the one Atonement Day, by the Antitypical High Priest, is so complete as to leave nothing further to be done. "Christ * * * dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over Him"; "This He did once, when He offered up Himself" "without spot unto God." (Romans vi, 9; Hebrews vii, 27; ix, 14.) A matter so well established we should settle in our minds and not allow any theory or supposed necessity to move us therefrom.

However, we behold two great Christian communions holding a different view—the High Church of England and the Church of Rome. Both hold the doctrine introduced into the Church about the Fourth Century—the doctrine of the Mass. This doctrine holds that the death of Christ cancels original sin for believers and brings them into fellowship with God through faith in the redeeming blood of Christ. But it philosophizes that sins committed after coming into the family of God need cancellation also, and that nothing except the blood of Christ, the death of Christ, can take away sin; and that the merit of His death at Calvary having been used to cancel our past sins, a fresh sacrifice of Christ is necessary for the more recent sins.

Proceeding with the philosophy they ask, How can we get a fresh sacrifice of Christ and apply it and thus be kept cleansed in the sight of God? They answer that the bread and the wine of the communion service, after being blessed, are the actual flesh and blood of Jesus, and may be used afresh in sacrifice for sins.

Applying this philosophy these Christian brethren perform a common, or Low Mass for general sins, in a congregational way, and High Mass for special sins. Their Church services accordingly are not so much studies or expositions of the Bible, but more particularly a participation in the cleansings supposed to accrue to all who attend Mass.

Those who fail to attend Mass at least once in a year are supposed to be horribly defiled with the accumulated sins. The congregation assembled, praise and prayer are chanted, and then the officiating priest approaches what they call the altar of sacrifice. On it are the bread and wine, which, being blessed, are instantly turned into the actual flesh and actual blood of Christ. The officiating priests and associates and the congregation are all on their knees to worship the Host—to give reverence to the freshly created Christ on the altar. The officiating priest then rises and breaks the bread of flesh. Thus the sacrifice of the Mass for the sins of the people present is accomplished. No wonder the people are anxious to be present, to be cleansed afresh of their sins!

Not only is the sacrifice of the Mass thus made for the living, but Christ is similarly sacrificed for the dead supposed to be suffering in Purgatory.

With our convenient Bibles (Catholic and Protestant) we have much advantage over our brethren of the Fourth Century who invented the doctrine of the Mass. We now see that it is unscriptural and that the bishops, once supposed to be successors of the Twelve Apostles, erred—in other words, they were not inspired—they were not successors of The Twelve. Whatever things those bishops bound on earth were not bound in heaven—they made mistakes, as we all have—and doubtless just as honestly as we.

Bible students see clearly that the one sacrifice of Christ is sufficient for the sins of the whole world—past, present and to come. God's provision in Christ for the forgiveness of sins is applicable only to Adam's (or original) sin, and to such weaknesses as have come to his children from that original sin by heredity. God does not propose in any manner to forgive sins wilfully committed. They receive stripes or punishments in proportion to their wilfulness.

Whatever proportion of sin is directly or indirectly the result of Adam's disobedience and human imperfection is coverable through the merit of the one sacrifice of Christ, which covering is to be obtained by the transgressor's approaching the Throne of the heavenly Grace that he may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need. When we came to God desiring to be accepted as disciples of Jesus and joint-sacrificers in His cross-bearing, self-denial and death to the world, and joint-heirs also with Him in His Heavenly Kingdom, we found Him prepared and willing to be our Advocate with the Father. Through the imputation of the merit of His sacrifice we were healed and accepted of the Father and begotten of the Holy Spirit.

Now, as children of God, New Creatures in Christ, we still need our Advocate, because we as New Creatures have not yet received our new bodies and will not receive them until the resurrection; and because our earthly bodies are imperfect through the fall we are liable from time to time to be overtaken in a fault. Our need, then, is not to attend Low Mass, or High Mass, but to go directly to the Lord in the name and merit of our Advocate. Thus the Apostle enjoins us saying, "If any man (in the Church) sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous." (I. John ii, 1.) The thought that sin in every instance requires Atonement is quite Scriptural, and the thought that without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins is Scriptural. (Hebrews ix, 22.) But the thought that Christ needs to die more than once is antagonistic to the Scriptures, as we have already seen.

The fact is that good and great people have made serious errors in theology along nearly every line. The errors accumulated for nearly fifteen centuries, and we must not wonder at our slowness in getting fully rid of them. For the past four centuries practically the people of God of all denominations have been coming back to the light of God's Word. Both Catholic and Protestant translations of the Bible are assisting us. We are growing in grace as well as in knowledge. Whatever we shall say of the world, we must believe that God's consecrated people in every denomination are more Christlike, more Godlike, than were their forefathers who, surrounded by the errors of the past, fanatically and devilishly tortured one another in the name of religion—in the name of the Bible which they did not understand.

Nearly nineteen centuries ago our Redeemer mentioned the Abomination of Desolation spoken of by the Prophet Daniel. The Master declared that when this Abomination should be seen those noting it should understand and flee with haste. For long centuries it was supposed that the Great Teacher referred to events which culminated in A. D. 70, in the destruction of Jerusalem. The Abomination was supposed to refer to the carrying of Roman banners within the holy precincts of the Temple. It did seem strange that so comparatively insignificant a matter should have been mentioned by the Lord through Daniel the Prophet, and should also have been referred to by Jesus Himself.

Of late there is another interpretation. It refers our Lord's prophecy specially to the end of this Age and the great "Time of Trouble" soon to come upon the Church and upon Christendom. In this view the Abomination of Desolation signifies a reprehensible doctrine introduced into the Church, the true spiritual Temple—into the "holy place." The doctrine was to be an abomination in the sight of God and would exercise a desolating influence upon everything associated with it. This influence would continue for long centuries before its defiling character would be recognized. Then all so recognizing it should know that the Time of Trouble and the New Dispensation are near, and should make all haste to separate themselves from everything associated with the "Abomination"—they should forsake the error and flee to the mountain heights of Truth, as Lot and his family fled from Sodom.

I share with many other Bible Students the view that the Desolating Abomination mentioned by the Prophet Daniel and by Jesus is the doctrine of the Mass. It was introduced about the middle of the Fourth Century. It has had a corrupting influence since. And now that we see it clearly it is the duty and privilege of all of God's people to get right with God by renouncing that which is so abominable in His sight—the setting aside of the one, perpetual sacrifice of Christ, and the substituting in part therefor of the sacrifices of the Mass, performed many times every day throughout the world.

In Daniel's Prophecy (xi, 31-38) we recognize a brief synoptical history covering the period from the Fourth Century to the days of Napoleon. The Sanctuary of Truth and Christian strength was polluted. The daily Sacrifice, literally the continual sacrifice, was taken away, and the Abomination of Desolation was introduced—the Mass. Then follows a description of the Church nominal, corrupted by flattery and prosperity, and a description of the true saints of God, who, at the same time, were strong and did wonders in support of the Truth. A work of instruction is mentioned, yet the instructors "fell by the sword and by flame and captivity and spoil many days"—many years—yet they were not allowed to fall completely. God helped them "with a little help"—just enough to preserve them from extinction, that He might not be left without witness. This trying and purging continued until "the Time of the End," which, to our understanding, began in 1799. Since then none have fallen through persecution. Outward persecution has been stopped. God's people are seeing more and more clearly the true teaching of His Word—the "golden vessels" of the House of the Lord are being brought back from Babylon and put to their proper uses in the spiritual Temple.

But we are reminded that St. Paul himself wrote of "better sacrifices," in the plural. (Hebrews ix, 23.) We are asked what these refer to, if not to the sacrifices of the Mass.

We reply that St. Paul made no reference to sacrifices being offered by earthly priests. He referred only to those offered by the Great High Priest Himself. None but the High Priest is competent to offer sacrifices acceptable to God. The sacrifices in the type of the Day of Atonement consisted of two—the bullock, which was for Aaron and his household (his sons and his tribe—of Levi), and the Lord's goat, which he offered on behalf of all the people of Israel. In the Antitype, "himself and his house," represents the Body of Christ (the Under-Priesthood, the Royal Priesthood), and the household of faith—the antitypical Levites; and all the people of Israel typified all the world of mankind who ultimately will be brought, through the merit of the precious Atonement, into full relationship with God and to everlasting life.

Of these "better sacrifices," the bullock represented our Lord Jesus, in His own person. The merit of His death is throughout this Age imputed to His true followers—the saintly few, the Royal Priesthood, and to the larger number of less zealous followers represented by the tribe of Levi. All of these were covered, reconciled, blessed, directly through the imputation of Christ's merit, when He appeared in the presence of God for us, after His ascension, Divine acceptance of His merit being manifested by the impartation of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost.

But that was not the completion of Jesus' sacrifice. In the type the bullock was only one part of the sacrifice. Next followed the Lord's goat, which represented the class of Christians addressed by St. Paul in his exhortation, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God." (Romans xii, 1.) During this Gospel Age the followers of Jesus have been privileged to present themselves to Him for sacrifice, but they do not do the sacrificing. He, the spiritual High Priest, has proceeded in His work for more than eighteen centuries, offering up for acceptance by the Father all who have become His true disciples, denying themselves and taking up their cross and following Him faithfully.

All these are represented by the Lord's goat of the Day of Atonement sacrifice (Leviticus 16), and were represented in the Pentecostal blessing. There all of this class were accepted representatively and all of them were devoted to sacrifice, according to the terms Divinely arranged. As soon as the foreordained number constituting the sacrificial Body of Christ shall have been sacrificed, the "better sacrifices" will be complete, and all the members of the Body of the Great High Priest will pass to the Head beyond the veil, into the Most Holy. Then the work of this Gospel Age will be at an end. Then the work of the New Dispensation will begin—the blessing of the world. —Titus ii, 14.

Lutherans as well as Catholics hold that the Eucharist means more than a memorial of the broken body and shed blood of Christ. Catholics hold that they have authority for considering the bread and wine which have been blessed as the actual flesh and the actual blood of Jesus, because, say they, Jesus so treated the matter in the first Eucharist: "On the same night in which He was betrayed, He took bread and brake it, saying, This is My body, which is broken for you. Likewise He took the cup, saying, This is My blood, shed for many for the remission of sins." Hence they reason that if Jesus recognized the matter thus as His actual body and actual blood, so might all of His followers. No, we answer, most evidently Jesus meant, this bread represents My flesh, and this wine represents My blood.

Our Catholic brethren who hold otherwise evidently forget that at that time Jesus' flesh was not yet sacrificed and His blood was not yet shed. Therefore the bread and the wine which He handled could not by any possibility have been more than mere representatives—because He still had the original. How strange that we should have overlooked this so long!

In harmony with what we have already said respecting the "better sacrifices," we note that St. Paul explains that the bread and the wine not only represent and symbolize the flesh and the blood of Jesus, but additionally the flesh and blood of all consecrated people who for centuries have been participating with their Redeemer in the sacrifice of earthly things, that they may be joint-heirs with Him in His glorious Kingdom which is to bless and restore the willing and obedient of mankind. St. Paul's words are, "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion (common union) of the blood of Christ? The Loaf which we break, is it not the communion (common union) of the Body of Christ? For we, being many, are one Loaf and one Body, for we are all partakers of that one Loaf." (I. Corinthians x, 16,17.) Well did Jesus say to His disciples that if they would sit with Him in His Throne, they must share with Him His cup of suffering and must be baptized with His baptism into death.—Matthew xx, 22, 23; Romans vi, 3-5.

'Tis an Ill Wind—

The western farmer with all his interests devoted to grain-raising very often is able to boast bigger crop returns to his old neighbors in the east who have continued to follow the rule of farming that gives live stock raising, fruit-growing, dairying and crop-growing each a place, but occasionally disaster visits his part of the prairie, and he is forced to look east for relief. This spring, when many western farmers found themselves with thousands of bushels of frozen wheat on their hands, the folly of "carrying all their eggs in one basket" must have struck them forcibly, if not painfully. The damaged grain could only be used in one way for a profit. An Ontario farmer, who owns farms both east and west, was one of a number to appreciate the situation. He had the manager of his eastern farm buy up several hundred hogs from the Barrie district and ship them to the prairie to convert the frozen wheat in high priced pork. Why did he not ship the wheat east? The reason is plain. There are so few mixed farmers in the west that the Winnipeg market maintains the highest price for hogs in the Dominion.

The flies that are now in your kitchen and dining room were probably feasting on some indescribable nastiness less than an hour ago, and as a single fly often carries many thousands of disease germs attached to its hairy body, it is the duty of every housekeeper to assist in exterminating this worst enemy of the human race.

Better Dinners.

"Is dinner ready, Mary?"

"Yes, Madam—it is ready, and, I think, a great success."

"Your cooking is improving."

"Well perhaps it is, and I hope so, but really, Mrs. Housewife, I think our new Gurney-Oxford is partly responsible for the success I have had lately. I was never able to cook roasts and fowl so well on our old stove, and as for bread and biscuits, I used to tremble when I went to take them from the oven—they were so often soggy and heavy. Now they are always light and beautifully brown, and, if I do say it myself, something to be proud of."

"That's true, Mary, my husband has said almost the same thing. I'm awfully glad you approve of my choice of a Gurney-Oxford. He approves because of the saving in coal since we got it, also because of the better meals he is getting."

"Indeed he's right, Madam—and it requires so little attention."

"That's fine, Mary. Will you serve dinner in a few minutes please."

COLLEGE BOY PITCHER

Speedy Youngster Picked up by Horace Fogel's Phillies

Equipped with that asset which has made baseball's greatest pitchers—bullet-like speed—John King, a student of Sacred Heart College, Denver, has joined the Philadelphia Nationals.

King is a boy wonder, a pitcher extraordinary. He is an artist of the Amos Rusie, Cy Young, Walter Johnson, Joe Wood type. He began playing ball three years ago, when he went to college. Prior to that time his acquaintance with the game consisted of "playing catch" on the corner lots of his home, Alliance, Neb.

He was 17 when he went to Sacred Heart college. His physique attracted the baseball coach who tried him out as an outfielder in the second team. Within two weeks he was pitching for the varsity. He had nothing but speed and control, but it was sufficient.

JOHN KING

a speedy pitcher signed by the Philadelphia Nationals. Although but 19 years old he is said to be a marvel.

Last year some minor league clubs and one major organization made overtures to the youngster, whose marvelous speed had attracted attention. This summer scouts for Detroit, the Athletics of the American league and the Philadelphia Nationals recommended him. All three clubs offered him contracts, and he accepted that of the old league's representative.

King is a six-footer and weighs 170. He is a fast track man and a splendid football player. Although only 19, no boy ever entered baseball with brighter prospects, and he is one of the few to go straight from school to the majors.

When King's uncanny speed and splendid control were unearthed, he was coached to develop a curve ball. Of his own accord he added to his repertoire a sizzling cross-fire that has baffled every amateur and semi-professional he has faced. In two years he has stocked up with a variety of curves, a slow ball and a spitter, all of which he is said to control wonderfully and to mix with his "smoke" ball in a fashion that stamps him a pitcher with brain as well as a strong arm.

King has been a strike-out pitcher. His poorest performance was nine men in one game. This year he has averaged 15 per game. His best is 20. Contrary to precedent he is a good hitter, his average in school being about .300.

When Horace Fogel sent a contract to King it was necessary for the pitcher's father to sign for him, and it was only after long argument that King, sr., agreed to permit his boy to become a professional player.

A Highly Comic Game of Baseball

One of the worst base ball matches of the season—second only in badness to that which was played two weeks previously between the same teams—occurred on Saturday afternoon between the T. A. S. and S. C. C. nines. It would be a waste of space to describe the performance further than to say that the wretched work of some of the S. C. C. infield players was the principal factor in causing so one-sided a score, namely 20 to 7 in favor of the T. A. S.

The batting order of the teams were as follows:

T. A. S.—Connolly, c. Doran, 3 b. O'Connor, s. s. Connell, 1 b. Brennan, 2 b. McGuire, c. f. Kellihier 3 b. Hogan l. f. Goyer, p.

S. C. C.—Philps, 1 b. Symons, r. f. Smith, 2 b. Harris c. f. Stark, 3 b. Whalen, p. Draycot, s. s. Brown c. Thomas l. f.

The score by innings was:

T. A. S.—0 0 2 1 2 3 2 10 x—20

Messrs F. O'Neil and F. Birch officiated as umpires.

BASEBALL.

LOADING THE SPITBALL

"Putting stuff on a ball to annoy a spitball pitcher," says Frank Smith, the big piano mover, "is an old game, and has existed almost ever since the time when the first spitballer—Elmer Stricklett—began to use the moist, diving curve. Every now and then some fresh comedian, or some unsportmanlike mucker, will anoint the ball with pepper, mustard, liniment, or some other condiment that will sooner or later get in the pitcher's mouth and eyes. Can't help it, you'll understand. You wet your fingers and rub them on the ball; you stick the fingers back in your mouth again, and in two minutes, if the ball has been doctored, you know all about it. I've been caught on the trick two or three times, and now, before I begin to pitch, I always investigate the leather, and renew the investigation when it comes back to me at the start of each new inning.

"Some years ago, though, they caught me on a curious trick, and I sure was lucky to get away with my game. I was pitching at Detroit and for a couple of innings, had been getting along elegantly. Then strange to say, I began to feel a strange, ethereal condition stealing over me. There was a strange odor on my fingers—an odd and singular taste began to permeate my mouth. I couldn't exactly place the taste, and simply concluded that I was only imagining things.

"In another inning the surrounding scenery began to look funny. I distinctly saw the fences begin bowing to each other, and the home plate didn't seem to be tacked down the way it should. 'This is queer,' thought I, but I didn't even think to give the ball an examination. Just went right on pitching. Then the home plate began to bob up and down. 'Foolish ball park this,' thought I, 'where they don't have the plate stationary.' I gave three bases on balls in the next few minutes, trying to pitch 'em somewhere near that dodging plate.

"Coming up to bat in our half of the next session, I saw a ball the size of a walnut coming up to speak to me. I dodged it, and got hit a noble wallop in the ribs. Evrything was wandering and whirling round and round as I went to first, but I figured this must be due to the biff I had just received. Somebody batted me around; I found that vanishing home plate, pounded it with my heels to be sure it was there, and scored my run.

"When I went back to the slab, I was annoyed to find that there were two batsmen at the plate instead of one I was going to speak to the umpire about it, but feared he wouldn't stand for any conversation, for his head was jumping back and forth and once or twice left his body for a little excursion. So I pitched beween the two batsmen, and, by using a lot of steam, struck them both out on the same ball. Then three batsmen came to the plate, all shaking their sticks at me. This was too much, and, in a fit of rage, I threw right at the middle one—and the other two just swung in the air.

"Right here, the umpire interfered, seized the ball, smelled it, and going to the Detroit bench, said a lot of things to them. A new ball came out in a few minutes. I saw the fences and scenery go back their proper places; only one batter came up, and the home plate was properly nailed down. Between innings, some of the boys explained it to me. Somebody had put whiskey on the ball. Being a total abstainer, I hadn't tumbled—and the whiskey had stewed me to the gills, getting me drunker and drunker with each succeeding inning. Some class to that trick, wasn't there?"

Sea Birds' Sanctuary

A committee has purchased and handed over to the National Trust a portion of the seaboard of North Norfolk at Blakeney Point to be conserved for all time. It consists of several hundred acres of saltings, muds, and marshes ringed round with sandhills. The point is the sanctuary of hundreds of sea birds, protected during the nesting season, while the saltings are adapted for the study of marine plants.

Bird's Nest in a Skull

It has just been discovered that a bird has built its nest in a human skull in a vault beneath a church at Rothwell, Northamptonshire. The bird must have entered the vault through the ventilator, and after selecting the largest cranium among the rows of skulls on the shelves proceeded to enlarge a hole which had probably been made originally by a battle-axe. The vault was discovered 200 years ago when a digger fell into it accidentally.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

DEMANDS ARBITRATION

Britain Will Insist on Taking Canal Dispute to Hague.

Official Announcement That the Recent Panama Toll Bill Passed by the U. S. Congress Will Be Protested Under the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty and Full Arbitration Asked Under Root-Bryce Treaty.

London, Sept. 3.—It is officially announced that the British Government will make a formal demand upon the United States Government for arbitration of its claim that the Panama Canal Toll Act, as recently passed by the United States Congress, violates the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

Nothing definitely is known here beyond the brief official announcement that the formal demand for arbitration would be made, but it is believed that instructions already are en route to the British Embassy at Washington concerning the situation.

The British demand will be made under the arbitration convention of 1908. Great Britain's contention will be that the question at issue does not affect the vital interests, independence or honor of the United States, and that therefore it is clearly within the scope of the 1908 convention, since the matter to be arbitrated is not an act of congress, but an interpretation of Article 3 of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

Recent advices from Washington indicate that the United States Government, should it hold firm in its determination not to arbitrate, will take refuge in Article 2 of the Root-Bryce Arbitration treaty of 1908.

That article makes it a prerequisite to actual arbitration that both sides "shall conclude a special agreement defining clearly the matter in dispute," and this must be approved by the Senate. So that if that body takes the same view next winter of the predominant rights of America in the use of the canal, as it did last session, it may prevent arbitration by declining to accept any "special agreement" satisfactory to Great Britain.

Taft Surprised.

Beverley, Mass., Sept. 3.—The announcement that Great Britain will appeal to The Hague Tribunal to settle its claim of violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty by the Panama Canal act came as a surprise to President Taft. He had heard reports that such an appeal was contemplated, but was of the opinion that the matter would be taken up in the usual diplomatic way.

The President was not ready last night to make an expression about the appeal to The Hague. He had no official word from the State Department, and did not expect to consider the case until he reaches Washington Wednesday.

Five Killed In Wreck.

North Bay, Sept. 3.—Five dead and ten severely injured was the toll taken by an accident on the Canadian Pacific near Mattawa on Saturday morning, when a work train engaged in ballasting the tracks, while running caboose first, collided with a fast through freight train.

The dead and injured, with the exception of Conductor Thos. Duncan, were all residents of Mattawa. Conductor Duncan was a young, unmarried man, residing with his mother and sister at North Bay.

No blame is attached to the crew of the fast freight, as it was the duty of the men in charge of the work train to give the freight a clear track. The casualty list is:

Dead—Thomas Duncan, conductor of the work train; Thomas O'Keefe, Feliz Chenier, August Desjardines, and Ernest Chenier, laborers.

Injured—Thomas McManus, foreman of work train; Peter Morrison, brakeman; Wm. Roach, fireman; Sigfried Joudoin, Adelard Bertrand, Damas Chenier, Matthew Cyr, Alfred Bangs, Neil McCalpin, Clarence McCalpin.

The injured are all doing well in Mattawa hospital, with every prospect of recovery.

More Pay For Teachers.

St. Catharines, Sept. 3.—Hon. Dr. Pyne was the guest of the public and high school board on Labor Day, when he officially opened the new $40,000 Victoria public school, in the north-eastern section of the city. In the evening he officiated at the opening of the new assembly hall and gymnasium erected at the Collegiate Institute. He spoke to large audiences on both occasions, recalling difficulties which he encountered as a member of the Board of Education at Toronto. He also spoke on the present scarcity of qualified teachers in Ontario, and stated that the movement now on foot would grant them better remuneration in future. Mayor Merritt and the members of the school board also spoke on both occasions.

Girl's Death Suspicious.

Goderich, Sept. 3.—Crown Attorney Seager and county officials are investigating the death of a young woman near Lucknow.

It is alleged that she was in a delicate condition and died in convulsions.

The circumstances surrounding the case are of a serious nature, it is stated by the officials, though, owing to the fact that no ante-mortem statement was made, there may be difficulty in bringing anyone to justice.

Found Husband Dead In Bed.

Brockville, Sept. 3.—When Mrs. Robert Taber of Athens awoke Sunday morning she was horrified to find her husband dead in bed beside her. He was apparently in his usual health on retiring and awoke only once, to complain of feeling cold. He was employed as clerk on works on the construction of the new postoffice in the village.

Taber was a retired farmer, who had spent of the whole of his life in that district.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 2.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Aug. 31 were 1600 cattle, 3600 sheep and lambs, 2650 hogs and 700 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale were 1000 cattle, 2500 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 400 calves.

An easier feeling prevailed in the market for cattle today, and prices, as compared with a week ago, show a decline of 25c per hundred pounds, which was due to the more liberal supplies of common to good stock, but really choice steers were by no means plentiful, and if it had not been for the arrivals of a few good loads of northwest ranch cattle buyers would have had some difficulty in filling their wants with this class, as the quality of the cattle coming from Ontario are only grading from common to medium.

The top prices realized for picked lots of choice steers were $6.75 to $7, and sales of full loads of good cattle were made at $6, $6.25 and $6.50, while other loads of fair stock, with some oxen in them, sold for $5.50 to $5.75 per 100 pounds.

A feature of the small-meat trade was the active demand for lambs from both butchers and packers, and prices advanced 25c per 100 pounds, with sales of Ontario stock at $6 to $6.25. The tone of the market for sheep was also stronger.

The tone of the market for hogs continues easy.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $7; do., medium, $4.75 to $5.75; do., common, $2.75 to $4.25; canners, $2.00 to $3; do., choice cows, $4.75 to $5; do., medium, $4.25 to $4.50; do., bulls, $3.50 to $4.50; milkers, choice, each, $60 to $70; do., common and medium, each, $40 to $50; springers, $30 to $35.

Sheep, ewes, $4 to $4.25; bucks and culls, $3.50 to $3.75. Lambs, $5.75 to $6.25.

Hogs, f.o.b., $8.25 to $8.50.

Calves, $5 to $10.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

U. S. Marines Killed.

Panama, Sept. 3.—Reliable information from Managua received here is to the effect that two American marines have been killed there. The 800 marines sent from Philadelphia on board the transport Prairie for service in Nicaragua, arrived at Balbao from Colon Friday afternoon, and camped on the docks there. They transferred their equipment to the cruiser California by tug and lighters Sunday morning.

The California arrived Saturday, but stayed outside the bay, as her captain after consultation with the port and canal-zone authorities, decided not to dock the vessel for fear that she might touch bottom.

BINDERS BUSY AGAIN.

Sunny Weather Brings Joy to the Western Farmer.

Winnipeg, Sept. 3.—The weather map of the Canadian prairie west for last week was ideal, almost every district reporting brighter skies and drying winds while on neither Saturday nor Sunday night did the temperature drop below 34. As a consequence, farmers were putting in a busy Labor Day and the whirr of the binder, after practically a week's suspension through dampness, is again heard in every district. Every indication points to the weather as set fair, and if this is maintained during the current week, a tremendous hole will be cut in standing grain.

The difficulty is to find labor sufficient to throw it up into stooks, and with sheaves lying on the fields farmers will be little better off than if the grain was left standing. Practically every available unemployed man in this city has now been drafted out and the Labor Day parade yesterday morning was remarkable for the absence of the usual crowd of idle hangers-on to the skirts of organized labor.

More harvest trains are expected from the east to-day and to-morrow, and these will be rapidly distributed. Owing to high wages and great demand for labor south of the international boundary, the quota of harvesters furnished from there has been disappointingly small.

To Get Men From U. S.

Ottawa, Sept. 3.—The Government is endeavoring to get men to harvest the western crops from the United States. The maritime provinces, which in other years supplied armies of harvesters, are not responding as well as expected this year. The same is true of Ontario and Quebec. The immigration authorities are therefore arranging to bring hands from across the border.

Dispensation from the usual regulations governing the Alien Labor Laws are being temporarily brought into force, and special low rates for harvesters are being secured on U. S. railways. It is hoped that in this way sufficient harvest hands can be secured.

RAIN HURTS PARADES

Labor Turnout Not So Large as Was Expected.

Montreal Has Ten Thousand In Line and Ottawa Breaks All Previous Records With Four Thousand—Toronto Falls In Expectations on Account of Unpromising Weather—Other Cities.

Toronto, Sept. 3.—Yesterday was a big day in most Canadian cities, and the working-man was very much in the ascendant. Rain interfered with the processions in some places but as a general rule the turnout of union men was well up to the mark and the picnics which took up most of the day were greatly enjoyed. Montreal had hoped for a parade of 30,000 persons but on account of the rain and the muddy streets only 10,000 marched. Ottawa's procession broke all records with four thousand in line.

The Toronto parade from Queen's Park to the Exhibition grounds turned out about 4,000 members of unions to testify to their loyalty to the cause, and they were cheered by probably 100,000 people along the line of march. The procession, while scarcely including one-fourth of the members of local unions, was equal to that of last year. Notwithstanding that the weather was moist and momentarily threatening to become exceedingly wet, the processionists marched unhesitatingly to their destination. Fortunately the rain held off, except for a gentle sprinkling.

Downpour at Guelph.

Guelph, Sept. 3—Under the auspices of the Iron Moulders' Union, the Labor Day celebration here, while considerably dampened by the heavy downpour all morning, proved very successful. The morning events were cancelled, as was the horse race matinee in the afternoon, but the Westinghouse football team and the sports and band concerts in the afternoon and evening were well attended.

Weather Cleared at London.

London, Ont., Sept. 3.—The London trades and labor men paraded to Queen's Park yesterday, where a long program of sports were held. It rained in the morning, threatening to spoil the day, but before noon the sun came out and apart from the heat the weather was delightful.

Big Parade at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 3.—The Labor Day celebration here passed all previous records, attracting no fewer than 4,000 trade unionists, who with their different floats, streamers and uniforms, made a picturesque and brilliant procession. The parade took over half an hour to pass a given point on its route through the heart of the city, and when eventually it lined up in Cartier square at midday an enormous crowd was present to witness the judging.

In the afternoon an excellent program of athletics sports was run off at the south side park before a great crowd.

Gotham's Big Parade.

New York, Sept. 3.—Under grey skies which threatened rain at any moment, more than 30,000 men and women, in floats, in carriages and on foot, passed up Fifth avenue yesterday in New York's annual Labor Day parade. The Woman's Trade Union League and the Woman Workers, affiliated with it, were conspicuous, as were delegations from the striking furriers and the striking cloakmakers.

Before the line got under way union representatives rode up and down seeing that none but union-shod horses were ridden or driven.

Kingston Has Picnic.

Kingston, Sept. 3.—Kingston labor men celebrated the day with a monster picnic at Lake Ontario, where a program of sports were carried out. Two baseball matches and a baby show were special features. There was no parade. The weather was fine, although dark clouds hovered over the city all day.

Berlin Turn-Out Abandoned.

Berlin, Ont., Sept. 3.—Owing to a heavy rainstorm yesterday morning the annual Labor Day parade was not held. The weather cleared at about 11 o'clock and the 29th regimental band paraded to the auditorium, where games of baseball scheduled were cancelled. Most of the ball players are en route to their homes, the Canadian League season being over.

Few Clouds on Labor Horizon.

Ottawa, Sept. 3.—Labor Day this year, according to the Labor Department, saw fewer strikes throughout industrial Canada than the holiday has witnessed for several years past. The industrial disturbances of July were not evident in August and at the present time there is not an industrial dispute or strike of any great import in the entire country.

The most important, perhaps, in the difference in the Porcupine district which involves a thousand men, an arbitration board, has been appointed, however, and an amicable settlement is looked forward to.

Disastrous Storm In Fruit Belt.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 3.—When the worst electric storm in months broke over the Niagara district Sunday, several barns, outbuildings, and trees were struck by lightning. The telephone, telegraph and electric wires were damaged and fruit also suffered considerably.

London Hippodrome Robbed.

London, Sept. 3.—Burglars secured booty amounting to $5,000, when they broke into the hippodrome music hall Sunday night and burst a safe. They had previously chloroformed the watchman on duty, who remained unconscious for four hours.

Lightning Destroys Valuable Barn.

Melbourne, Ont., Sept. 3.—During the heavy electrical storm that passed over this village yesterday morning the barn of Albert Holmes was struck by lightning and the barn with all the season's crops was destroyed.

MORE CONSIDERATION.

Canada Will Be Better Treated by the Privy Council.

Ottawa, Sept. 3.—One direct result of the visit to London of the Canadian ministers will be that the judicial committee of the Imperial Privy Council will give more time and attention to the consideration of Canadian appeals.

It has been felt for some time that the growing number and importance of Canadian cases, couple with the recent protests in the Canadian press at the decisions in a number of important Dominion appeals, warranted a somewhat closer knowledge of conditions in this country by members of the judicial committee.

It is understood that the Canadian Minister of Justice while in London had an informal conference with regard to this matter with Chancellor Haldane, who expressed every desire to do all that was possible to meet the wishes of the Canadian people.

Mr. Doherty, however, heard nothing of the alleged proposal to appoint a special and permanent Canadian representative on the Imperial board.

Not to Extend Steamship Service.

Berlin, Sept. 3.—Representatives of the Hamburg-American Line here deny that any further extension of the company's steamship service to Canada is in contemplation. The company has been running steamships twice a month to Montreal and Quebec for a number of years, but its standing agreements with the Canadian Pacific and other companies, it is said, would prevent it from increasing its present service.

The Connoisseur's Surprise.

An amusing story at the expense of a certain high French official is told by a Paris contemporary. He was showing one of his friends the magnum opus of his collection of pictures, a landscape of the environs of Paris, and depicting the city as it was in Courbet's time. There could be no doubt as to the authenticity of the picture, for it bore the signature of Courbet in red. The visitor pointed out that the horizon was dirty and would be improved by the application of a cleansing liquid. A bottle was requisitioned and some of the chemical gently applied with a brush. Then was seen a delightful little sketch of the Eiffel tower. It may be observed that Courbet, who was associated in the destruction of the Vendome column, died about a dozen years before the tower was erected.

RAIN COULD NOT REPRESS POPULAR ENTHUSIASM

The prizes were: First, $100.00; second $50.00; third $25.00, and $10 to the company coming the longest distance to compete.

The time keepers were J. Borbridge and J. V. Jenkins of Belleville, and the judges Mr. Coborne of Trenton and Chief Campbell of the local department. Mr. Jones of Belleville officiated as starter.

DARKTOWN RACE.

The Darktown Department race was won by Harvey Smith of this city. The race was over a distance of 100 yards, and was run in 14⅕ seconds, which is good time, considering that the runner had on top boots and the track was very muddy.

TUG-OF-WAR.

A tug of war was engaged in between Deseronto and Belleville, being won by Belleville after some little tussle from their neighbor fire-fighters.

HORSE RACES.

Never before in Belleville were harness horse races contested on a track so deep in mud as was the case yesterday. It was a veritable quagmire, yet the well trained horses managed to plough through it in highly creditable time. Bad as it was at the start, it continued to grow worse, owing to frequent showers, and a heavy downpour which fell about 5 p. m. shortly before the last heat of the 2.18 class was called, rendered it more fit for a boat race than a horse race. And yet so great was the interest taken in the events by the crowd of not less than 4500 that the majority of them remained until the end.

THE 2.30 CLASS.

This race, in which there were four starters, was the first called by starter Carnew. In the first heat the only real contestants were Brino V. and Major Direct, the others being beaten off.

The second heat was a repetition of the first.

In the third heat Brino V. broke twice and Major Direct won, the others as before. It was a hard race, the time being four seconds faster than in the second heat.

Previous to the fourth heat the heavy downpour spoken of above, occurred, and under the circumstances the drivers were asked if they were willing to divide the money as the horses were then placed, but Williamson refused and the race had to go on.

The heat was one of the most hardly contested that was ever seen on a local track. Major Direct held a slight lead until within fifty yards of the wire, when Vasseau, by a well-timed effort, landed his charge in front by a nose, amid the cheers of the crowd.

The summary is as follows:—

Brino V., James Vasseau, Trenton	1	1	2	1
Major Direct, G. Williamson, Toronto	2	2	1	2
Hazel Brook, H. Morin, Frankford	3	3	3	3
Brino Bars, Dr. Benson, Napanee	4	4	4	dr

Time—2.47, 2.51, 2.50, 2.50.

2.18 CLASS.

First heat—Jimmy Direct led from the start and won by a length. Hester Schuyler had plenty of speed, but was unsteady and broke twice when looking likely to take the lead.

In the second heat Jimmy Direct won again, but the other two changed positions, as per summary.

The third heat finished the race, but Hester Schuyler, going steadily this time, was a good second, Bourbon Brook third, and Lady Sphinx last.

Summary:—

Jimmy Direct, G. Teal, Wooler	1	1	1
Bourbon Brook, W. Elmhurst, Keene	3	2	3
Hester Schuyler, Ashley Stock Farm, Foxboro	4	3	2
Lady Sphinx, G. Powell, Belleville	2	4	4

Time—2.45, 2.45, 2.45.

The officials who conducted the races were:—

Judges—Sam Curry and Dr. Dolan.

Timers—John Power and John Haslett.

Starter—Wm. Carnew.

BASEBALL.

The Ontarios and T. A. S. played an exhibition game of baseball, which resulted in a tie, 11 to 11. The ground was very rough and wet, which accounted for the many errors on both sides. Both Brennan and Ince pitched a good game of ball. The features of the game were catches made by Hogan and Knott. Both were indeed difficult fly balls into the crowd. The line-up was:—

T. A. S.—Doran l.f., Kelleher 3b., Connolly c., O'Connor s.s., Brennan p., Hogan r.f., Champagne 2b., Goyer c.f.

Ontarios—Ketcheson 2b., Ince p., Mills c., Gerow 1b., Watkin 3b., Simmons c.f., Goyer s.s., Knott l.f., Newton r.f.

Mr. Charles Bawden, manager of the T. A. S., umpired the game.

NOTES.

So great a success despite such weather ensures the permanency of a Labor Day celebration in Belleville.

Good advertising was the chief cause of the gratifying result. Nothing like printers' ink to spread the glad tidings and draw a crowd.

There was no lack of music at the fair grounds. The organizations included the Rube Band, the Mohawk Band, composed of a bass drum, a snare drum and a fife, Picton Band, the Trenton Band, the Oddfellows' Band and the 15th Regiment Band.

Mr. C. P. McConnell, Second Vice-President of the Brighton Fair, was present and disposed of twenty-five membership tickets for that organization.

The gallant old horse Bourbon Brook, which won second money in the 2.18 class, is eighteen years old. He won a race on the ice track here several years ago.

All the prize winners were paid off at the Molsons' bank at 8 p. m.

The bands continued to play on Front Street in the evening for the entertainment of the visitors who thronged the street until a late hour.

Congratulations to all who took an active part in organizing and in managing the celebration.

WEDDING BELLS.

STEWERT—McATHERN

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stewert, Turriff on Tuesday August 27, the marriage was solemnized of their daughter Mildred Jeneva to Mr. Whylie McAthern also of Turriff.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Ruffley of Bancroft. The bridesmaid was Miss Eva Letts and the best man was Mr. John Stewert, brother of the bride.

The bride looked beautiful attired in a gown of blue voile with white silk trimmings. The bridesmaid wore a white dress in which she looked charming.

After the ceremony the bride and groom and guests numbering about forty sat down to a well prepared dinner.

The many beautiful presents received by the bride and groom show the esteem in which they were held by their many friends.

Among the guests we noticed were some from Fort Stewert, Bancroft and Herman. We all wish the young couple a happy and prosperous future.

BROWN—GILBERT

At high noon on Wednesday, Aug 28th, a very charming house wedding was solemnized, when Miss Hattie Irene Gilbert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gilbert, fifth line Thurlow, was united in marriage with Mr. Lewis Brown, son of Mr. C. A and Mrs. Brown of Murray, Ont. The drawing room where the ceremony was performed was a bower of flowers. Beneath a very pretty arch of flowers and evergreen Rev. S. A. Kemp tied the Nuptial knot. The bride and groom entered the drawing room to the strains of a beautiful wedding march played by her cousin Miss Ogla Garrison.

The bride looked very pretty in a gown of ivory satin and tulle veil held in place by cream rose buds, she wore the groom's gift a handsome gold bracelet. The bridesmaid was Miss Lena Gilbert sister of the bride and wore pink silk and both carried sheafs of white and pale pink rose buds and sweet peas. The brother of the groom acted as best man. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a crescent brooch and a pearl pin to the best man.

After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room where many good things were spread and served by several young friends of the bride.

Many friends from out of town were present. The gifts were many and handsome which proved the love and esteem in which the bride was held.

Amid many good wishes the happy couple left for a trip to Toronto and will on their return live in Murray The bride's going away gown was of blue shot silk with hat to match.

CLEANING DOOR HANDLES

Take a good-sized piece of cardboard, cut a hole so that it will just fit on the "stem" of the door handle. Then cut it up one side from the bottom to the hole. Before cleaning the handle, slip the cardboard under the handle so that the two ends meet. You will not then spoil the surrounding paint or rub off the varnish.

Police Court Notes

Considering the immense crowd of outsiders in town yesterday there was very little requiring attention at the hands of the police.

Some drunks, five in number, appeared before the court this morning. Two of the number left $10 and costs towards the paving of Front Street—perhaps some day.

One of the drunks was a regular croesus—a cattle buyer from the country, picked up near Allen's coal yard. Upon his person was a sum of money amounting to nearly $300.

Calls were received from Church and Wharf Streets, where some fights were reported to be in progress; also from the C.N.R. station, where a Napanee crowd were causing a disturbance.

GRAND TRUNK SYSTEM NEWS ITEMS

One of the engineers employed in surveying a route for the Southern New England Railway in the State of New Hampshire when interviewed the other day, made the following candid statement with regard to the policy of the road: "grades," he remarked, "are of much more importance than small towns and villages and it has been said by those in authority that they do not care if the railway does not have a station in New Hampshire if it can only get through the State. The development of New Hampshire, or its local business, is the last thing which the company has in mind. Under the terms by which the Grand Trunk is subsidized it is compelled to deliver its export freight to Canadian ports when they are open, but the imports of Boston will furnish some rich pickings for westbound traffic, and this they have an eye on.

Passenger officials are in receipt of a report from Western Saskatchewan which states that harvesting is now becoming general there and that some of the heaviest yields of oats and flax in the history of the district are being reaped. "Many oat crops", it reads, "will average around and over 100 bushels to the acre. Early sown flax will easily average 22 bushels, but late sown flax may lower the average yield of this grain to 16 bushels per acre. The early varieties of wheat, such as Marquis and Huron, should run around 40 bushels to the acre. Early sown and summer fallow crops of wheat will also be excellent. In fact there are practically no crops which will be below 22 bushels. Late grain is ripening rapidly. The labor problem is causing anxiety. Those harvesters who have arrived have been quickly snapped up and government and railroad assistance is being requested to rush in a big supply of men.

Preparations are being made at Battleford, Sask., for a monster celebration in honor of the Grand Trunk Pacific's entry into that town early in September that will also include the formal opening of a handsome new town hall costing $50,000.

Notwithstanding the fact that Melville has the largest yards in the prairie section of the Grand Trunk Pacific, west of Winnipeg, it has now been found necessary to increase their capacity, while six stalls are to be added to the round house at that point.

There arrived recently at Prince Rupert the largest shipment of creosoted piles ever sent so far north These are to be used for bracing the piles of the new government dry dock in course of construction and made up a total shipment of nearly 500,000 feet of lumber.

The annual meetings of several Grand Trunk enterprises will be held during the month of September as follows:—Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, Sept. 17th, in the general offices of the company, McGill Street, Montreal; Grand Trunk Pacific Branch Lines Co. and Pacific Northern and Omineca Railway, Sept. 18th in the same place; Ottawa Terminals Railway Co. Sept. 24th, in the offices of the company's Central Station, Ottawa.

A party numbering 35, among whom are a number of French Canadians thus re-patriated from the United States, has been organized by Father Giroux and will leave Montreal over the Grand Trunk Railway for Edmonton on Sept. 3rd. From Edmonton they will travel to Morinville in a connecting train.

SHALL I WIN HER?

THE STORY OF A WANDERER

By JAMES GRANT

Author of "The Romance of War," "Under the Red Dragon," "Fairer than A Fairy," etc.

"Have you a father or mother in your home beyond the sea?" asked Sandilli.

"I have neither, to rejoice for my return or to sorrow for my death."

"They are dead?"

"Yes—years ago—dead."

"That is well," said Sandilli smiling.

"Why, great chief?"

"Because you may with a lighter heart dwell among the Koussie."

"Dwell here?" I repeated faintly.

"Yes. Remain with me, and I shall give you a wife to make your bosom glad, to hoe the maiz for you, and cook for you in your kraal."

My heart sank at this prospect, which seemed to indicate a troublesome captivity.

"Is it true," asked one of the Inkosi, who proved to be Hermanus a chief of the Gaika tribe, "that the great chief of your nation is a woman?"

"Quite true," said I.

And then all who heard me laughed with surprise and scorn.

"Are her flocks and herds as numerous as mine?" asked Sanlilli proudly.

"Perhaps not."

"Wah, wah!" cried all, clapping their hands and striking their shields at this admission of her Majesty's inferiority.

"Are her warriors and people as numerous.

"More numerous by far."

"How far so?"

"They are as numerous as the leaves in the forest, or the blades of grass in the wild karoo."

Utter disbelief was expressed on hearing this.

"Are they all brave, like the Tortoises?" (meaning the 74th) asked Sandilli after a pause.

"Yes, all."

"It matters not—we shall fight them," exclaimed the Gaika chief. "What say you, Caffre warriors, shall we not again go forth and fight these feeble white men? Let us kill them all, even up to the slopes of the Table Mountain, and take captive their fair women and girls, making spoil of all they possess, until the last of them is driven into that accursed sea by the aid of which they first came among us!"

"Wah, wah, wah!" cried a thousand voices, while the steel-headed assegais clattered on the shields of tough bull's hide.

But when the clamor subsided, Sandilli shook his head with something of doubt and dejection in his air.

"Chiefs and councillors," said he, "the white sand never rises in clouds so high as when it is just on the eve of being crushed by a tempest of rain. So it may be with our people in this war against the white chief, who is a woman. A year or more may see us completely crushed. We shall fight many a battle ere that time of sorrow comes, yet we may fight in vain, for have we not already been sorely defeated, even here at the Amatolas? It was destined that we should be so, and if the armed tide of the white men must roll beyond even the banks of the Orange River, it is the will of the white man's God, and so His will be done," said the poor savage, with a kind of piety that was completely unintentional.

The whole of Sandilli's force, which I have stated as being many thousands strong, now prepared to fall back towards the valley of the Water Kloof and the Heights of Kroome, leaving the remains of the Doctor to their fate.

Not far from these an old Caffre, whose necklace of tigers' teeth—a kind of savage order of knighthood showed that he was a brave fellow, lay dying with three bayonet wounds in his bare brawny chest.

I attempted to place a bandage over these.

"Touch me not," said he spurning me scornfully. "Go, go, and leave me to die in peace. Think you that an aged lion cares for the tending of the jackal."

So he, too, was left to the beaks of the asvogels, as the whole horde departed in a north easterly direction, taking me with hem.

All the chiefs were mounted, and Sandilli, in pursurance of his friendship, gave me the horse of Pitoi, son of Vonga, who had fallen in action with us during the previous day. Thus the hope of escape began to gather in my heart as we rode on, though every hour of that long and weary day added to the difficulty of the attempt by increasing the distance that lay between my friends and me.

CHAPTER XXXI.

After many halts, doubts, delays, and again setting forth, Sandilli separated himself from his army, and with a few select mounted warriors escorted me to remote part of the Amatola country, near the source of the Upper Keiskamma River, where, in a place called the Gulu Valley, stood the Wolf's Den, his own farm.

Near this were the luxurian gardens of a chief named Sogu, famous—or rather infamous—in this war as the slayer of all the European military villagers of the neighboring district.

The house was not unlike a snug Boer's farm, and had probably once been such. It was furnished with a heterogeneous collection of furniture—ornaments and utensils plundered from many of the Dutch and English kraals that now lay in ruins elsewhere.

Here I found myself many miles—some hundreds, so far as I could reckon—from succor or means of information, deprived of a horse, of arms, and all means of escape, for a chosen party of Sandilli's men, some twenty in number, who were given to me ostensibly as an escort proved in reality to be my watchful guards, and I was their prisoner.

Every movement of mine was watched by their stealthy black eyes and every time I went near the stables where their horses were kept near the garden of the kraal, or a great clump of bamboo-like reeds some thirty feet high which enclosed in on two sides—in short, if I crossed the hreshold of the door at least three of them attended me with musket, kife, and assegai, all of which they handled very significantly.

A week passed away thus, and as I was kept in total ignorance of the movements of our troops who had marched to Somerset and made a night attack on the Heights of Kroome, I began to find my captivity as intolerable as the food with which I was supplied proved odious, notwithstanding my past experiences as a hunter and trader? There were the flesh of the porcupine roasted in hot wood ashes in his skin—minus the quills of course—jerked elephant, tough wild boar steaks and so forth but with plenty of Cape smoke wine however.

Even in my own room, which was furnished with an ample but old-fashioned Dutch bed having a heavy wooden frame laced across with strips of cowhide, and which proved a very comfortable couch to a campaigner, I knew that I was watched as the woolly head and glittering assegai of a Caffre sentinel were always visible from the window outside all night

Sandilli, whom I had not seen for an entire week, now came to visit me, and reminding him of the service I had done him, I begged that he would restore me to liberty—give me a musket, a few rounds of ammunition, a horse and permit me to depart. Knowing forest life as I did, I had no fear of making my way alone to General Somerset's force.

But Sandilli shook his head, and was grave and even stern in his manner, for during the week he had been absent from the Gulu Valley the Caffres suffered severely when the 74th Highlanders attacked the Water Kloof Heights, and matters were looking gloomy along the whole frontier, so the wily old savage chief was less than ever disposed to part with me, or to abandon his schemes.

Relinquishing for the time all hope of bending him to my views, I then implored him to discover if possible the fate of two white women who, were in the hands of his people, or those of Mark Graaf. I knew not which

"Two white women were carried off by him from a Dutch lager village, aided by the Cape Corps."

"Tis they!" I exclaimed.

"And they are now at his kraal among the mountains," continued Sandilli.

"Do you know the place?" I asked eagerly.

"Perfectly."

"Is it far from here?"

"Many Dutch miles. But what then?" asked Sandilli frowning, while adjusting his dagha pipe.

INDEPENDENT FORESTERS.

Those at the Independent Order of Foresters' tent on the Exhibition Grounds have lots to tell of the benefits of membership, and a visit to Society Row should be profitable to anyone looking into fraternal insurance. Many Foresters have already called and entered their names on the roll-book at the I.O.F. headquarters.

It is most interesting to meet the many friends and hear them speak of their enthusiasm towards the Order, and how delighted they are with the wonderful achievements that the Hon. E. G. Stevenson, their Supreme Chief Ranger, has made.

A most interesting story is told by the many members of the great comfort that is brought to the homes through their orphanage branch, they having under their care over seven hundred fatherless little children. Nearly fifty of these children are being cared for, educated and clothed at the Orphans' Home, a most beautiful spot, where every comfort is given them. Some of their children have proved to be the brightest scholars in the whole county of Halton. One of their boys, who was left without father or mother when seven years of age, has received his schooling and care at the Orphanage, and he has been able to win the honors of the whole county. The members are naturally proud of their children, and it makes one feel good to hear them boast of that great work, and that work itself should appeal to the many people who have not yet interested themselves in the work that the Independent Order of Foresters are doing. It is well worth a man's time and money to interest himself in such a grand and noble work.

Another branch of the Order, and a very important one, is their Sanatoriums, they having one erected in the Adirondack Mountains, where they have treated over one hundred and seven patients. This treatment is given to the members free of cost; every comfort is granted the patient, and none of the expense is taken from his sick benefits, which he is entitled to receive during the time he is afflicted. No wonder that the members of the Independent Order of Foresters are so enthusiastic, when they are engaged in such missionary work.

A hearty invitation is tendered every Forester on the Fair Grounds to make a visit to this tent, where they will receive a most cordial welcome and have every question answered regarding the workings of the institution.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

A Superb Cornetist Comes to Town

He blew into town last week from no one knew whence. He had just twenty-five cents in his pocket. When questioned regarding his prospects he answered that he purposed to enjoy himself so long as his "wad" held good. One of the band boys ascertained that the stranger was more or less familiar with the cornet, and he was secured for service on decoration day, last Wednesday, and also retained for Labor Day. He proved to be one of the most brilliant cornetists this old town has listened to in many a day, his execution attracting attenion whenever the Oddfellow's Band rendered a selection. He has circuited the counry in the circus line and knows his business. The boys should arrange to keep him permanently.

One Hundred Year Lawsuit Settled

MADRID, Sept. 3.—A lawsuit which has lasted 100 years has just been decided at Granada. In concerns nothing less than the ownership rights over Le Generaliffe and the magnificent palace, La Ahlambra, with its beautiful gardens.

The Mayor of Granada over 100 years ago gave wrongful possession of this property to the ancestors of the present Marquis Campotejar.

The present action was begun a century ago, with the object of obliging those persons to return the property to the State.

Decision has now been pronounced by the Salvador high court, declaring that El Generaliffe and La Ahlambra belong to the royal family, and ordering their immediate return to the State. The decision also calls upon Marquise Campotejar to pay the entire value of the fruit grown on the property from the time when Mayor Grimaldi handed over the lands to his ancestors, and also to pay the costs of the action during the century.

Mother Found Her Boy Dead

BRIDGETOWN, N.S., Sept. 3.—Wilbur Young shot himself dead at Bridgetown last evening while his mother was at church. After service Mrs. Young read for an hour before retiring. It occurred to her that her son Wilbur was very still in his room, where she had left him on going to church. Mrs. Young went up stairs and found a light burning. Wilbur was kneeling by the bedside, with hands and head down. A foot away was a revolver. She reached towards him and said, "Wilbur, why have you gone to sleep in that position?" Then taking him by the shoulder, she turned him around, when he fell to the floor. A slight examination showed that her son had been shot through the heart. Mrs. Young rushed out of doors crying, "O, my God, Wilbur is shot, run for a doctor." The coroner's verdict was accidental death by a shot from a revolver in the hands of the deceased. Young was 35.

They Want to Arbitrate Claims

MONTREAL, Sept. 3.—The descendants of the French Seigneurs, the noblemen who were granted much of the land in Quebec Province under the French regime prior to 1763, and who represented the Crown Prince in several ancient treaties at the time of the cession of Canada to Great Britain, have met here and determined to demand that their grievances be arbitrated before The Hague Tribunal. They claim that they have been despoiled of lands in this Province which they should still possess by virtue of the treaties referred to, and that their claims should not be argued before any British court, as they represent the Crown of France, and only some international tribunal of arbitration is competent to deal with them.

Their latest move is to draw up a memorial to the Secretary of State of the United States, asking that his Government insist that their case be dealt with at The Hague before any arbitration is permitted in the Panama Canal case, as their claims antedate those of the British Government in the Panama Canal matter.

Most Canadians have been living with the impression that this Seigneurial question, with that of the Clergy Reserves, was settled some 50 years or more ago. The Secretary of State of the neighboring eRpublic will scarcely listen to such nonsense.

HOPES TO SEE CANADAIN FLEET IN THE PACIFIC

LONDON, Aug. 31.—The Times recently published a leading article anticipating the possible eventual use of the Australian squadron to enforce an independent Commonwealth policy in the Pacific. This telegraphed the Sydney correspondent of The Times this morning, would mean the abandonment of the naval policy of 1909.

"Such a course," he say, "is not expected here. On the conrary, in view of Canada's interest in the Pacific, it is hoped that a Canadian unit will be added to the fleet in the near future. Secondly, in the Australian view the squadron is defensive only and not aggressive, except when co-operating as part of a fleet under Imperial command. Thirdly, the external policy of Australia with regard to the Pacific is equally unaggressive.

"The Federal Cabinet is most anxious to deal with all matters of external policy in consultation with the Imperial Government. Regarding the Panama rates as a grievance it has twice communicated with the Imperial Government seeking information and asking to be associated in any protest, but this still remains unanswered."

Bishop Mobbed By Romans

ROME, Sept. 3.—Mgr. Liviero, Bishop of Citta di Castello, on the Tiber, was administering confirmation yesterday in the Cathedral there when he noticed a girl wearing a shortwaist with sleeves which he considered far too short. He interrupted the ceremony and called upon her to withdraw.

As his advice was not followed, and as the girl remained in the Cathedral, after service the Bishop walked up to her and attempted to eject her. Several young men, including the son of an Italian deputy, at once took the girl's part and the Bishop retired to the sacristy.

In the evening a demonstration took place before the Episcopal Palace, and when Mgr. Liviero appeared at a window, intending to address the populace, he was pelted with tomatoes and other vegetables.

Guadalajara is On a Volcano

GUADALAJARA, Mex., Sept. 3.—Warning has been issued to this, the second city in the republic with a population of 150,000, that it is to be destroyed by a volcano.

The warning is given in all seriousness by the Mexican government through the seismographic branch of the national observatory at Mexico City.

Seven scientists who spent the latter part of July and the first week of August here, have issued a report following the 340 earthquakes which have shaken Guadalajara in the past three months that the town is built on the crater of a slumbering volcano

Increasing temperature, sulphurous fumes escaping from fissures torn in city streets by the quakes and the bursting out of several hot springs led to the investigation which showed that 300 feet beneath the surface of the earth there is a seething crater, whose last eruption was about 1,800 years ago

The men from the observatory cannot state when the eruption will take place, but they believe it will be within a year.

Their report urges that the city be vacated and they suggest a movement to Juanacatlan, a town about forty miles from here on the banks of the Santiago river. A ridge of hills intervenes and it is stated that the effects of the volcanic upheaval, if it is of the magnitude they expect, will not reach to Juanacatlan. The centre of the crater beneath this city is located approximately under the state palace, which is in the heart of Guadalajara.

Government papers have been removed from the palace to Mexico City for safety and a mass meeting will be held here the first Sunday in September to decide whether the city shall heed the warning and move or wait and see what happens.

Government officials are a unit in supporting the report of the men from the national observatory and the warning for a removal contained therein.

This is the first time in history when a city has been warned of danger from a volcano.

$2,000,000 RESORT FIRE.

Before the fire was brought under control the damage to property amounted to $2,000,000. A chef at the Casino Cafe, penned in at one end of the Frasier Pier, jumped into the ocean and was drowned. Heroic rescues of women were made at the Decatur Hotel.

A Prohibition Fight in Maine

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 3.—Entering upon the second week of the State campaign neither side is willing to acknowledge defeat in any quarter.

The cities of Maine have shown at every election for twenty years that they want liquor sold more or less openly. This is as true in Taft as in Bull Moose territory. The rural towns are practically unanimous for enforced prohibition. The Republican platform declares for prohibition in the cities and large towns as well as in the country. The Democrats favor local option.

The Democrats are hopeful of help from their local option plank and Republican disaffection over reciprocity, while the Republicans believe that the rural support of enforced prohibition will carry their ticket through.

The leaders have published their predictions and are sticking to their figures, but the voting public is not inclined to take the estimates seriously, especially those of the Republicans.

Likely to Create A Second Archbishop

MONTREAL, Sept. 3.—The provincial synod of the Church of England in the ecclesiastical province of Canada will meet in special session in this city on October 17th next, for the purpose of formally dividing the province into two metropolitical sees.

It is quite possible, as a result of the division, that the Bishop of Quebec, being the senior prelate, may be made archbishop and metropolitan of the eastern provinces, which will include the dioceses of Nova Scotia, Quebec, Montreal and Fredericton. The proposal to divide the present ecclesiastical province of Canada has already been approved by the individual diocesan synods and by the general synod.

MINERS ON RAMPAGE

Tearing up Railway Tracks to Prevent Shipping of Coal

CHARLESTOWN, W. Va., Sept. 2.—Striking miners today tore up the railroad tracks above Elkdale on Cabin Creek in an effort to stop the shipment of coal from the mines at the upper end of the creek that are operating. A company of militia was sent to the scene and after driving the strikers off the soldiers set about repairing the tracks.

While this work was going on the strikers attacked the roadbed several miles away and another company was sent after them. Late today four companies of the State militia were ordered to the strike district. These are in addition to five companies ordered Saturday.

A number of revolvers and rifles were captured today and several arrests for carrying concealed weapons were made. It is feared that a proclamation of martial law will be announced before another 24 hours.

That Reubenistic Labor Day Fight

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—Re that street row to which reference was made in yesterday's Intelligencer. In justice to the home boys I wish to say: The Rube Band had paraded Front Street, and rendered excellent music (of its kind) and upon approaching the Queen's Hotel, seven fresh individuals from Kingston who had been making their individuality obnoxious during the day, made an unfriendly remark which the "Rubes" resented.

"You get out of that wagon and we'll show you who we are," remarked the leader of the Kingstonians.

"Are you with me, boys?" asked Sills, of the clarionette.

"Sure," chirped Sharpe, of the bass drum.

"Then here goes," and Sills sprang from the wagon box, only to meet a kick in the eye, which meant first blood for Kingston.

Then Sharpe's long legs were seen to swing into sight, followed by a stocky physique, his yellow locks floating in the breeze. With a genial smile upon his ruddy countenance, his sledge-hammer fists struck out, and seven forms in quick succession measured their length in the mud. Without further ado the innocent band boys from 'way back, climbed into their wagon, while the defeated representatives of the down-country city secured a hack and flew toward the depot, possesed of more wisdom than when they entered town.

And now Charlie is Belleville's hero. That's all.

Yours for fair play,

A READER.

Must Give Pause On H. B. R. Route

OTTAWA, Sept. 3.—Preliminary returns from the Hudson Bay survey parties on board the Government steamers which are investigating the ice and navigation in Hudson Bay and Straits this summer in connection with the Hudson Bay Railway, are not very encouraging as to the safety and feasibility of the route. The ice conditions, especially in the Straits, have been found to be unusually bad, exposing vessels to both serious danger and delay. The Government is naturally anxious not to have any alarmist reports made public, but it is certain that the conditions as found are sufficient to give the Minister of Railways cause for serious consideration as to the dependability of the route, and its feasibility as a safe and cheap outlet for western export products.

Ohio Defeated Votes for Women

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 3—All the constitutional amendments proposed by the recent State Constitutional Convention save that providing for woman suffrage were approved to-day, according to returns received from various parts of the State.

Ohio's constitution will be one of the most radical in the United States. The amendments adopted include home rule for cities, license system for saloons, the taxation of incomes and inheritances, abolishment of capital punishment, minimum wage, eight-hour day on public work, and 37 others.

The women agitating suffrage conducted the most aggressive and spectacular features of the campaign. Their aggressiveness attracted the fire of an organization opposed to suffrage but the principal cause of their defeat is to be traced to the liquor interests. These have been well organized in Ohio for years, and they found it easy to have their license amendment put through. Since they had their vote well in hand it was also easy for them to turn this great strength against suffrage.

Returns indicate that all the amendments, save suffrage, would carry by two or three to one, and that suffrage would be defeated by a similar margin.

PLOW BY MOONLIGHT TO ESCAPE FLIES

Pest Attacks Farmer and Stock—Cows Refuse to Eat—Milk supply Reduced.

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 3.—Farmers in Northern Texas are plowing by moonlight to escape the attacks of a fly that is causing the death of livestock in that section of the state. Horses and cattle are being blinded by the pest, and cows refuse to eat. Dairymen are heavy sufferers, supplies of milk and butter being greatly reduced.

The people are also suffering from attacks of the fly. Horses are being covered with blankets and old clothing to protect them both in the country and in towns in the affeced section.

CADETS RAIDED SNOBS

Imperial Cadets Made It Hot For English Dandies.

Fifteen Lads Who Paid Their Own Way Out to Attend Toronto Exhibition, So Angered Others by Their Swaggling Behavior That Their Tents Were Pulled Down and They Were Pelted With Sods.

Toronto, Sept. 4.—There was a merry little battle in the Imperial cadets' camp at 11.30 Monday night, when fifteen boys from Eton and Winchester Colleges, England, who comprise the English team number two, were hazed. This corp arrived in camp on Sunday from Ottawa, where they were the guests of the Government at the D.R.A. meeting. When the shooting concluded, the boys were sent to the Exhibition to camp with their comrades. But right away they got themselves disliked. Their "high brow" conduct was the cause of a cleverly organized hazing party, which pulled off some pryotechnics out of the ordinary in military camps. During the melee the English team was rendered homeless and tentless and was the target for sods, and an officer, who drew his sword to scare off the hazers, was the recipient of the missles and the biggest scare of his life.

The English team No. 2, which by the way does not take part in the competition with the cadets, after arriving in camp, became disgruntled at their reception. They ordered the Ridley College cadets to pitch their tents and demanded several other favors from other corps, which not even officers would think of doing. The Ridley College boys merely laughed at them and told them to pitch their own tents or "do the other thing," whereupon the English boys, so the story goes, got quite saucy. However, they did pitch their tents and after the last peg was driven they, in some way, secured cots and real, up-to-date luxurious bedding. They were fifteen boys all told and two cots were placed in each tent.

When the news traveled among the others, who had been in camp a week and sleeping on straw ticks laid out on the cold, cold ground, a regular Bedlam broke loose, and immediately ways and means were devised to deprive these young "swaggers" from all their comforts. And to add insult to injury, the Englishmen called the mounted Saskatchewan corp, a fine sample of manhood, "young pigs." The westerners by no means liked this pseudonym and got busy. They organized. At a meeting, it was decided that the hazers would sneak up to the lines of the objectionable Englishmen, and, with two or three men at each tent, would flop the canvas. The whistle was blown and the entire line of tents was dropped and the canvas pitched to one side, exposing the forms of the collegians reposing on comfortable cots and wrapped cozily in heavy blankets and quilts. Quilts! Get that? When the tents were lying on the ground, a loud cheer of victory was given, followed by a scramble on the part of the hazed English lads.

But the "maltreated" cadets were game to the core. They jumped from their cots and grabbed their whips and went after the enemy, only to tackle an impenetrable bulwark—the hazers had supplied themselves with sods and threw them with all their might at the onrushing Englishmen.

By this time, however, the raiders had slunk back to their tents and were making a brave attempt to sleep. No one really knows the names of those who carried out the raid, the thing had been organized so ingenuously.

According to the raiders, they were practically forced to teach these cadets from Eton and Winchester their proper plane in a military camp. They said that they had tried to use them as orderlies and had refused even to eat the meals set before them. When they entered the mess tent where the others were dining, they would not remove their headgear as the others had done, until they were hissed so loudly that an officer on duty ordered them to do so.

It is unlikely that any official cognizance will be taken of the affair.

Britain Denies Report.

London, Sept. 4.—A complete disavowal is given by the British Foreign Office of the so-called official announcement that the British Government will formally demand arbitration on the Panama Canal tolls question.

"The lines of action which lie before the British Government are now being considered and any announcement of the kind is premature."

This is the full text of the formal statement given out by the Foreign Office yesterday, in reply to requests for details as to the reported demand for arbitration.

In explanation a publication of the report, the officials of the Foreign Office said in the first place it was wholly incorrect, for no announcement of any sort had been made, nor even decided on by the British Government.

It is possible the Government will await the result of the elections in the United States, in the hope that the United States Government may find a way afterward of meeting British wishes.

New Banking Law.

Ottawa, Sept. 4.—A provision fot outside, but non-Governmental bank inspection to supplement supervision by the bank's own inspectors will be, it is understood, the chief feature of the bank act which Hon. W. T. White will introduce at the coming session.

The objection taken to the principle of inspection by the Government officials is that it would mean practically a Government guarantee as to the solvency of each bank and the accurancy of published statements.

The proposal is to compel each chartered bank in Canada to have an independent inspection of its branches and head office books made at regular intervals by duly licensed and authorized accounting experts.

RAPS EUGENICS

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Dr. Alfred Russel Wallace, like many others, does not approve of any of the "modern eugenic heresies that are being advocated."

The aged scientist (Dr. Wallace is in his ninetieth year) feels a little sore on the point because he has been referred to as spending the evening of his days in furthering the teaching of eugenics.

"Wherever did I advocate any such preposterous theories?" Dr. Wallace asked scornfully. "Not a reference in any of my writings; not a word is quoted in justification of this scientific libel. Why, never a word or deed have I given the slightest countenance to eugenics."

HARBOR NOTES

The schooners Dundee, Lizzie Metzner, Guido and New Dominion are in port discharging coal from Fair Haven and Oswego.

The steamer Belleville arrived late to-day with a good list of passengers and freight, and loaded 1300 boxes of cheese, eggs, etc., for Montreal.

The steamer Geronia arrived in port to-day with a full passenger list, 3 hours late.

The steamer North King arrived here this morning from Charlotte, N. Y., nine hours late.

Police Court Circles

Before Magistrate Masson this morning there appeared three charged with intoxication. All had excuses. Arthur Rowland had his case enlarged one week; if found drunk within that time he will get from three to six months' detention.

D. Fitzgerald had work awaiting him in Montreal and a pass to get there. Dennis was placed in charge of his brother for one week and will probably proceed westward at the end of the probation.

Charles Derocher fought the police though they were twice his size. None were hurt, however. He also used language that grated upon the sensitive ears of the minions of the law. Ten dollars and costs or 30 days for his.

CHARGED WITH THEFT.

Percy Horton was not confronted by his accuser, Silas C. Thompson, who, it appears, is out of town. The Magistrate said the court was not to be fooled with, and if Thompson does not appear as complainant at the end of a week he will have to pay the costs connected with the case. Mr. E. J. Butler asked for Horton's discharge. Horton can secure bail for $100.

FALSE PRETENSE.

John Meyerholtz, charged with obtaining $100, settled his case with the consent of the court. He was discharged.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES.

Last evening a cordial reception was given to Mr. Chas. R. Powers of Providence, R.I., the recently appointed Physical Director of the local Y.M.C.A.

Directors and Senior members of the Association met in the rotunda at eight o'clock, where a half hour was spent in getting acquainted.

At eight-thirty the men adjourned to Madame Barragar's lunch room, where a sumptuous banquet was partaken of. Dr. McCullough, chairman of the Physical Committee, occupied the chair in a most capable manner.

Following the banquet speeches were delivered by the Chairman and Messrs. McCurdy, Lindsay, James, Fenell, McCreary and Chas. R. Powers.

The enthusiasm shown last evening by the fellows certainly indicates that the coming year will be the most successful in the history of the Association.

DEATH ROLL.

FRANK E. FARNHAM

After an illness of several months duration, Mr. Frank E. Farnham of Canifton passed away at the Belleville general hospital on Monday night at a late hour. Mr. Farnham who was a popular citizen of Canifton, where he had resided all his life, was 51 years of age and leaves his wife and a family of four. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Dorland Farley of this city and three brothers, William of Bancroft, Timothy of Canifton and Henry of Thurlow.

THE BACHELOR'S BABY

Love and baby hater, are the main theme of "The Bachelor's Baby," which is to be presented at the Opera House, Wednesday night, by the Colonial Theatre company, Limited, and in which Etienne Girardot is to have a stellar role. This famed player comes to us with a prestiage of success gained in all the important theatric centres of Great Britain as well as on this side of the water, and in his delineation of the child-hating bachelor he offers us new, merry comedy parts which will be found decidedly delicious to contemplate. A feature in "The Bachelor's Baby" is a little five-year-old Baby Wilson, who in her artless way, will win the affections of every beholder of this New York comedy success. The stagings and embellishments as well as the sartorial appointments we are promised will be effective, magnificent and lavish.

ANOTHER APPEAL FOR HARVESTERS.

On account of the urgent appeal from the West for additional Farm Laborers, the Grand Trunk Railway have decided to run two more Farm Laborers' excursions on September 4th and 6th from all stations in Canada.

The rate to Winnipeg is $10.00 plus half cent mile from Winnipeg to destination but not beyond MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

RETURNING half cent mile to Winnipeg, plus $18.00 to destination in Eastern Canada. The farmers along the Grand Trunk Pacific pay the maximum wage and this is an excellent chance for young men to visit the West.

The route via Chicago is an attractive one, as many large cities and towns are passed enroute, which breaks the monotony of the journey, as there is something new to see all the time. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is the shortest and quickest route between Winnipeg-Saskatoon-Edmonton.

Walks Forty Miles Across Desert to Home—May Receive Pardon

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal. Sept. 2.—When James Watkins a miner, was placed in jail at Searchlight, Nev., recently, charged with having stolen a pair of lace curtains, he asked the jailer to see that his pet cats were fed. The jailer laughed at him, but at nightfall Watkins broke jail and tramped 40 miles across the desert to attend his pets. The sheriff followed him next day in a motor car and found Watkins pouring milk for the cats at his cabin.

The charge against Watkins probably will be dismissed, his accuser having been impressed by the miner's affection for his cats.

SAD ACCIDENT.

A sad accident occured Tuesday afternoon opposite the Ferry House, when a G. T. R. engine ran over and cut the head off of one of Mr. Alex. Rushlow's valuable hens. LOCAL MAN HONORED.

The annual conference of the Division Court Clrks of the province was held in the Parliament Buildings Toronto, yesterday afternoon. Probably because of the overpowering attraction of the Exhibition the members of the association did not turn out in great numbers, and the number elected to the various offices and committees somewhat exceeded the attendance. Ald. F. M. Clarke of this city was elected Vice-Prsident.

NOTE OF WARNING.

There has been issued, by direction of the Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa, a conspicious poster calling the attention of potato growers to the importance of examining their crop to ascertain whether or not it is infected with "Potato Canker." The hanger shows in natural colors a potato plant the whole yield of which is affected by the disease. It also shows the appearance of individual tubers in which the canker has started to work. Growers who discover suspicious symptons of the disease in their crop are requested to send affected specimens to the Dominion Botanist, Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

No man in America has achieved a greater reputation in the world of music, or done more for the use of English on both the operatic and concert stage than David Bispham and the announcement that he will sing in Belleville on Sept. 16th is of interest to everyone, musical and otherwise.

A great singer and a great actor, a Bispham concert programme is entirely unique and apart from all others. In his hands each song becomes a romance, a drama or a comedy, according to the intent of the poet and the composer, both sides of the composition receiving equal attention and study. Mr. Bispham will be assisted here by Harry M. Gilbert, the composer-pianist.

The Bispham concert will be the first of the great Artists Series, the other attractions being Mme. Lillian Nordica and company and Mme. Mary Hallock. The subscription list for the three concerts will open at Doyle's Drug Store Friday noon.

MADOC

September 3.—So much wet weather is hitting our farmers. They are having a hard time of it in trying to save their grain. Oats and barley that is standing is in bad shape and is sprouting.

The new talc mine has made another sale to the Eldorado company. They are going to pump out the mine and if it appears at all feasible they will purchase. We cannot find out the price but it is much less than some of the other sales.

The iron pyrites mine between Madoc and Queensboro is putting up the poles to convey its power to the mine, and instead of a tramway to Queensboro station they will build a railroad. They will increase the output. It may be a surprise to many to know that Sulphide will get their supply of ore from the Madoc mine.

A large number left here on Sunday for Toronto. On Monday some went to the lake to fish.

To-day has been a busy day for the scholars getting ready for school. Both the Public and High Schools are well supplied with pupils.

Ten Madocers left here on Monday for the North. They go as teachers and without Model training.

At the home of Mr. Thomas Christy there was a very pleasant time at the family reunion. Some of them had not met for eighteen years.

Mr. and Mrs. Reid of Toronto are visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Gillespie.

The new Model School is having the roof put on this week and it is expected to have it ready next week.

Imperial Preference for British Investments

One of the most gratifying results of the recent visit of Canadian Ministers to England and of Canadian delegates to the Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, is the increased interest which is being taken in the mother country, in Canada and Canadian affairs, and particularly in the Dominion as a field for financial investments. Evidence of this is afforded by a lecture recently delivered before the London Chamber of Commerce by F. B. Vrooman, B. Sc. (Oxon) Ph. D., F.R.G.S., on the subject of "Imperial Preference for British Investments," a full report of which has been received.

Space will not permit of the reproduction of more than a brief extract from this noteworthy utterance, nevertheless the following excerpts will be read with interest:—

In the opennig portion of his address Mr. Vrooman spoke as follows:—

> We have heard so much about Imperial Preference in Trade that the question has become a partizan issue, but we have heard so little about Imperial Preference in British Investments that it still may be considered from a patriotic and business standpoint irrespective of partizan politics.
>
> My thesis is that British money is better invested where it will build up the British Empire than where it will build up a possible enemy and certain competitor of the British Empire—provided the Empire offers a better economic security in the natural resources and the people behind the investment; provided, further, it offers a better political security for the protection of that investment, and provided, once more, that it will earn a better dividend.
>
> Over and above, if not lying under and beneath, the value of each particular investment is the broad question of the security of investments in a given country from two points of view. The first is political security, the value of which may be illustrated just now by the contrast afforded by the two countries which lie on either side of the United States—Canada and Mexico. There are many attractive resources in countries whose politices lie in the volcanic belt, where the people have become addicted to revolutionary habits, and where they are able to spring a revolution before breakfast and a devolution before tea, but no potential wealth is of much value without political security.
>
> Then there is the matter of economic security, and by economic security in this sense I do not refer to the specific values involved in a single proposition presented to capital; but rather to the potential values of the economic resources of a country, which in a large way constitute the basis of all intelligent investment.
>
> If I claim that six per cent. under the British flag is better than four per cent. anywhere else, I should not like to be thought of as reckoning patriotism as equal to minus two per cent.; for my claim, simply, is that it is better to be building up the Empire where it does not cost you anything. Nevertheless, the time has come when it is an Imperial necessity to organize the business and finance of the Empire with reference to the Empire. There are vast quantities of the nation's wealth which are no longer Imperial assets.
>
> I see no reason why the investor should be the only creature in the Empire who should not consider the Empire and its welfare. If the financier is to be exempt from patriotism I see no future for the British Empire.
>
> The relations of business interests to the Empire are the relations of passengers to the ship. Every individual interest aboard is subordinate first to keeping the ship afloat, and second to getting the ship into port. When these problems are solved you may play shuffleboard or poker to your heart's content. The attitude of the cosmopolitan and individualist is similar to that of the hero in a chorus I heard in a London music hall just a week before the Titanic disaster. After every verse came the refrain, "Oh. I don't care if the ship goes down for it don't belong to me."

In a discussion which followed, Lord Desborough highly commended the address, which will be equally acceptable to the people of Canada, whose resources are so vast that financiers of the British Islands and of all other countries can find in them secure and profitable investment for their surplus captial.

The Tecumsehs of Toronto played the Irish-Canadians of Montreal a scheduled match on the Maisonneuve grounds on Saturday and the fighting was so general the police had to interfere. The sports slashed and banged away at each other and some of them were stretched unconscious on the ground. Umpires were removed because their decisions were objected to, and, in fact, the whole proceedings were a farce. Less than a thousand spectators were present and many of them left in disgust when the hoodlumism began. The lesson is plain and if it is not heeded by the lacrosse magnates they will soon have to devote their time to some other business.—Montreal Gazette.

The appeal in the Hebert case will be considered at the Court of Review at Montreal, sitting from September 16th to September 20th. The belief exists in outside points that the appeal will deal with the whole question of a marriage of two Catholics by a Protestant minister. At present the court is only being asked by Hebert's lawyer to say that Judge Charbonneau had no right to continue the appeal against Judge Laurendeau's decision civilly quashing the marriage when the husband had withdrawn from the suit.

British Labor Congress.

London, Sept. 3.—Nearly two million trade unionists were represented by five hundred delegates at the congress which opened yesterday at Newport, Monmouth, and many new and important issues will be raised for the first time.

One of these is the question of syndicalism, as opposed to the more moderate methods hitherto adopted of attaining trade union ends. A resolution is proposed calling for the reaffirmation of syndicalism principles of amalgamation with the national union of dock laborers.

One of the unions in the Transport Workers' Federation will move an amendment expressing approval of the principle of amalgamation where practicable, but repudiating in explicit terms the propaganda for syndicalism. The measure of success or failure attending the syndicalists efforts will be determined by the attitude of the miners, who have not yet declared themselves on this subject.

Kaiser Reviews Big Army.

Berlin, Sept. 3.—Emperor William passed in review yesterday the most powerful army ever gathered in Berlin in time of peace. It is comprised of 60,000 men and composed artillery, cavalry, engineers and auxiliary troops of the Guards and of the Third Army Corps.

The army flying corps took part in the parade for the first time since its formation. Eight aeroplanes and two dirigible balloons under the guidance of officer-airmen flew at the head of the marching columns as they passed the Emperor. His Majesty stood beneath the solitary poplar in the centre of the great Templehof parade grounds and returned the salute of the troops as they went by.

FLOODS TAKE 22 LIVES

Cloudbursts Work Havoc in Southern Pennsylvania.

Terrible Storm Which Sweeps Part of Quaker State, Panhandle of Virginia, and a Section of Ohio, Cause Damage at Present Incalculable—Death List May Reach 33.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 3.—At least 22 known to be dead and 11 others believed to have perished are the results of a terrific storm which swept Western and Northern Pennsylvania, the Panhandle district of West Virginia and a section of Eastern Ohio Sunday night and early yesterday. The monetary loss cannot even be estimated at this time.

After a 24-hours' period of excessively hot weather the storm broke Sunday evening. In addition to an extraordinary rainfall, the electrical features were most spectacular. The steady rain caused every stream to leave its banks. Within a short time the water had washed away railroad tracks in many places and sent tons of earth from surrounding hills, making all thoroughfares in the flood zone impassable.

Latest reports give the following table of fatalities: Colliers, W. Va., nine dead. It is estimated that 20 persons met death. Cherry Valley, Pa., six drowned. Burgettstown, Pa., one drowned. Avella, Pa., three drowned. Cannonsburg, Pa., three drowned.

During the night this city experienced the storm. The suburbs suffered severely, cellars being flooded, street cars crippled and wire service prostrated. In a number of Western Pennsylvania points people became panic-stricken. At Newcastle, Pa., congregations were dismissed by ministers when announcements were made that a flood was headed for the town. At Fort City, Pa., a dozen houses were washed from their foundations. Lighting struck a score of houses while McGrahr, a suburb, is under three to five feet of water.

Oil derricks were blown down, small streams flooded and scores of persons spent the night in interurban cars while repairs were being made to the tracks.

The Pittsburg baseball club were on one of the trains delayed by the Colliers flood and were not scheduled to reach the city until 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, compelling postponement of the morning game with Chicago.

Train Hurled Into River.

Camp Douglas, Wis., Sept. 3.—Four persons were killed in the wreck of a passenger train, No. 10, on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railroad, which plunged into the Lemonweir River, near Camp Douglas yesterday, owing to the washing away of a bridge. Twenty-six persons were injured, six of them seriously.

Every car, including the sleepers, with passengers still in their berths, was hurled into the stream, whose waters augmented by the cloudburst of Sunday night, made it a torrent. Panic-stricken occupants of the sleeping cars, clad only in night clothes, struggled through broken windows to escape. The smoking car was carried down stream, but all its occupants escaped.

The dead are: Engineer Ralph Thompson, Fireman Abraham, mail clerk, name unknown; Baggageman Lee.

REAL SPEED BOY WAS AMOS RUSIE

Harry Davis Picks Him as the Superior of all Throwers of the Present Day

A number of Cleveland ball players were talking recently about the speed marvels of the diamond. Most of the younger men touted Walter Johnson as the king of all speed boys. Johnson was accused of not throwing the ball to the batter, but shooting it.

Then broke in the chieftain, Davis, who, by virtue of his numerous years in sundry wild struggles for pennants, and acknowledged power to sift the strong from the weak pitchers in his day, drew the right to venture first opinion and to have that opinion go on record as a fact.

"Yes, Walter is a marvel," chirped Davis. "Glancing back over two score years that I have been real active and another score that I will only partly be active in professional baseball, I can find only a few, yes a very few, whom I would compare with Walter.

"Now, there was Amos Rusie"—Harry clubbed against little Amos as he has often clubbed against Walter—"there was Amos Rusie," said Harry, "and how he could pilot them up and beyond you! The first year he was not as great a luminary as Johnson.

"There were plenty of green things about me. One of them cropped out soon after my arrival from Pawtucket, R.I. Rusie was pitching. 'Twas my lot to be playing on first. I saw a little smoke when he warmed, but not enough to become alarmed.

"Shortly one of the enemy was at my section for some reason or other—whether it was the result of a safe poke or a pass, I don't know. He was there and took liberties. Amos winked and then shot. He didn't have the power of a toy pistol nor a .44 calibre revolver. I thought it was one of those 13-inch guns shooting at me.

"The ball passed to the far beyond. When all was peaceful again I sauntered up to the manager.

"'Mister Manager,' says I, 'this is no place for a man of my build and complexion. I believe it is time for me to take my grip and hustle back to Pawtucket. I hear the folks calling for me. I want to hear them call some more. I don't enjoy the sensation of having them walk slowly behind my casket and say, 'Yes, he was a fine boy, and, ah, so good to the children.'"

"The manager only smiled. 'Hang on, kid,' he advised. 'Your eyes are troubling you. Wait a few days and they will be well again.'"

QUAIL AS PUGILIST

A Bird That Tastes Success Always Ready to Fight Again

To put it mildly, it is never pleasant to have to regard any beautiful bird merely as an article of food, but I am afraid that humanitarians will not approve of another use to which quails are put in India.

At first sight the quail is a mild-looking little fellow. Look again. The strong beak is slightly curved, there is in the bird's eye an expression which spells battle to those who dare oppose him. In a word, the quail is a born fighter, and there is nothing he enjoys more than a "scrap." He is as fond of fighting as a game cock, and that is saying a good deal.

Bird fighting in India is extremely popular, as everyone who has lived there knows, and the native sportsman discovered the quail's good qualities long ago. For about twopence he may take his pick of the birds, which in India, as in England, are kept in cages ready for table use, and he chooses a likely-looking cock and commences training promptly. His methods are primitive, but efficacious.

"Conditioning," of course, plays an important part in the preparation of the bird for his warlike career, and not only is he fed liberally on the best of grain, but also upon finely-chopped garlic, which is mixed with his other food. Nothing is left undone likely to add to the bird's well-being, and fanciers will be interested to learn that a daily dust bath is given and is much appreciated. All birds of this family, as well as our own poultry, enjoy this process of dry cleaning, and should be allowed it.

Having got the future prize-fighter both tame and in high condition his actual education comences. A favorite method is to keep the bird without food until real hungry, and then to prop up a looking-glass on the table put a little food in front of it, and place the famished bird on the table. He is used to feeding anywhere, and makes for the food at once, only to be disappointed, for just as he reaches it the food is covered with the hand.

This tantalising treatment is repeated, and always close in front of the glass, so that before long it dawns upon the bird—or is supposed to do so—that it is the rival that rushes so eagerly to met him, who is interfering with the enjoyment of his much-desired dinner. This irritates him considerably, and before long he makes pointed remarks to the bird in the looking-glass. This is just what the trainer wants, and after the bird has shown genuine signs of anger, the glass is removed and he is allowed to eat. It should be added that on no account is the quail in training allowed to touch the looking-glass, lest he should discover what an undesirable opponent it is.

In course of time a real bird is substituted for the reflection of a bird, and both being hungry, and both having been encouraged to behave like little savages, a battle takes place. This is merely a part of the training, for in course of time a bird that has tasted success is only too ready to fight up on every possible occasion.

Kid McCoy in Cell Sparred With Verse

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—"Kid" McCoy, the former pugilist, who is now known as Norman Selby, the New Life exponent, returned yesterday from Southampton on the American liner St. Louis, after being incarcerated in Brixton Jail, London, on a charge made by the Belgian police connecting him with the disappearance of the Princess of Thurn and Taxis's jewels from a hotel at Ostend.

The former fighter did not seem enthusiastic to discuss his brief stay in the English prison, except to say that it was the fault of the Belgian detectives and not the Scotland Yard men. He found time to write a ballad of Brixton Jail, and said it was different to the one written by Oscar Wilde. Those who had read them agreed with him.

Here are Mr. Selby's verses, of which he entertains no mean opinion, despite their shortcomings in the matter of scansion:

BALLAD OF BRIXTON JAIL.

Kindness seeds are sown by deeds,
Cultured by Love's affection.
Nature's arm protects from harm
All those who need protection.

Love's bright charm allays all alarm
And strengthens the will of the mind.
So when in doubt, turn things about
And view them from behind.

Let reason's bright light
Guide desire and appetite.
Should happiness be your goal
Don't scatter to the wind
The thoughts of your mind,
They come from your soul.

Mr. Selby also wrote an essay on the benefit bound to result from scattering little seeds of kindness along life's rough hewn path. In an interview with the reporters regarding his troubles abroad he said:

"I did not know that there was such a person in the world as the Princess of Thurn and Taxis when I went to Ostend to spend the week-end, and I did not know she had been robbed of her jewels when I left the hotel to go to the steamboat for Dover.

"I was the most surprised man you ever saw when I was arrested in the Strand just after leaving the Hotel Cecil on my way to my office. After I was locked up in Brixton Jail only my wife was allowed to see me, and that but once a day. Two days later she left for Paris with my seven-year-old daughter to avoid the scandal caused by my arrest. At the end of ten days, when the extradition papers arrived from Belgium, I was brought up in Bow Street Police Court before the Chief Magistrate, Sir Albert de Rutzen, who ordered my release on the ground that there was no evidence to show that I had been connected with the jewels robbery, and that he was surprised a warrant had been issued in the case.

"I have instructed my solicitor, Sir Charles Russell, to commence suit against the Belgian Government for $250,000 for my wrongful arrest, which has ruined my European business, so that I have had to close up my London office and come back to New York to live.

"The Belgian detectives connected me with the robbery because I was in the hotel at the time and had left that morning by the Dover steamboat. Mrs. Selby and her daughter are still in Paris."

Consulting Papa.

"Papa, you know that George, who proposed to me last night, is coming for his answer this evening, don't you?"

"Yes."

"Oh, thank you, papa! That was the answer I was going to give him anyway!"—Chicago Tribune.

THE RING

WENT THE LIMIT

LOS ANGELES, Cal., September 2.—Joe Manduot, the New Orleans lightweight defeated Joe Rivers, of Los Angeles, in 20 rounds of fierce fighting at Vernon today. Manduot had the better of every round but three, and won the decision by a wide margin.

DECISION ON FOUL

TRINIDAD, Colo., September 2.—Benny Chaviz, of Trinidad, was awarded the devision over Monte Attell, of San Francisco, on a foul in the twelfth round of a gruelling fight here to-day. The delivery of the foul caused great excitement. Spectators crowded into the ring and the platform collapsed, but no one was injured.

TWO GOOD BOUTS.

Jim Flynn Won From Charlie Miller.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 2.—Jim Flynn won from Charlie Miller, the latest white hope, here today, when Miller refused to come up for the sixteenth round. For the first eleven rounds the fighting was about even, but Flynn kept handing out heavier and heavier punches. Miller weighed 218 pounds and Flynn 182.

OUTFOUGHT JEANNETTE.

PITTSBURG, Pa., September 2.—Pittsburg was to-day initiated to open air fighting, the first real event of its kind that has been staged here. Jeff Clark, of Joplin, Mo., the "fighting ghost," and Joe, Jeannette, of Hoboken, aspirant for championship laurels, composed the principal bout. Three other good bouts were held before the principals appeared. Popular opinion gave the best of the mill to Clark. In several rounds he fought rings round Jeannette. Clark weighed 163 1-2 and Jeanette 197 pounds.

BIG LEAGUE PLAYERS WORKING GRAFT GAME

They Play Sunday Games With Semi-Professional Clubs

Tempting offer from semi-professional clubs playing Sunday games in New York are bound to result in serious trouble, if members of the Giants, Highlanders and Brooklyn continue to accept and earn them under assumed names. At least that was the opinion advanced by a magnate who pays liberal salaries and operates one of the local major league clubs. It seems that a certain promoter of semi-professional games has branched out as the employer of major league stars for Sunday exhibitions, and is also a sort of booking agent for teams outside of Greater New York that desire dates in the metropolitan district. This individaul, so the story goes, is authorized to offer as much as $250 for the services of a star player under contract to a major league club to pitch, catch, or cover any other position on a semi-pro. team anxious to defeat a rival.

Whenever one of the Sunday clubs wants a diamond expert belonging to organized baseball, the request must be made through this so-called booking agent who deals with the player direct. In return for his trouble, it is said, he collects both ways, a percentage of the coin received by the player and a piece of the gate receipts taken in by the club, and as competition is brisk, his rake-off has begun to attract attention.

CAN YOU FOLD A COAT?

To fold a man's coat, lay it out perfectly flat with the wrong side down. The sleeve should be spread out smoothly, and then folded back until each end of the sleeve is even with the collar. Fold the revers back, and then double the collar over, folding it directly in the centre seam, and smoothing it out carefully so that there will be no wrinkles. The coat is then ready for being placed in the trunk. Unless space is limited, do not turn up the tails when folding a coat.

MAKES A GOOD START

Roosevelt Abolishes Republican Majority in Vermont.

Progressives Make Gains All Along the Line In Conservative State and Result of the Bare Election of the Republican Governor Will Be That Roosevelt May Sweep the More Advanced of the States.

White River Junction, Vt., Sept. 4.—The strength of the new Progressive party in its first line-up against the older parties and the disappearance of the Republican majority for the first time in ten years and the first time in the history of the state in a Presidential year were the outstanding features of the state election in Vermont yesterday. For many years political students have pointed out that any decrease in the Republican majority in Vermont in September below the normal of 25,000 has been followed almost invariably by the party defeat in the Presidential fight in November. These majorities, which have averaged close to 30,000 in all the state elections in Vermont in Presidential years since 1892, were represented yesterday by a bare plurality.

The Republican loss apparently went in a great degree to the Progressives and to a somewhat lesser extent to the Democrats. The Republican governor will probably be elected by a bare majority.

The falling off in the Republican vote began with the first returns, while the Progressives gained all along the line, in some cases carrying towns which had heretofore been regarded as strongly Republican.

The returns from the Vermont elections, though incomplete, indicate a remakable uprising of the people in response to the three days stumping tour through the Green Mountain state by Theodore Roosevelt. For the first time in the history of the state the Republican party has failed to elect its candidate for governor in a Presidential year. True, the Republican plurality at the state election would seem to ensure the electoral vote of the state for Mr. Taft by a reduced majority. But it also indicates a serious defection in the results of his supporters.

On Monday last it was predicted that the Progressive vote in Vermont at this election might reach the eight-thousand mark; the probabilties are that it will reach double this estimate.

The population of Vermont is of old colonial stock, ultra conservative and intensely loyal, by half a century of tradition, to the regular Republican organization. If his appeal to such a community has resulted in so large a vote for the Progressive party, it is difficult to over-estimate what may result from the stumping tour which Col. Roosevelt began yesterday in the more progressive states.

The battle is just begun.

No Ballot For Women.

Columbus, Sept. 4.—The women of Ohio failed yesterday in their efforts to gain the ballot, according to indications of the early returns last night. While the earliest figures on which this result is based came almost entirely from the larger cities of the state, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Toledo and Dayton, it was in those places where the suffragists waged their most determined fights and politicians said the result would not be changed by the final results.

Most of the important of the 42 proposed amendments, it is believed, will be carried.

The first 327 precincts of the 5,197 in the state, give the following vote on equal suffrage: Yes, 15,848; no, 25,147.

The women, it is said, will not give up their fight for the ballot, however, but plan to make use of the initiative and referendum to gain another vote.

Comes Out For Roosevelt.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 4.—Senator A. B. Cummins, Progressive, and candidate for the presidency of the National Republican Convention, issued a statement yesterday, in which he opposed President Taft, said he will vote for Roosevelt, and went on record as opposed to the nomination of a third party state ticket in Iowa at the state convention which Roosevelt will address here to-day.

In saying he would vote for Roosevelt for President, Cummins added: "But it must be understood that I will do so, protesting against the organization of a new party, and dissenting from some of the doctrines announced in his platform."

To Aid Privy Council.

London, Sept. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Canadian Associated Press is informed that a second attempt to strengthen the judicial committee of the Privy Council, whose decisions in the past have been far from satisfactory in the colonies, will be made shortly after the reassembling of Parliament.

Reports, which appeared in the Canadian press, claiming that Lord Chancellor Haldane proposed to add the name of Chief Justice Fitzpatrick to the active body, are purely imaginary. The personnel of the committee will apparently remain the same as hitherto, while the court is also to remain as it is, the proposed amalgamation with Supreme Court appeals being considered unworkable. To meet the particular needs of the dominions over seas, it is understood that assessors possessing special knowledge of the points at issue, will be admitted, and will assist their lordships in arriving at decisions.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane Returns.

Ottawa, Sept. 4.—Hon. Mr. Rogers yesterday received a telegram from Hon. Frank Cochrane, who has arrived at North Sydney, C.B., after his inspection of the Hudson Bay route. The Minister says he had a very pleasant trip and is greatly impressed with the possibilities of the route. No mention is made of the choice of terminal.

Mr. Cochrane will be in Montreal this evening. He will return to Ottawa Monday.

TO WAIT TILL NEW YEAR.

Parliament May Delay Session for Some Months.

Ottawa, Sept. 4.—All signs of the political horizon at the present time point towards a late meeting of Parliament. It is the general belief in official circles now that there is a strong probability of the opening of the session being delayed until after the Christmas holidays.

It is pointed out that there is much legislation of a constructive nature to be got in readiness for introduction. During the summer most of the Ministers have been away from the capital and their Departments, and this will add greatly to the space of time and amount of work which now confronts them before Parliament can meet. Some time will undoubtedly have to be given to the consideration of the naval question, as it is now a practical certainty that nothing definite as regards policy has yet been decided upon and will not be before it is given these and mature consideration by the entire Cabinet Council. Mr. Hazen, it is understood, is going to the Pacific Coast after his return here, and will likely be away for two weeks. This would seem to indicate that the question of the navy will not be taken up for some weeks, probably not until October.

Mr. Borden on his return is going to spend a few days in Nova Scotia, and, as scheduled, to speak at a number of banquets in his honor. It is altogether unlikely that the Cabinet will get down to real work before October, and it is felt that it will be too late in November, when they are ready, to summon Parliament until after the new year.

Cannot Repair Damage.

New York, Sept. 4.—A cable to The Tribune from London says:

Reports from all over the country show that even in the now unlikely event of an unusually fine September none of the damage done to the crops by the inclement weather of the last two months can be made good. The loss to the farmers is far greater than most people imagine. It can be reckoned in millions of pounds sterling and it falls upon men who in the majority of cases are unable to bear it.

Thousands of British farmers stand face to face to-day with hopeless ruin, unless help comes from some quarter outside their control. Tens of thousands of laborers are suffering now and will suffer still more during the coming winter from the curtailment of employment, and all signs points to the fact that the prosperity of the British agricultural community has suffered a blow from which it will take years to recover.

Collins Is Arraigned.

Cobden, Ont., Sept. 4.—Peter Collins, the Cobden man, who on Friday last stabbed and killed Grant Appleby, a veterinary student at Toronto, during a fight between the two men here, will stand his trial at Pembroke on a charge of murder at the assizes opening on December 6.

Following the verdict of the coroner's jury naming Collins as responsible for Appleby's death, he was arraigned before the local magistrate and committed. He was afterwards removed to Pembroke jail.

T. W. McGarry, K.C., M.P.P., will represent Collins and set up a plea of self-defence.

Court proceedings yesterday only lasted a few minutes. Very little evidence was submitted.

Eye-witnesses described the quarrel testifying that Appleby had beaten Collins only after receiving the knife wound.

Galt Suffers Heavily.

Galt, Sept. 4.—Inspection of the streets to-day shows that the damage by cloudburst Monday will be heavy, running into thousands of dollars. Nearly all the high streets were up by the rush of water and the splendid drain service failed to cope with the extraordinary downpour, the heaviest and most furious in the history of the town. Everywhere in the valley cellars are flooded and several streets rendered impassable. Lightning struck the malleable iron work house of Wm. Dean's, Blenheim Road. The storm caused much more damage to town property than the memorable flood of Easter Sunday.

HELP IS NEEDED NOW

Australian High Commissioner Discusses Naval Question.

In Speech on Imperial Defence at Toronto, Sir George Reid Says That If the Bonds of the Empire Are to Be Strengthened It Must Be Done at Once—Has Nothing to Say Regarding the Method of Action.

Toronto, Sept. 4.—Sir George Reid, high commissioner in London for the Commonwealth of Australia, in a speech at the directors' luncheon at the Exhibition yesterday preached the doctrine of Imperial unity and the necessity of Canada, if she intends to do something to strengthen the British navy, to act quickly. In concluding his eloquent speech he said: We know that intense as our loyalty is, that your loyalty is just as intense, just as undoubted; we think that you may adopt some other method than ours, in your wisdom, and it is not for us to speak a word to you in matters that so closely concern you, but I think we have a right to say in Australia, after what we have done, that whatever the Empire has got to do, to strengthen the bonds of our Motherland, ought to be done quickly.

SIR GEORGE REID.

"I would like just to give you a few figures with reference to the trade of Australia with the British Empire. It stands in this way: Seventy-five per cent. of everything we buy outside of Australia is bought in the British Empire; from the rest of the world we buy 25 per cent. We do not ask the Empire to buy from us at that rate, because some countries buy 14 per cent. more in proportion than they sell to us; they sell us 25 per cent.; we sell to them 39 per cent. of all our exports.

We have imitated the splendid example of Canada in this way, and I may pause for a moment to express my admiration for the manner in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues and the Parliament of Canada gave Great Britain such a handsome and unconditional preference. We give a preference to another country that cost us $5,000,000 a year in customs revenue. We believe in reciprocity and we believe in preference, and we also believe in letting the people of the Mother Country judge for themselves what is best for them with the same independence and fairness and thoroughness with which we judge is good for us.

"Now, there is another thing that I would like to say. We in Australia are not so near the storm centres of the world. We are far away from them, but at the present moment every Australian boy at 14 begins to wear the King's uniform and he wears it under a system of compulsory training until he is 26. This system is made a light one. It does not interfere too seriously with the preparation for the real battle of life, in which young Canadians and young Australians must inevitably engage.

"In twenty-four hours the little cloud on the horizon may become a national crisis of the greatest gravity, and one naval engagement, if it went against us, might shatter the supremacy of the British fleets upon the oceans of the world, and you know, if our fleets are once shattered we won't be allowed to employ our wealth in building them up again, the power that overthrows us won't allow us to get strong enough to have another battle with them; so that our fleets must always be ready to fight and to fight at once.

"That is what we think in Australia; at the same time we also think this: After all, wherever the Britisher goes, he has got stored up in him somewhere the call of the sea; it was the sea which made the Englishman what he is; it was his love of the sea, his adventures on the sea and his enterprise on the sea; when the sea ceases to become attractive to our race, the days of our Empire will be numbered. We in Australia are responding to the call of the sea; we are bringing the men of young Australia face to face with the greatest traditions of our race in sea life by endeavoring to preserve and promote them."

Raided Fourteen "Blind Pigs."

Cobalt, Sept. 4.—The provincial police pulled off the biggest "blind pig" raid in years yesterday, when they nabbed fourteen alleged "piggers" on forty-six charges of selling.

Two spotters have been working for the past two weeks, and have apparently succeeded remarkably well. Included in the list of arrests are two men from South Lorraine, and one from North Cobalt, while the balance are well known Cobalt saloonkeepers.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 3.—The demand from foreign buyers for new crop Manitoba spring wheat was good and as bids were in line sales of a number of loads were made late Saturday and this morning, but owing to the continued weakness in the Winnipeg market late cables today came 7½d per quarter lower, and the demand even at this reduction was much quieter. The demand for old crop oats continued good, and a fair amount of business was done. The local market is very firm. There was a good enquiry for new crop spring wheat flour from European sources and bids for some round lots were received, which may result in business. The local trade is steady under a fair demand for small lots. An active trade continues to be done in bran and shorts. Butter is strong at an advance of ⅛c to ¼c, with a good business doing. Local stocks estimated at 115,000 packages, of which considerable is held for western account. Cheese rather quiet but strong, with prices ⅛c to ¼c higher. WEATHER MAKES AMENDS.

Prairies Are Now Enjoying Wind and Sunshine.

Winnipeg, Sept. 4.—The strong sunshine which prevailed in Winnipeg on Monday, was general over the west yesterday morning. There were light showers in some sections, but charming weather followed early in the forenoon and harvesting operations were very general all over the west by noon. The situation generally is pronounced quite satisfactory.

Fifty per cent. of the grain is reported cut in many sections, with threshing under way.

Ahead of Last Year.

Portage la Prairie, Sept. 4.—Although the sky was overcast Monday till noon, a strong drying wind was blowing all day which has put everything in good shape for the ideal weather which is prevalent all over the Portage plains. Reports yesterday show that all farmers are busily engaged. Many have finished cutting and are waiting their turn for the threshing gangs. Operations are well ahead of this time last year. The weather indications are fine and prospects are good.

Third Day of Slashing.

Regina, Sask., Sept. 4—For the third day in succession farmers are slashing into the wheat. Saturday they were cutting all over the district despite Friday's rain. Monday morning again dawned bright and sunny and the binders were working. Yesterday the same conditions prevail, though the sky was overcast.

About fifty per cent. of the wheat is cut, and there are indications that it will be of fine quality. This district is practically assured of an excellent crop, even under any weather conditions, for so much of the grain has already been saved as to make it a paying proposition.

Wonderful Headway.

Weyburn, Sask., Sept. 4.—Monday night was warm and stormy in the south and east, but clear at Weyburn. Yesterday was bright and warm with a light breeze. Crops are progressing wonderfully and no damage reported.

About thirty harvesters arrived in town Monday night, but many more are required.

Slight Rain In Moosemin.

Moosemin, Sask., Sept. 4.—A very slight rain fell Monday night, but it is bright and clear to-day. The temperature was 53 Monday night.

Many a good man's disposition is due to the fact that he is afraid of his wife.

In Defence of His Bull Dogs

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Mr. Editor,—Please allow me a few words in defence of my bull dogs.

I have owned bull dogs for 10 years and have never had to tie one up yet. They have always run at large and the children of the neighborhood play with them constantly and never once have they attempted to bite any of them, notwithstanding the children are oftimes very rough in their play with them, so much so, that I have wondered at the good nature and tolerance of the dogs and I know no collie dog would stand for it at all.

All my life I have handled dogs and horses of all kinds many of them viciously inclined. I am constantly compelled to doctor and operate on them, I have never received a bite from a dog nor a kick from a horse during my 40 years experience. Some will attribute this to good luck but I attribute it mainly to the fact that I have no fear whaever of animals and no man who is 100 per cent. masculine has. God has given man dominion over the animals and all such men know that if they stand their ground no dog will or dare attack them. There are men of course with a timid feminine streak in their make up, what is commonly called a "yellow streak", and the dogs know by instinct this kind when they meet them and ofttimes they delight in scaring them and seeing them jump and squirm and holler and almost go into hysterics like a woman. Whoever heard of a bull dog attacking a woman? I never did.

Lately I have been raising puppies and out of the last batch I reserved one for myself and he is inclined to be cross and as far as I can learn has nipped two men on the leg but in neither case did he do any harm only to their pants. This pup did not realize or know he was doing wrong and like a child needs correcting. Occasionally a young dog of any breed will get going wrong and the collie dog is far more apt to snap and bite than the bull dog who is the best natured and most reliable of all the larger breeds.

Yours truly,
D. H. ACKERILL, V.S.

Break Up The Old Pastures

This is a bit of advice which farmers in general would do well to follow. Some of our most troublesome pests find their breeding places in land that has been left for some years under grass. Wire worms and white grubs which are often times very destructive to crops of all kinds increase and multiply in such places where they feed upon the roots of the grass. Wire worms in their adult stage are known as Click Beetles, oblong dull colored, creatures. White grubs turn into what are commonly called June bugs or May beetles. These worms take from two to three years to grow to maturity and during that long period they feed upon roots and are out of sight and out of reach. There is a popular idea that salt will kill these creatures and the question is often asked: "How much salt should be used per acre?" Like many other popular superstitions, there is nothing whatever in this material for the purpose. Enough salt to affect the grubs would completely prevent the growth of any vegetation and it is doubtful if any amount whatever would kill the insect. Many other substances have been tried but so far without success. The remedy is, therefore, to break up the breeding places. This should be done by ploughing the grass fields deeply late in the fall in order to expose the grubs and their winter quartrs teo the frost and rain and also to the various animals and birds which feed upon them. The safest; after the second year there year is peas. After that a hoed crop, preferably turnips, would be the safest; after the escond year there will probably be no grubs left. During the first year any that there are in the ground would feed upon the sod that had been plowed under and would let the growing crop pretty well alone. To grow corn, grain, potatoes or mangels at the outset would be very risky indeed. Besides these two insects, old pasture lands, especially where the soil is dry, are productive breeding places for grasshoppers which spread from these fields to the crops. In the Southern Counties of Ontario bordering Lake Erie there is another serious pest which also breeds in old pastures where the soil is light and sandy. This is known as the Rose Chafer. The beetle appears usually in great swarms about the time the roses come into bloom and, devours, not only these flowers, but all sorts of others that may be growing in the garden. The worst damage it does is to the blossoms and young fruit of grape vines of wihch it is particularly fond. These four serious pests, which are extremely difficult to control, may be greatly reduced in numbers, if not got rid of altogether by a short rotation of crops and especially by keeping pastures not more than three years under grass.

Biography of a Former Bellevillian

DICKENS, BENJAMIN FRANKLIN born in Belleville, at a period when there was something happening all the time. "Bennie" was a docile child. All his mother had to do, in order to keep him still, while she was busy with her household duties, was, to lay him on the bed or sofa and tie him down with a whole clothesline. When Ben was five years of age he joined out with Jack Fleming, as a baseball battery and soon built around that machine a first class boy's ball team. This battery continued together for twenty-five years, playing the regular fellows up into the has-been class, and then picking up the new generation and piloting it onward and upward to the sere and yellow and no doubt would be still at it, were it not for the death of poor Jack Fleming, the receiving end of the outfit. As a boy Bennie was mixed up in everything that it was possible for a human boy to be mixed in. In addition to being an all round athlete, he was a high grade actor and contortionist and for several seasons was one of the star attractions with "Muskie Diamond's All Star Alcazzazars," in which famous amusement enterprise he also held one dollars and sixty cents' worth of the common stock, and the stock wasn't very common at that. Attracted by the gold lace and the torchlight's glare, Bennie at an early age became connected with the Oddfellows' Band, and in a short time was one of the noted snare drummers of the district. He performed equally as well on several other instruments. He was always prominently identified with everything in a musical or entertainment way, in the town. Through the experience gained in making signs for the regular Saturday afternoon and holiday performances of the "All Star Alcazzazars," our hero became quite adept in the use of pencil and brush, so it was not surprising to learn that he had started out at the head of a mob, styled "The Montreal Fence Painters," whose object was, it appeared to be, to cover every inch of dead wall and free board fence on the continent with signs reading: BOSTON PILLS.

One day coming to a fence bearing in large letters the screed: "Post No Bills" Bennie was somewhat perplexed. He had been told to paint that particular fence, but here was a warning against it. What was he to do? His years of experience playing the snare drum in the Oddfellows' Band when it was in attendance on the 15th Batt., A. L. I. had instilled military discipline into his make-up. He must obey orders. How? A bright thought struck him He got a hammer, loosened the boards in the fence, switched them around and out of "Post No Bills" he arranged his sign, "Boston Pills", and continued on his way. Bennie used to draw his outlines with chalk with the right hand and fill in the paint with in his left hand as he went along. He sure was an ambidextrous cuss, for fair. To attempt to enumerate all the accomplishments wrapped up in that five feet one half inch of humanity would require several columns of a regular newspaper. Suffice it is to say that the lines of activity open to attainment by mortals which Bennie has not entered and excelled in are contained within very narrow limitations or else they were not worth while. Some years ago, our lad moved his lares and penates (whatever they are) out West, where there was room to expand, and soon discovered the site on which Vancouver, B. C. now stands. He also staked out several subdivisions in the coming city, the parting with which, so rumor has it, caused Bennie's bank roll to become plethoric, though not offensively so. Soon after the discovery of Vancouver he sent back East for several old pals who made haste to join him and rumor again saith: that all these lads wear thousand dollars bills as shoulder pads in their overcoats. To sum up Benjamin in a few words—and this writer is a man of few words, though maybe he uses the few many times—he is one of the best the old city of the Bay ever produced. He is a whole-souled, genial, wholesome lad, is Bennie. They do not raise any better anywhere. He is a well known citizen in Vancouver and mixes actively in the public and business affairs of the city, where he is nearly as well known as he was in Belleville. Bennie is one of the sort, who, in the midst of success, looks back with kindly thoughts to the town which gave him birth and to the friends who started up the pathway of life with him. He is the same old "Bennie" whom time nor fortune changes not. "Ball seven, take yer base!" "What't that? Ball seven? Yer rotten! Ah, go to——"

Montreal to Welcome Borden.

Montreal, Sept. 4.—This city will extend a welcome to Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden, the Prime Minister, when he reaches here on his return from the old country on Saturday. A meeting of the prominent city officials, business and professional gentlemen was held at Freeman's Hotel yesterday morning to discuss the details of the reception. It was decided to make it absolutely non-partisan in character.

The reception will follow along the same lines as those tendered in former years to Sir John Thompson and Sir Wilfrid Laurier on their return from important visits to the old country.

Mayor Lavallee will be invited to read the address of welcome and he will be supported by representatives of every society, business organization and professional body in Montreal.

Erie Canal Badly Damaged.

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 4.—The Erie Canal went out 500 feet west of Bushnells Basin yesterday morning, at the same spot where the break occurred a year ago. All the new work and reinforced concrete put in by the state at that time is washed away, and a large area is under water. The canal will be cut of service for a long time.

How Prohibition Works In Kansas

A well dressed old man walked into a corner drug store the other day, mopped his brow with a handkerchief and took a seat at the soda fountain. The clerk faced him expectantly.

"I am very thirsty," he remarked, as he drummed on the counter. "I don't know what I want. Well, I believe I will take a phosphate," he concluded, still drumming on the marble with his fingers. The clerk smiled, picked up a stein and went to the rear of the store. He came back, rang up 15 cents out of the half dollar which was given him. The old man, without looking at the stein, thirstily raised it to his lips and took a long draught. Then he quickly set the stein down, spluttered a moment and then exploded between his coughs.

"What do you mean? I never took a drop of liquor, sir, in my life. But I know it, sir, the rotten stuff, when I smell it. Sir, I'll not stand for it. I called for a cherry phosphate. What do you mean, sir, by giving me whiskey?" And the old man stopped for breath as he gazed at the amazed clerk.

"Well, I—I er—I guess I made a mistake. I thought you wanted it for medicine," stammered the clerk. "Sir, I am a teetotaler. I wouldn't touch the stuff for love nor money." And the old man marched out indignantly.

"Well, for the love of Mike," exclaimed the clerk to a man at the counter who had been served a stein in the same way but who had made no kick. "That old duffer came in here and certainly gave me the correct high sign. And he drank nearly half of it, too." The clerk laughed as he looked into the stein.

GRAND TRUNK SYSTEM NEWS ITEMS

In response to urgent and repeated appeals from Western Canada for a largely increased supply of farm labor the Grand Trunk Railway has decided to run two additional excursions to the three prairie provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba, brom all stations in Canada, on September 4th and 6th respectively.

It is now assured that the harvest will be considerbaly in excess of all previous records while the labor shortage has never been so acute as it is this season. The reumeration now offered is therefore on a correspondingly liberal scale and nowhere are wages higher than in the sections along the main and branch lines of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

The fare on these excursions will be only $10 to Winnipeg via Chicago or Port Arthur and a half a cent a mile from Winnipeg to any destination east of Edmonton, Calgary or MacLeod. Returning purchasers of farm laborers' tickets will be given certificates, under certain conditions which entitle them to be returned from Winnipeg to their starting points in Eastern Canada on or before November 30th, 1912 for $18; half a cent a mile being charged from points east of Edmonton, Calgary and MacLeod to Winnipeg.

This is a straightforward business proposition, an attractive trip to a new country, a minimum expense with the positive certainty of healthy and profitable employment at the other end. It is at least worth alking over with agents of the Grand Trunk Railway System, from any of whom all particulars may be obtained.

A FAMINE IN PERFUME

Essence of Violets Will Cost $20,000 A Kilogram—Due to Bad Weather

PARIS, Sept. 2.—The essence of Oriental roses will be the perfume most in vogue next winter, the announcement having just been made that owing to the exceptionally good season, its average price this year will be only $500 a kilogram (two pounds three ounces.)

On the other hand the phenomenally cold and wet summer in Europe with the absence of any sunshine, will, it is also stated make other scents so dear as to be out of reach of all but millionaires.

The pure essence of violet will not be obtainable for less than $20,000 a kilogram, while mignonette perfume, which has lately been very much in fashion in Paris, will come second at the price of $8,900 for the same quantity.

In consequence of this scent famine, there is expected to be an enormous increase in the sale of artificial perfumes extracted from coal and a huge demand will, it is believed, probably cause important improvement in this industry.

English People Like Cycle Cars

Cycle cars, or little cars, expected largely to take the place of motor cycles, with the side car attachment and motor trucks, are gaining popularity in England, according to United States Consul Albert Halstead, stationed at Birmingham.

Mr. Halstead remarks that both automobiles and motor cycles are rapidly gaining in popularity in England, with the whole tendency in the motor car industry toward the development of efficient qualities. American cars of low price have had a very large sale, Mr. Halstead says, and have spurred British manufacturers on to making automobiles at nearly the same price, but of engine and body design more calculated to please British taste.

"There is a large class," observes Mr. Halstead, "which cannot afford or is unwilling to purchase motor cars at prices now charged for the cheapest ones, and much consideration has been given in the industry to the problem of constructing a small automobile that would have all the advantages of a motor cycle with a side car attached and none of its drawbacks. This small automobile is what is called in the trade a cycle car. It is recognized that there would be a particularly large demand for such a car, but that it must be made by firms that could produce and market it in sufficient quantities to sell at low prices. It is not expected that this new car will actually replace the motor cycle with its side car attachments but developments are on such lines as to indicate that within a year or two such a miniature automobile will be on the market and sell around $485.

WOMEN TAKE NOTICE!

A man cannot understand the torture and suffering many women endure uncomplainingly. If the majority of men suffered as much pain and endured with patience the weakening sicknesses that most women do, they would ask for immediate sympathy and look for a quick cure.

Many women have been saved from a life of misery and suffering by turning to the right remedy—Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—a remedy which is safe to take because containing no narcotics, alcohol or injurious ingredients. It is an alterative extract of roots, made with pure glycerin, and first given to the public by that famous specialist in the diseases of women—Dr. R. V. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y.

MRS. HERSHEIMER.

MRS. LIZZIE M. HERSHEIMER, of Lincoln, Neb., 520 "C" St., says: "I send a testimonial with much pleasure so that some suffering woman may know the true worth of your remedies. I was a great sufferer from female troubles but after taking one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which a friend advised me to take, I found myself very much improved. After taking three more bottles, and using two boxes of Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets, I found myself on the road to recovery. I was in poor health for five years but now I am cured.

"I hope all women suffering from female weakness will give Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a fair trial.

SHALL I WIN HER?

THE STORY OF A WANDERER

By JAMES GRANT

Author of "The Romance of War," "Under the Red Dragon," "Fairer than A Fairy," etc.

"I could reach them if the men of Macomo or the thievish Amapondas don't anticipate me."

"And if the men of Sandilli will permit you."

"You will surely aid me in saving them?" I urged.

"I shall make no promises. But tell me—is one of those pale faced amapazi your wife, or are both your wives?"

"No," I replied, and though on the point of telling him that Clarice was to have been my wife, and would be so if heaven spared us, the recollection of his views concerning me inspired me with caution and reserve

"Then are they your sisters?"

"No."

"Then why this interest in them?"

"They are friends — very dear friends."

"Nothing more?"

"Nothing more."

"I am glad that neither of them is the wife of my friend." He patted my shoulder as he spoke.

"Why?"

"Because, as I told you in the forest, I mean to provide you with a wife from among ourselves."

I could not feign sufficient gratitude for the matrimonial prospect held out to me. When I thought of the Caffre women and Bechuana belles, whom I had seen with their dingy skins smeared in grease and powdered with iron ore, that sparkled like mica—their woolly hair adorned with metallic pendules, and their sole attire a leather apron and a kaross of hide, my mind filled with horror and disgust, combined with anger, at the intense absurdity of my whole position. And yet it was a serious one, for in the end it might be "marry or die."

Nevertheless, I was compelled to dissemble, for the keen, quick eyes of the suspicious savage were fixed upon me with something of stern yet mocking scrutiny, and he haughtily shook the two pinions of the gray crane which adorned the fillet, or species of toque, which was round his head, as he resumed—

"You shall marry my daughter Mariqua, who is of half Griqua blood and in beauty she looks a whole one for the women of the Griquas are, as I need not tell you, more handsome than the women of the Caffres."

Still the prospect was not an alluring one; but I could only bow in silence. The idea occurred to me of asserting that I had a wife already at home; but that would not have made the slightest difference to Sandilli. But I must own to feeling considerably scared by all this, as I soon began to see through the schemes of the chief, who had two cogent reasons for wishing a civilised husband for his youngest daughter—to wit one whose interest might both save and serve him, if, as he greatly feared, the tide of war turned against the insurgent Caffres.

"You shall have a daughter of mine for your wife," continued Sandilli proudly. "Mariqua was to have been the bride of Fitoi, the son of Vonga, but he was slain by the Tortoises. You saved the life of her father, and for that good deed she shall have you, with all her heart obey you, and shed brightness around your kraal. Forty stately horses and a thousand cattle shall be her dowry with uncounted spoil to be taken in the war we are waging."

It is probable that among this spoil Sandilli mentally included the mess plate, baggage, and big drum of the 74th Regiment—indeed, he hinted as much, but still failed to excite my [illegible]

Then as if the subject was settled and dismissed he threw aside his kaross, which was made from the skin of a blackmaned lion, profusely ornamented with beads and scarlet fringes and seating himself in an easy chair wherein whilom some fat Boer had been wont to doze and enjoy his postprandial meerschaum he proceeded to inhale the intoxicating fumes of hemp seed from his dagha pipe.

My whole situation greatly bewildered me.

I was a helpless prisoner in Sandilli's hands, and that his daughter would marry me in spite of myself I never doubted. The faces of the 74th, of the 91st, of Clarice and her sister came before me in memory, and I thought of the wonder and amazement of Europeans when they came to hear of the event—Dick Haddon and his squaw.

How could I rid myself of this odious Mariqua?— how save Clarice Haywood? —How escape this absurd and dangerous thraldom? Besides, my sable bride might have a lover, whose poisoned assegai, launched by a jealous and unerring hand from behind some rock or bush, might soon make an end of me.

I sighed bitterly with grief, impatience, and anger, though the soothing reflection did occur to me at times, that fifty, yea, perhaps, twenty years hence, it would be all one, and a small patch of grass would cover all my sorrows and me

CHAPTER XXXII.

I loved Clarice so truly that this passion made me nervously gentle, tender and true and full of fears for how fate would deal with us, and how all would end.

My cravings to escape, and if possible, to succor her, were intense; but to escape with success a horse and arms were necessary—the latter at least imperatively so. The means of procuring both were sedulously denied me; yet I hoped, by dissembling in the end to obtain both.

After long consultation with myself and finding that Sandilli was inexorable in his resolution to detain me—a resolution which, if I proved very refractory, he might readily change for the more cruel one of destroying me—I resolved to temporise with him, and to dissemble with the artful savage as the only means of saving my life and regaining my liberty.

Moreover he seemed very impatient to have his absurd matrimonial scheme carried out at once, as he was in haste to take the field personally against us once more, for our troops were pressing onward, and to have me despatched further—more hopelessly as it seemed—into the interior of the country.

Somehow, unhappily for myself, he seemed to view me as a kind of hostage, with whom he feared to part.

"I want neither your horses nor your thousand head of cattle. If I marry your daughter it shall be without these bribes," said I, when he was urging this matter for perhaps the hundredth time upon me.

"Agreed; but how will you stock your kraal?"

"With my own hands, if you will but arm me. I shall fight the Tronkvolk of Mark Graaff, and the plundering Amapondas."

"But you will be a friend of the Amatola Caffres?"

"Yes," said I gulping down my intense repugnance.

"Good—wah, wah!" cried the savage chief, as he patted my shoulder; "but in lieu of the fine horses and the fat cattle—"

"I shall ask you to do me one favor."

"And the favor once done you will marry my little daughter Mariqua?"

"Yes," said I, making a very wry face indeed, as I thought of the dark skin, the woolly head, the greased limbs, and tiger-tooth necklaces of my sable intended, for whom I was to jilt my beautiful and delicate Clarice:

"Then name the favor."

"You will free and bring hither the two white ladies who are in the hands of Mark Graaff."

"I shall free them willingly, but I shall not bring them here to the Gulu Valley."

"Why?"

"You shall neither see nor meet them."

"Why do you decide thus?" I asked with irrepressible anxiety.

"I have my reasons," replied Sandilli, with a touring brow. "These women will be pale as the flowers of the mimosa and Mariqua is dark, like the girls of the Koussie."

From this remark I could plainly see that he feared my intended might suffer by comparison.

"If I free those women," added the wily Sandilli, after a pause, "I shall give them as wives or spoil to two of our young Inkosi."

My blood curdled at this proposition, as I knew but too well that if they had already escaped maltreatment at the hands of the bushrangers, they would next be cast on the mercy of savages who had neither pity nor scruple—the Inkosi of the Caffres.

FRECKLES

DON'T HIDE THEM WITH A VEIL; REMOVE THEM WITH THE NEW DRUG.

An eminent skin specialist recently discovered a new drug, othine—double strength, which is so uniformly successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by J. S. McKeown under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first night's use will show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely. It is absolutely harmless, and cannot injure the most tender skin.

Be sure to ask J. S. McKeown for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money back guarantee.

SMART TAILORED HAT

TENDING BABIES

The High Chair, Toys and Proper Breathing

It is a mistake to leave baby loose in his high chair. Make a band of strong calico about two inches wide to go round his waist, and button at the back. Then sew two pieces of wide tape to it, to tie to the back of the chair. This device prevents his standing up in the chair and tumbling over.

Baby's Toys

It is a great mistake to let the baby have toys which will not wash, for whatever his little hands get hold of is sure to go to his mouth. When a toy has been bandied about the nursery for a month, or even a week, it cannot be germ-free, although it may look scarcely soiled. A soft white wool ball is among the best playthings, but care has to be taken not to hang it where baby cannot see it easily, otherwise a squint or some other defect may be developed. Sharp-edged toys, painted toys, toys small enough or soft enough to swallow or chew—all these must be kept strictly away from baby's "playfield."

The Mouth-Breathing Child

When it is noticed that a child is breathing through the mouth more than through the nose, it is a mistake not to take it at once to the doctor. The defective breathing may be due to faulty growth of the cartilage of the nose, or to enlarged tonsils, or to adenoids. Children who have used "comforters" in babyhood are very liable to adenoids, which, however, can be cured by a slight operation. In some cases of mouth-breathing, it may be due merely to a bad habit of keeping the mouth open. When they are old enough to understand, it should be explained to children that the nose acts, to a large extent, as a filter for the air, and that nose-breathing is, for this reason alone much the healthier. When, owing to protruding front teeth, the mouth cannot be properly closed, it is advisable to consult a good dentist.

TONY CRISS IS MISSING

He Has Disappeared With Savings of a Gang of Foreigners With Whom He Contracted for Work

KINSTON, Sept. 4.—Tony Criss, grocer, interpreter for Russian, Polack, Roumanian, Bulgarian and Greek is missing, and with him between $1,200 and $2,000 of workingmen's money, with which he was entrusted. There are also a number of creditors in the city who would be pleased to hear of Tony's whereabouts.

Criss, who up to Saturday night, kept a grocery store and boarding house on Ontario Street in the old Dublin House, was a laboring contractor for the construction work on the railroads in this vicinity. He had been in business for some time and gained the confidence of his simple fellow countrymen. About thirty of these boarded with him and were in the habit of entrusting to him their savings. These amounts ran from $50 to $100, and it is estimated that he had about $1,500.

Sunday night the men paid their bills for the month. Criss waited until every man had paid up, and then taking everything of value in the store, disappeared. This morning Bailiff Clarke was placed in charge of the premises. The assets are valued at nil, consisting of a small quantity of candy, and a half used bottle of shaving lotion. The liabilities, including what he is alleged to have taken from his boarders amounted to over $3,000.

Desperate Convict Escapes From Tombs

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Reynold Frosbrey, accounted one of the most desperate men in the country, and held in the Tombs on double charges of murder, escaped yesterday by breaking out of a cell and scaling the outer wall. Only last Wednesday he made an unsuccessful attempt to escape by sawing through a bar over another cell window.

On July 29th last Frosbrey held up and shot Morris Schwartzkops, a jeweler, in Delancey Street. Schwartzkops died a few hours later, and that same afternoon Frosbrey shot and seriously wounded Max Katz, a clerk in a cigar store.

A keeper noticed that Frosbrey was not in his bunk. The alarm was quickly given, and it was found that Frosbrey had forced the bars in his cell and climbed through the ventilator, six feet from the floor. Once in the neighboring carpenter shop he forced the bars over the window. Climbing through, he had drawn a ladder after him, and made for the wall.

A cell from which Frosbrey escaped was termed an "isolated cell" and was considered the strongest part of the prison. As a further precaution a trusty shared it with him, but the trusty apparently slept soundly throughout the operations.

Killed Defending Honor of Daughters

EL PASO, Texas, Sept. 4.—Murdered while defending the honor of his two Mormon daughters was the fate of Joshua William Stevens, a wealthy landowner in the Mormon colony of Pacheco Chi. President Junius Romney of the Mormon Colonization Company has made a report to Bishop O. P. Brown here, giving the details of the murder of Stevens at his ranch home just outside of Pacheco, in the mountains of western Chihuahua. After the departure of the rebel commands for Sonora a number of the rebel deserters remained in the Mormon country. Two of them came to the house of Stevens at dusk and demanded to see the young women, little more than girls. Suspecting the motives of the two men, Stevens went to the door himself, taking with him his shotgun. When the rebels insisted on seeing his daughters, Stevens by a ruse, drew them into the orchard with the intention of giving the girls a chance to escape. Suspecting this, one of the rebels stabbed him in the back with a sword bayonet and started to run toward the house.

While lying on the ground in a dying condition Stevens fired at the despoiler of his home and killed him instantly. The other one fled. Mrs. Stevens, who was in the house at the time, witnessed the double killing from her window, and rode to the nearest neighbors to give the alarm

A Correction Re-A Superb Cornetist

What was intended as a jocular paragraph appeared in the news columns of last night's paper, "referring to a celebrated musician," which, had it been submitted to the management before being published, would have been suppressed, for the reason that it contained a personal allusion uncalled for and unwarranted, and untrue as far as this paper has any knowledge, the publication of which the publisher regrets.

The gentleman referred to is a Mr. John Lee, who came here, we are informed, at the urgent solicitation of the Oddfellows' Band management, and deserves the encomium which the paragraph bestowed upon him, that he is one of the "most brilliant cornetists that this old town has listened to in many a day," and we hope the band boys may make permanent arrangements to retain him here. It is just such musicians that Belleville needs in her midst.

If the publication of the article referred to has done Mr. Lee any harm we regret it, and hope this explanation will re-establish him in the good opinion of our citizens, which he deserves.

Convicts Rioting in Michigan Prison

JACKSON, Mich., Sept. 3.—Fears are expressed that it will be necessary to call out the state militia to quell the rioting among the convicts of Jackson state prison which has continued unabated since Friday morning, caused by the convicts asking for more and better food.

Rioting continued until early this morning. The guards were busy every minute and not a few experienced narrow escapes in taking desperate men from their cells to the bull pen. Several of the prisoners armed with razors and knives threatened to kill any man who attempted to come inside.

Some were overpowered only by squirting ammonia and formaldehyde into their cells. Two desperate characters had knives fastened to the end of broomsticks and used these as weapons, they jabbing between the bars in an effort to stab the officers.

Most of the windows of the cell block are broken, many prisoners have yelled themselves hoarse, but still desperate, they continue the racket and the more belligerent ones have been thrown into the "bull pen" now filled to the limit.

The prison factories have been shut down since Friday morning and not a wheel has been turned in any of them since.

Rockefeller Threatened By "Black Hand"

TARRYTOWN, Sept. 4—That John D. Rockefeller, richest man in the world; his son, John D., Jr., and his grandchildren are really in grave danger, and that this fact is the real reason for the presence of an armed force of regular guards at the Pocantico Hills estate and also for the oil magnate's hiring of a force of detectives to protect him, was practically admitted here today.

Although doing their best to allay any outward feeling of alarm, and denying that threats had been made, the persons charged with guarding the property here, privately admitted today that an organiezd attempt to blackmail Rockefeller had been made. He has received letters, or at least they have reached his secretaries, demanding that an enormous sum of money be paid to men for immunity from molestation.

These letters are the result of a Black Hand organization which has been operating all through the Croton Lake region. It is expected that among the members are some Italians who have worked on the Rockefeller estate and are perfectly familiar with every foot of the ground and the movements of the family.

The very fact that some of the letters were mailed at Palermo leads the police and detectives to place more reliance in the authenticity of the demands than they would otherwise. Palermo is the headquarters of the real Black Hand, whose name has been borrowed by many isolated blackmailers in this country.

The fact that his grandchildren were specifically mentioned has troubled the oil king more than anything else.

WEST UPHOLDS GOVERNMENT, SAYS SIR JAMES GRANT

Eminent Physician on Return From Extended Trip Through West Says Grain Growers Have Been Greatly Benefited By Policy

OTTAWA, Sept. 4. — Sir James Grant returned to the city Saturday after a long journey throughout the Western country to the Pacific, to look into the problem of public health and tuberculosis specially.

He found the ravages of consumption being considerably lessened by the skilled activity of the profession, and the assistance given to the public by pamphlets widely published and circulated on this subject.

A Journal reporter asked Sir James the following question: How does the Government stand with the farmers of the West?

"The action of the Government," he said, "in arranging last winter preparation for Western harvests, by stimulating railroads, for better equipment than last year, inlcuding 500 locomotives, and over 20,000 cars more than previous, year also extensive improvements in road, bed terminals and oher facilities, is most warmly appreciated by Western farmers.

"The Minister of Finance, Mr. White struck a strong note with the agriculturists generally, in arranging, for an extension of the period during which the emergency circulation of the banks is permissible, one month each way.

"In the West, Hon. Frank Cockrane is looked upon as the John Brown of the present Government, the working man's friend, a man of few words but vigorous action. The reception of Rt. Hon. Mr. Borden, in England is warmly appreciated throughout the entire west. The country generally looks favorable for this year's crop, and the indications of progress are truly remarkable.

TORONTO'S REQUEST FOR A PROBE INTO MEAT QUESTION

The following is Toronto's memorial asking the Governor-in-Council for an inquiry into the alleged meat trust:

The petition of the undersigned, the Corporation of the City of Toronto, humbly sheweth:

That, whereas your petitioner believes that the supply and distribution of meat, within the city of Toronto and throughout the Dominion of Canada, is regulated and controlled by an agreement or understanding among the various dealers therein, whereby the prices to the consumer are unduly enhanced and sustained and kept at excessive rates through illegal and improper methods by such persons, and that such agreement and methods constitute a menace to the health and prosperity of the citizens of this city and of the Dominion;

That the means employed by persons, firms and corporations engaged in the said trade are illegal and improper and exercise an illegal restraint upon the buying and selling of meat;

That your petitioner believes that these conditions prevail to such an extent that the whole matter should be investigated, and, if the facts are found to be as above indicated, that the proper remedy should be applied.

Wherefore your petitioner humbly prays that your Excellency may be pleased to sanction the appointment of a Royal Commission to thoroughly investigate the whole meat question in the Dominion of Canada, with a view to the Government taking such measures as may be deemed necessary to prevent the illegitimate restraint of trade by the use of improper methods affecting the price of meat.

And as in duty bound your petitioner will ever pray.

FACTS WORTH REMEMBERING

Stains on unvarnished wood may be removed by rubbing with lemon and salt.

Coffee stains can be removed by a solution of lukewarm water and the yolk of an egg.

Nickel-silver may be kept bright by rubibng with a woollen cloth diped in spirits of ammonia.

Keep a separate saucepan for cooking all green vegetables, etc.; do not allow it to be used for stews, etc.

For stopping a leak in a cask, beat up some whiting with common yellow soap. If this mixture is well rubed into the leak, it will be found to stop it after everything else has failed.

Care of carpets.—Remember to sweep carpets the way of the nap; to brush the other way is to brush the dust in. Attend to all stains as soon as possible. If left they will soak into the carpet and be very difficult to remove.

Metal Teapots which are not used for some time are apt to become musty. This may be prevented by dropping a lump of sugar into the pot before putting it away.

Stains on books.—Chloride of lime will take all stains out of paper. Of course the leaf will become white, and to bring it back to the color of the book use a stain of coffee, or tobacco, or chicory, or for some shades a drop or two of blue ink. Use a teaspoonful of chloride to a pint of water. The leaf should be washed or passed through clean water after the chloride, or else the paper will be rotted.

THIRTEEN YEARS

Unlucky Number for Dakota Woman.

The question whether the number "13" is really more unlucky than any other number has never been entirely settled.

A So. Dak. woman, after thirteen years of misery from drinking coffee, found a way to break the "unlucky spell." Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the drug in coffee. She writes:

"For thirteen years I have been a nervous wreck from drinking coffee. My liver, stomach, heart—in fact, my whole system being actually poisoned by it.

"Last year I was confined to my bed for six months. Finally it dawned on me that coffee caused the trouble. Then I began using Postum instead of coffee but with little faith, as my mind was in such a condition that I hardly knew what to do next.

"Extreme nervousness and failing eyesight caused me to lose all courage. In about two weeks after I quit coffee and began to use Postum, I was able to read and my head felt clear. I am improving all the time and I will be a strong well woman yet.

"I have fooled more than one person with a delicious cup of Postum. Mrs. S. wanted to know where I bought my fine coffee. I told her my grocer had it and when she found out it was Postum she has used it ever since, and her nerves are building up fine.

"My brain is strong, my nerves steady, my appetite good, and best of all, I enjoy such sound, pleasant sleep." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor Ont. Get the little book in pkg, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a Reason."

HOW SINGLE TAX HAS WORKED IN VANCOUVER

Vancouver World.

Without divulging the source of its information or attempting to give any explanation for its observation, the Toronto Globe the other day in a news article made the comment: "Vancouver, which is pointed to with pride by single-tax advocates it is now stated is about to depart from the newer method of assessment under a restive feeling by the citizens and fall back on the older system."

A similar article appeared in the Toronto Star the previous day.

Well, if there is any such sentiment on the part of any considerable part of Vancouver's citizens to revert to the old method of taxing improvements, they are carefully with holding their views.

We have not heard of any such agitation or change of ideas.

The World, apart from any sympathies it has with the single tax system, takes a certain amount of pride in keeping up with the news in its home town, and should, consequently, be in a better position to know the trend of events here than any Toronto paper.

We reiterate that if there is any serious consideration being given in this city to the puerile arguments advanced against the taxing of land values only and exempting improvements, by a few speculators who do not like the idea, we know nothing of it.

Some of the opponents of the system have evidently been taking their own views as a criterion of the general feeling of the citizens of Vancouver and passing them along to the anti-single tax adherents in Eastern Canada. In Ontario at the present time there is quite an agitation in favor of the abolition of taxes on improvements. Several of the Eastern papers have actively taken up the question and, presumably, the articles in the two Toronto papers referred to, were either inspired by the anti-single taxers in that city, or were based on assertions which were thought authoritative.

The article in which the excerpt quoted above occurs, was written in connection with a prospective trip of investigation to be made by Assessment Commissioner Forman of Toronto. After stating that the pending alleged change would not deter him from making a trip to the Pacific coast, Mr. Forman is quoted as remarking: "The fact that Vancouver intends to forsake her present assessment system makes the trip more necessary than ever .. .. ..If Vancouver cannot manage on the single tax proposition, we want to know before making any experiments here."

The Ottawa Citizen devoted a two column article a few weeks ago to the growth of the single tax spirit in Western Canada and what the writer of the story had to say about Vancouver, in view of the unsupported conclusions arrived at by the Toronto papers, has an added interest and supports our contentions. A representative of an Eastern paper can be regarded as fairly unprejudiced and his views consequently should carry some weight. He comments:

"While in the city (Vancouver) the writer interviewed many prominent persons concerning the working of the principle, and found it in almost universal favor. The justice of the principle enunciated by Henry George that since all wealth comes from the land, land must be the only natural and equitable basis of taxation, and that whatever society produces society should possess, has evidently impressed itself very deeply and favorably upon the people of Vancouver during the last sixteen years."

The article quoted above was written quite recently and affords a very effective retort to the observations made by our eastern contemporaries.

Sunlight Battery Makes Electricity

LONDON, Sept. 4.—A sensation has been caused by the announcement of a French inventor that he has succeeded in producing a battery by which sunshine can be stored and transformed into electricity. There appears to be no doubt that his claim is well founded, but the invention would seem at present to have progressed no further than the experimental stage.

The inventor in question, though a Frenchman, has an English name, Chas. Winter. His battery consists of two thin plantinum plates, one of which dips into a solution of perchloride of iron, the other being in contact with a mercury salt. When placed in the sunlight a chemical change takes place in the contents of the battery and charges it with electricity.

When the current is used up it leaves the battery in its original condition again and it is ready for the life-giving sunshine once more.

There are tremendous possibilities if the invention can be perfected.

With a battery of five hundred large cells placed on the roof during the day it would, it is stated, be possible to store enough electricity, through the agency of the sunlight, to keep six lamps going at night. This has alrady been proved.

It is not absolutely necessary that there should be sunshine the whole time. Ordinarily daylight will achieve the same result, the inventor asserts.

A Chinese War In Vancouver

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 4.—Agitated by rumors of a battle in China representatives of the two Chinese factions in Vancouver rioted in market lane last night. Throughout the day the Orientals had hovered about the bulletin boards and their excitement increased toward evening until finally about three hundred of them gave combat using clubs and stones with disastrous effect.

Numerous heads were broken and windows in Chinatown were smashed indiscriminately. Although many of the combatants were carried away disabled by members of their respective tongs it is believed, none were killed.

Collection of Old Almanacs

HUTCHINSON, Kan., Sept. 4.—Mrs. Lois Miller of this town admits that she is like other women who have fads for collecting things of little value. Mrs. Miller's fad is that of a collector of almanacs. She has a complete set of these booklets dating back to the year 1821.

In the years between 1820 and 1845 the almanacs were as important in the home as the family Bible. They were not given away as they are today. That was before the patent medicine makers had annexed the almanac business. Mrs. Miller says that many in her collection sold for twenty-five and fifty cents each.

These early day almanacs were not larger than the present patent medicine brand, but instead of being filled with testimonials they contained recipes, proverbs, admonitions, essays and usually a sermon or two, the almanacs of the '20s never ventured to have light vein. Alleged jokes were barred then.

As shown by Mrs. Miller's collection, the almanac makers veered to the funny side, although they carefully labelled their jokes as "Anecdotes" or "Bon Mots." Here is a sample of the almanac humor of those days from the Farmers' Diary of 1830, published at Canandaigua, N. Y.:

"'Who may that be?' said an Irishman to a bystander, as they stood looking at a fellow who was staggering along the street.

"'His name is Cobb!' was the reply.

"'Cobb!' rejoined Pat, 'by my soul he seems to be pretty essentially corned.'"

In Mrs. Miller's collection are these interesting old documents: The Ontario Almanac, published at Canandaigua, N. Y., 1821; the Farmers' Diary published at the same place the Western Almanac of Rochester N. Y., 1839; the Columbia Calendar of Troy, N. Y., 1831; the American Anti Slavery Almanac of Cincinnati, 1841; the Health Almanac of New York City, 1842; Rosser's Western Almanac, Lafayette, Ind., 1847; the Dutch-English Almanac, Richmond, Ind., 1847, and Everybody's Almanac Dayton, O., 1846.

Probably the most interesting from a historical standpoint is the Anti-Slavery Almanac, this was issued by the Ohio Anti-Slavery Society at Cinicinnati, and was full of essays and sermonettes against slavery.

On the cover of this booklet is a crude wood cut depicting negro slaves toiling in the field. A white man and woman passing by are viewing this scene and the woman remarks "Poor things." The picture is labelled. "They can't take care of themselves"

Articles and arguments against slavery throughout this ancient almanac are headed, Can Slaves Feel? "Do They Have the Sense of Human Feeling?" "Will the Slaves, if Emancipated, Cut Their Masters' Throats?" "Should We Pray For the Slaves?"

This old Anti-Slavery Almanac gives a list of Southern slave holders who during the year 1841 had freed their slaves. Some of those in the list and the number of slaves each emancipated are:

David Minge, Charles City, Va., 88; John Adamson, Virginia, 51; William Hansborough, Culpeper, Va. 60; Col. Monroe Edwards, Ibersville, La., 63; David A. Smith, Courtlandsville, Ala., 21; the Rev. Mr. Brisbane Charlestown, S. C., 26.

Political conditions, as shown by this almanac were not unlike those of today. After urging the Abolitionists to vote for neither of the presidential candidates, Van Buren or Gen. Harrison, it pointed out that it was going to be necessary to form a "third party."

The first patent medicine testimonial appeared in Jaynes, Almanac, in 1857. W. L. Somerwell of Tulip, Ark., testifies that he tried some of this medicine on one of his slave women. "She has fully recovered," he writes, "and although she was worthless to me for over a year because of this rheumatism she is now strong as ever and I sold her yesterday for $300."

ADDITIONAL TRAIN SERVICE

An evident determination to give to the people of Belleville the best possible railway facilities is apparent in the new time tables of the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway which have recently been issued.

Four new trains, two in and two out, solid vestibuled and superbly equipped, as all Canadian Northern Ontario Railway trains are, will be added to the Belleville service.

These four trains will not only benefit the general traveling public to and from Belleville, but also the Belleville business man, who deals with the neighboring towns of Trenton, Napanee and Picton. These towns are all situated within a convenient distance of the city and the addition of four trains should be indeed a move toward making Belleville a busy centre from the railway point of view.

A change of time in the Toronto service which will be welcomed, has also been announced. The business man may now leave Napanee at 6.00 a.m., Belleville at 7.00 a.m., arriving in Toronto at 11.00 a.m., thus giving him a long afternoon in the city during banking hours, returning on the 5.40 p.m. from the Union station in the Queen City.

Fall From Car Kills Student.

St. Catharines, Sept. 5.—John H. Leffer, third year medical student at Columbia University, who had been spending the summer at the Y.M.C.A. camp at Port Dalhousie, was instantly killed at a late hour Tuesday night while attempting to board a street car at the corner of Thomas street. It is thought he lost his grasp, fell to the tracks, and fractured his skull.

He was a son of P. M. Leffer, New York City, and a nephew of Ald. W. B. Burgoyne, and formerly resided in this city.

An investigation will be opened before Coroner Jory to-morrow.

Two Shot at Sharivari.

Kingston, Sept. 5.—When a shotgun exploded at a charivari party at Wolfe Island yesterday, Francis Baker and William Kiell, two young men, were seriously injured. They are now in the Hotel Dieu, but will recover.

Miss Shea, daughter of Michael Shea, was married to James Barry, both being well known islanders, and by the way of a send-off Baker and Kiell used the rifle. Doctors are busy with the X-ray locating the shot. One received 13 shots in the shoulder and the other 12 in the head.

WEDDING BELLS.

HOLLAND—STRATTON.

St. Mark's Church Deseronto, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday morning, August 31st, 1912, when Ethel May, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Stratton, was united in marriage with Mr. Gordon Holland, second son of Mr. W. H. Holland, of Toronto. Rev. J. J. Carpenter, of Ivy, Ont., officiated in the absence of the rector, the service being fully choral. The bride entered the church with her father to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Hall organist of the church. The bride was lovely in her wedding gown of white satin, with overdress of ninon and veil of Brussels net arranged with Juliet cap and orange blossoms. She also wore a beautiful pearl and amethyst bar pendant, the gift of the groom ,and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Violet Thurston, of Toronto, was charming in a dainty gown of pink satin, and carried pink roses, the groom's gift to her being a pearl ring. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Norman Holland, of Toronto; the groom's gift to him was a pearl pin. After the ceremony the wedding dejeuner was served at the home of the bride's parents, only the immediate relatives being present. After the usual toasts the bride donned a smart travelling gown of navy blue serge with touches of cerise and hat to match. They left on the afternoon train for the Kawartha Lakes, where they will spend their honeymoon.

CORRIGAN—GALLIVAN

A pretty wedding took place at St. Alphonsus Church, Wooler, yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, when Margaret Gallivan, a most popular young lady of the Township of Murray, daughter of Patrick Gallivan, and Dennis J. Corrigan of the local police force, were united in marriage by the Rev. Father McFadden. The bride was attired in a tuscan silk dress, with hat to match, and carried a gold rosary and white prayer book the gift of the groom.

Miss Margaret Heinrick, of this city, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. John Corrigan, brother of the groom, did honors for the groom. At the conclusion of the nuptial mass the party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was partaken of.

The bride was the recipient of numerous and valuable gifts in silver, cut glass, and other articles, showing the high esteem in which she is held by her many friends.

The groom's present to the bridesmaid was a pear crescent pin, and to the groomsman engraved cuff links.

Mr. and Mrs. Corrigan left on the evening train for Toronto and western points where they will spend their honeymoon, and on their return will take up their residence in this city.

The bride travelled in a navy blue suit and white hat.

INTEREST IN ALL-STAR COURSE.

Great interest is being displayed by the public in the Artists Series which has been arranged for this city and which will be inaugurated by David Bispham on Sept. 16th. At the present time, judging by the enquiries for course tickets, the entire house will be almost completely sold out for each concert of the Course, before the single seats are placed on sale.

This is not surprising when one considers that at each concert a leading star of the musical world will be presented, and that the tickets for the whole series have been placed at a price which should secure to the local management the moral and financial support of each and every music-loving citizen.

David Bispham, the first star to appear, is recognized not only on this continent, but abroad as well, as one of the greatest artists of this generation. His voice, a rich baritone, is of a beautiful quality, and his wonderful dramatic and interpretive powers make his singing a rare treat.

For the second concert a star of no less magnitude than Nordica has been secured. The greatest dramatic soprano in the world, her name is known and loved wherever music is known. She brings Rummel, the distinguished violinist, with her.

The third attraction will be Mme. Mary Hallock, one of the great pianists of the younger generation, who is making her first American tour. Madame Hallock is one of the far too few pianists, who believes that piano music should speak to the soul and not be made merely an excuse for a display of digital dexterity.

The subscription list will be open at noon to-morrow at Doyle's Drug Store. Course tickets $3; best seats.

CARPENTIER'S LIFE

The Welterweight Champion Tells His Own History

When I was qutie a baby—said George Carpentier, the welterweight champion of Europe—I used to startle my parents by the terrific punches I gave to other children—quite unintentionally, however. At the age of nine I joined a gymnastic society, presided over by my present manager, M. Descamps.

Although we children were strictly forbidden to box, I was caught one day having a few rounds with a youngster about twice as big as myself. Descamps gave me a good scolding, but he couldn't help admiring the way I "wiped the floor" with my adversary, and promised to give me a few lessons. After the third, his mind was made up. But my parents had very different ideas about my future.

The time had come for me to begin my apprenticeship as a "pit-boy" at twenty a day. If I had done as they wanted, I might have been "on strike" now.

His First Foe a Stable-Lad

Descamps came to the rescue. He offered to pay my parents the amount of the wages I should have received, if they would let him take me in hand for six months. I don't think they have ever regretted, as they now own a good hotel which I bought them for $20,000.

My first prize was one of $60, offered by Tom Hunt, at Maisons-Laffitte. There are some good boxers among the stable-lads employed there, but I managed to beat them, after a hard struggle.

I needn't tell you anything about my big matches, as you probably know as much about them as I do; besides, "the lookers-on see most of the game," don't they?

Have I ever been knocked out? Yes, but it was the English Channel that did it. The day I crossed to match Young Josephs I was as sick as a dog. If I had been obliged to box the same day, a child could have knocked me out in one round. The next time I cross, I'll ask one of our flying men to take me over.

I had a narrow escape, too, when I was giving exhibition bouts with Jack Johnson. Unintentionally, I think, he caught me a hook on the jaw that staggered me, but I countered with an uppercut which seemed to be a revelation to him.

Learned Useful Trick

Of course, I know he could have pulverized me if he had wanted to, but we didn't continue the sparring bouts. I was not sorry, as I must have cut a ridiculous figure beside the "black giant," but I learned some useful tricks from him.

I have always learned a good deal by watching other boxers, especially my future adversaries. When you know the style and quality of a boxer, you hold two trump cards. Always try and draw first blood—it helps to demoralize your opponent.

My training—spread over the whole day—occupies about two hours. I dine at seven every evening, and after dinner I pass the time as pleasantly as I can until half-past ten, which is my bed-time. It's all pretty easy, isn't it? Do I smoke? Yes, one cigaret a day, on the sly, but I don't tell my trainer!

Up to the present the greatest difficulty I have had has been to keep my weight down. Thank goodness I am now in the heavy brigade and can enjoy a square meal!

I was five ounces over weight when I stepped into the scales before my match with Harry Lewis, and had to pay $400 forfeit. That beats old Shylock's pound of flesh, doesn't it?

What are my favorite blows? Well, if you'll just put on the gloves I'll give you a practical demonstration.

Muttering something about an "urgent appointment," I hastily took leave of the youthful prodigy. I am not, like the future world's champion insured for $50,000.— P. Doubleyou.

FOUR USEFUL HINTS

To clean soiled wallpaper, take half a loaf of bread and gently rub the soiled portions, working always in a downward direction. As soon as the bread is soiled, cut off a thin slice.

To clean picture frames and glasses, wash with warm water with a teaspoonful of ammonia to a quart of water. For gilt frames, use the water in which onions have been boiled, as it will restore their brightness. Loose dust that has settled on frames and mouldings may be removed with a flannel or cheesecloth.

If the seats of caned chairs are sagging, turn them upside down and wash well with soapy water, soaking so as to thoroughly wet them, and in drying they will stiffen to almost, if not quite, their normal condition.

To kill moths in carpets on the floor spread a cold, damp cloth on the carpet, iron it with a hot iron, and the steam thus will kill the moths.

THE IDEAL LIGHT

According to scientists, the least injurious of present-day illuminants is the acetylene flame, for the reason that it is the nearest approach to the character of daylight. For reading or writing purposes the oil lamp or candle are by far the best, because of their soft, yellow light. Daylight, of course, is the ideal. It is a mixture of all colors, and, as far as the eyes are concerned, the green, yellowish rays predominate. It is the invisible and ultra-violet rays that are so harmful.

TO REVIVE PLANTS

When watering window plants we always add about a teaspoonful of sal volatile to every two pints of water, and find that it is of great benefit to them. It has sometimes revived plants that have apparently had no life left in them.

AN IRONING HINT

When ironing collars, place a round cake-tin in the oven, if cool, and put the collars in as you iron them. This keeps them a nice round shape and dries them thoroughly. Keep the oven door open all the time.

Australia—Right Hon. Sir George Reid Speaks

The Right Hon. Sir George Reid, High Commissioner, and Agent General of Australia, spoke at a complimentary luncheon tendered him in Toronto the other day and outlined in brief fashion the significance of the continent he represented in resources, trade and business relations of the Empire and the world. Many facts regarding this land lying away to the east which were hitherto but little recognized or appreciated by many Canadians were brought to light and the marvelous growth of Australia in later years and a comparison of her progress with that of Canada brought surprise to his hearers.

100,000,000 SHEEP.

It was an enlightenment to learn that Australia was not only the greatest sheep-raising country in the world, pasturing to-day in the region of 100 million animals, but that a million head more cattle were raised yearly than in Canada. Further, the commonwealth contributed as many horses to world markets.

POPULATION.

The present population is 4½ millions and growing abnormally. Immigrants are pouring in in a steady stream and these, as a whole, are of sound stock from the British Isles.

"To secure steerage passage from London to-day one must book six months ahead," he declared.

In the absence of foreign settlements the commonwealth differed in population from Canada. Sir George attributed this to the distance to be traveled by sea.

MORE ACREAGE THAN UNITED STATES.

Two facts the Commissioner wished particularly to establish in reference to his country. Australia as a country embraced more acreage than the United States and was at no period of the year snowed up. Only at one point did snow fall to a large extent and that caused no inconvenience.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE A SUCCESS.

In reply to a query as to Woman Suffrage he stated that it was a success in the Commonwealth.

"Women have a vote the same as men in Federation and State matters," he said, "and in all branches the influence is good."

"Lady candidates run for office," he said, "but thus far none have got in."

He stated that this privilege had been gained without resort to violence whatever.

THE NAVAL QUESTION.

Referring to the naval policy he said: "The Canadian Ministers made splendid loyal statements in London recently, and the Empire is now watching anxiously for the postscript in the way of results." The Ministers had impressed upon all Englishmen that their loyalty was genuine, and they were well advised to remain silent as to results until the Cabinet met at Ottawa. "We are all hoping that Canada with her great strength and prosperity will do something permanent and immediate to relieve the strain of Empire at the greatest point of tension—the protection of the flag on the high seas. We have trusted to Providence too long."

True, Sir George, Canadians have indulged in no little talking in the past. Under the Right Hon. leader of the present Government he may look forward at no distant day for "something permanent and immediate" being done "to relieve the strain of Empire at the greatest point of tension—the protection of the flag on the high seas."

English Privy Council

Telegrams from London, England, of the 3rd inst. indicate that there is to be a second attempt to strengthen the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, whose decisions in the past have been far from satisfactory to the colonies, shortly after the reassembling of Parliament. Reports which appeared in the Canadian press claiming that Lord Chancellor Haldane proposed to add the name of Chief Justice Fitzpatrick to the active body, are purely imaginary. The personnel of the Committee will apparently remain the same. To meet the particular needs of the dominions is is understood that assessors possessing special knowledge of the points at issue will be admitted and will assist their Lordships in arriving at decisions.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier will start on a stumping tour on the 7th Sept. What new tale he is going to tell the people is not yet known. A report to the Trade and Commerce Department at Ottawa from J. E. Ray, Commissioner at Birmingham, England, shows that ten years ago 13,000 tons of butter went from Canada to England. Twelve months ago it fell to 776 tons. There was not sufficient Canadian butter on the market to secure an official quotation. The situation is attributable to increasing home consumption. In regard to cheese the record is similar. It says: "In the past ten years Canadian imports have fallen off by 15,000 tons, while New Zealand imports have increased to the extent of 22,000 tons. The statements made in Canada by those who know the cheese trade there, that Canada will cease to export by the year 1916, though of an alarmist character, may have some foundation, in view of the enormous rate of increase in her population, mostly by immigration."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Poison Ivy and How to Fight it

By DR. EDITH B. LOWRY.

During the summer and fall months, when people love to roam th woods, to get close to Mother Nature, one of their worst enemies is poison ivy or poison oak. The two plants vary considerably in appearance, but are similar in effects and in their poisonous propensities. The latter is a short stocky plant, while the former is a climbing shrub, whose stem often rises to a great height upon trees, rocks and other objcts to wehich it adheres by strong rooting fibres. The leaves of the poison ivy usually are divided into three leaflets, each about four inches long. The leaves are pointed and coarsely notched along the edge while the surface is more or less downy. In some instances the leaves are five lobed, so the plant is more liable to be confused with other varieties of ivy.

The leaves contain an oil which is very irritating and poisonous to the skin. There are a few persons who are immune to the effects of this poison and can handle the leaves or chew them with no bad effects but these people are rare. The majority are easily affected by contact with the leaves. It is claimed by some that they became poisoned by being in the vicinity of the vine without actually touching it. It is probable that these people really did come in contact with some leaf although it is possible that the poisonous matter could be carried by dust that had first settled on the poisonous leaves and then been blown to the person's skin.

Effect of Poison

The effect of the poison is to produce an eruption of the skin which resembles eczema or even erysipelas. Minute vesicles appear and the parts become red and swollen. There is considerable itching and burning In some cases there are systematic effects as abdominal pain, nausea, and vomiting. The eruption may appear in a few hours after contact with the plant or not until after a lapse of several days. The face and hands are the parts usually affected first, probably because they are more liable to contact with the leaves. The poison may spread to other parts of the body by contact. A person with his hands affected is liable to carry the poison to his eyes or any part of the body.

The treatment is first to get rid of the poison clinging to the parts. As the poison is contained in an oil, water will not wash it off. The parts should be bathed with alcohol or with an alkaline solution. After bathing some soothing lotion should be applied as a boracic-acid solution or a weak solution of carbolic acid. Lead water is one of the best known remedies. Ointments and oily applications should not be used, as they tend to dissolve the poison and will spread it to other parts of the body. The erruption and other symptons usually disappear within ten days, with no bad effects.

Poison ivy is sometimes used as a drug, and is very useful in indicated conditions in small doses.

ANOTHER APPEAL FOR HARVESTERS.

On account of the urgent appeal from the West for additional Farm Laborers, the Grand Trunk Railway have decided to run two more Farm Laborers' excursions on September 4th and 6th from all stations in Canada.

The rate to Winnipeg is $10.00 plus half cent mile from Winnipeg to destination but not beyond MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

RETURNING half cent mile to Winnipeg, plus $18.00 to destination in Eastern Canada. The farmers along the Grand Trunk Pacific pay the maximum wage and this is an excellent chance for young men to visit the West.

The route via Chicago is an attractive one, as many large cities and towns are passed enroute, which breaks the monotony of the journey, as there is something new to see all the time. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is the shortest and quickest route between Winnipeg-Saskatoon-Edmonton.

AN OCEAN OF WHISKEY MADE IN THE UNITED STATES

(New York Herald.)

Out of the "high cost of living" clouds comes a bright and cheering ray for many of the one hundred million inhabitants of the United States and its insular possessions. One of the "necessaries"—as far as millions of persons are concerned—gives promise of being cheaper.

According to official reports from the distillery centres received by New York dealers yesterday, there will be a superabundance of whiskey for the next year at least.

This "joyful" tiding is backed by 263,785,836 gallons of real whiskey actually in the distillery and bonded warehouses of the country. It was there at the close of business yesterday. And what is giving the trade grave concern is that much of it is likely to remain in those structures for many moons.

Just what total amount of alleged whiskey this means eventually will be doled out to the consuming public is a problem. It is said that there are hundreds of saloons in New York City into which a barrel of genuine whiskey seldom or never enters. The plain inference is that what they sell as whiskey is a concoction manufactured on the premises.

But the distillers' reports would indicate that there is no reason for the adulteration of whiskey or manufacture of an imitation for the next year or so. The whiskey output for 1912 is 174,535,060 gallons, more than two million gallons in excess of that of 1911, which was considered a year of extreme overproduction.

This grand total of 263,785,836 gallons in warehouses does not include the millions of gallons in wholesale and retail houses, in saloons, hotels and private homes. These stocks would swell the total figures to more than 300,000,000 gallons of whiskey alone.

That means that there are three gallons of whiskey each for every man, woman and child living under the American flag. Taking into consideration that few women and virtually no children drink, and that the average family consists of one man, one woman and five children, each man, if this great stock of whiskey were distributed, would have for his own personal use in the next twelve months about twenty-one gallons.

Considering that not one man out five drinks to any great extent, the most bibulously inclined ones would seem to be assured that they will have about one hundred gallons apiece to get along on until the 1913 flood begins from the bonded warehouses.

In a gallon of whiskey there are about 100 ordinary drinks. Based on the average size, the intimates of John Barleycorn may depend upon 10,000 drinks for the next year, or 30 a day each. So it would seem that they need have no fear of a "drought."

Extending the calculations to the total visible supply, Uncle Sam will have enough 'red licker' to dispense 26,378,583,600 drinks within the next year.

The 1912 output makes two records. It is the biggest production in the history of the country, and it has resulted in the accumulation of the greatest stocks that have ever been piled up in the warehouses. In 1911 the total production for the United States was 172,221,716 gallons. Stocks in the bonded warehouses were:—Distillery warehouses, 247,012,000; in general bonded warehouses, 2,267,346 gallons; total, 249,379,346 gallons.

Leading distillers of Kentucky yesterday sent out warnings to the trade of this excessive output for 1912. One of the biggest concerns in the business issued a statement bearing in flaming red the head lines "The Overproduction Burden."

From the standpoint of profit for the distillers and the wholesalers a gloomy view is taken. Glutting of the markets in previous years of overproduction is cited and the greatest of precaution in handling the situation this year is urged. The statement of this distillery says in part:—

"These enormous figures of supply become still more ponderous when it is realized that the withdrawal outlets that should diffuse them are abnormally deflected. A great bulk of these accumulated warehouse stocks are practically cut off from normal distribution. Consumptive demand—the public's demand—for whiskey is theoretically focused thereon. This demand for whiskey is intercepted in great volume by the continuous tide of new grain distillates annually poured into the market from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and other grain producing states. This intercepting stream is always statistically invisible in the records of stored supply. It is shipped as it is made. It is gigantically visible in the withdrawals. It practically gluts them, as it goes to the ultimate consumer under the color and nomenclature of the genuine aged whiskey which it simulates and displaces.

"Before the youngest whiskeys now in the 263,785,836 gallons of the bonded stocks of distilled spirits shall have become even four years of age, more than 263,000,000 gallons of this substitute (yet unproduced) will have made its appearance, to be poured while new (and therefore never a visible part of the regularly stored warehouse supply) into immediate consumption to congest anew the channels of distribution and intercept the normal withdrawals of bonded or stored stocks."

Your first mouthful of these crisp brown sweethearts of corn will make you wish you had long ago made an everyday habit of eating this cereal confection. 58

Kellogg's TOASTED CORN FLAKES

Many Days Adrift Off Wintry Cape

LONDON, Sept. 3.—A detailed story of the sufferings of the crew of the Carnarvon sailing vessel Crittieth Castle, which was sunk off Cape Horn in July, has reached Wales. The vessel's rudder post gave way and damaged the ship to such an extent that she had to be abandoned. Captain Thomas and his wife and their four-year-old son, the second officer, and thirteen of the crew took to the lifeboat. The first and third officers and five of the crew took to a smaller boat. The latter disappeared during the night and was never seen again.

That same night Captain Thomas was washed overboard out of the lifeboat, but his wife gripped him by his clothes and held on till two of the crew came to her assistance and dragged him back. Three of the crew died during the night, and three others before they reached land, seven days later. Thus thirteen altogether perished.

The sufferings of the survivors in the winter seas off the Horn was terrible. The boat leaked all the time and the cold was intense. They became weaker every day. Finally they sighted Cape Pembroke lighthouse on July 22, and were able to get near enough to catch ropes thrown by the lighthouse keeper and his assistants. This was about all they possibly could do, and the effort left every one of the shipwrecked people exhausted. Some of them, indeed, were completely helpless, and had to be dragged out of the boat. The clothes had to be cut off the six dead men. The second officer soon died, and some of the others are in a critical condition. Captain and Mrs. Thomas and their child are recovering.

Becker Case Set For Sept. 14.

New York, Sept. 4.—On the application of District Attorney Whitman, the case of Police Lieut. Charles Becker, charged with the murder of Herman Rosenthal, was transferred yesterday from the Court of General Sessions to the criminal branch of the Supreme Court before Justice J. W. Goff, sitting in extraordinary term. Justice Goff granted the application agreeing not only that Becker should be tried before him, but that he should plead to the indictment before him.

Becker was arraigned before Justice Goff for pleading shortly before eleven o'clock, but still refused to plead on his counsel's advice that the indictment had been "improperly and illegally found." A technical plea of not guilty was then entered.

Justice Goff quickly overruled four motions brought by Mr. McIntyre to obtain a delay and set the trial for Thursday, Sept. 12.

MAY REVOLUTIONIZE OYSTER FARMING

One of the most important discoveries that has ever been made with respect to oyster culture was explained for the first time to the Committee on Fisheries of the Commission of Conservation by Dr. Joseph Stafford of McGill University, who made the discovery as the result of many years' close scientific investigation. The great difficulty in oyster culture heretofore has been the inability to determine the exact time when the swimming oyster eggs are ready to sink to the bottom to attach themselves to hard, clean bodies called cultch, put there for that purpose. This cultch, which usually consists of old oyster shells, has to be put in the water only a few hours before the young oysters sink or it becomes slimy and useless. Dr. Stafford, after years of patient investigation, has discovered a means of telling just when the eggs are ready to sink to the bottom, so that the oyster farmer knows the exact time he should put down the cultch. The committee passed a resolution recommending that the Government instruct fishermen how to apply Dr. Stafford's discovery.

A REAL PIONEER

Resident of Kenora Traversed West Nearly Seven Decades Ago

It is sixty-six years since Mr. R. J. N. Pither, Kenora's grand old man, who is now approaching the eighty-seventh milestone of life, first sighted the spot where Kenora now stands. He was then but twenty-one years of age, and was taking the trip in the interest of the Hudson Bay Company, with whom he had formed an early connection. Accompanied by a small brigade composed of white men, half-breeds and Indians, the start was made from Lachine, Que., on April 19th, 1846, en route to York Factory, Hudson Bay. Gaining this point, they rested for some time, later wending their way up the Saskatchewan River to Edmonton before making the return journey, which found them again in Lachine in September of the same year. At the Hudson's Bay fort at Fort William the party travelled overland to where Fort Frances now stands, thence down the Rainy River and through the Lake of the Woods and Winnipeg River to Lake Winnipeg.

Many considered it a perilous trip in those days to voyageurs in their frail crafts, but Mr. Pither recalls this initial trip as one brimful of pleasant adventure.

Real Marathon In the Alps

LUCERNE, Sept. 4.—A Marathon race up a mountain in the Swiss Alps is a test of endurance to which only the most vigorous among professional mountaineers would dare to submit themselves.

The first event of this kind took place the other day, and despite the obvious difficulties, proved a great success. The mountain selected was the Stanserhorn, 1,236 feet above the sea level, and the difference in altitude to be covered was roughly 4,700 feet; the starting point, the little town of Sans, being some 1,500 feet above the sea.

About 1,500 spectators took the funicular railway up the mountainside, or made a leisurely ascent on foot to cheer the winner, who proved to be Karl Hug, a young Swiss Alpinist of Alpnach, his time being 1 hour and 4 minutes. The second arrival took eight minutes longer, and the last of the fifty-two competitors finished forty-five minutes later.

The promoter of the race was a wealthy German who had offered valuable prizes and who rather fancied himself for the championship. He was greeted with sympathetic cheers when he arrived, puffing and blowing, at the goal half an hour after the last competitor, and innocently asked "if any of them had been sighted yet."

LADY TENNIS PLAYERS NEVER DO VOLLEYING

Mrs. George L. Chapman Comments on Small Class of Women Experts

The question of volleying by women lawn tennis players is again being discussed. It will be remembered that Miss Hazel Hotchkiss created quite a sensation with her splendid work at the net when she came East in 1909 and won the championship against the best players on this side of the continent. The style play of Miss Hotchkiss was largely adopted in the East for a time, but the women soon showed a disinclination again to go to the net. At the moment volleying, except of an involuntary nature, is almost an unknown art among women players. Mrs. George L. Chapman, who belongs to the extremely small class of women players who may be termed aggressive players, writes:

"Undoubtedly there are to-day many women players who have the ability to greatly improve their tennis should they have the desire to do so and be willing to practice volleying. The men have long realized the value of it; but there is no one stroke as little used by women, and no woman player in this country—with the exception of Mrs. Wightman (nee Hotchkiss)—who can handle a volley as accurately as she does a ground stroke.

"In singles a volleyer always has a chance of breaking up the winning streak of an opponent by being able to change from a back-court to a net game. In such a case, when a woman player goes to the net her opponent must confine herself to a side-line passing shot, instead of having a whole side free court in which to drive, or she must take to lobbying—which frequently throws her off her drive when she tries to return to it.

"She is also at a mental disadvantage, because she knows that the net player is in a better position to win the point unless overcome by a very superior shot. No one questions that in doubles the volley is more than an asset; it is almost a necessity, and ought to be worth some effort to gain such a valuable acquisition to one's game.

"I believe that before long every first-class woman player will be able to volley with sufficient ability and confidence to play the net game when the necessity arises, even should she not constantly do so from choice."

WESTERN RACING CENTRES

Eight Tracks on the Circuit and the Horses Kept Busy

While racing is at a low ebb in New York the far West has profited immensely by this condition. "The bushes" have grown to a new importance, until now a particularly impressive circuit has been built up of racing centres, where a generation ago there were only mining camps and cattle ranges, with an occasional army post, and the consequent sport that went with the post. The trend of racing in the past few years would indicate that the West is the logical market for the thoroughbred. It is hard to suppose that the glories of a Futurity, or a Suburban, a Brooklyn, Brighton, Hopeful, or in fact, any of the other big races of the New York tracks will be reproduced, but horses are being raced and for liberal purses, in a compact circuit that keeps the horsemen busy from early spring until late in the fall.

As against Pimlico, Laurel, Marlboro, and some smaller tracks in Maryland, and alternate weeks of racing and no racing in Canada, there are eight tracks in the far West, with continuous sport.

The Western circuit, that has grown much after the fashion that the towns in the West sprung up overnight, now takes in Oklahoma, Vancouver, Lagoon, Tulsa, Butte, Salt Lake, Anaconda, and Spokane, while there are smaller tracks for the smaller fry of horsemen.

BASEBALL.

JOE WOOD AND TRIS SPEAKER BOSTON STARS.

Many a pennant has been won almost solely because of the triumphant coupling of some one great pitcher with some one great batter, and the same can be said of the world's series. The swatsman is on the job every day contributing to each victory, while the start propeller has his work cut out whenever one of the opposing side's tough nuts come up to be cracked.

It is just a combination of one great hurler and one great slugsmith that is winning the American league pennant for the Boston Red Sox. The mystic twain are Joe Wood and Tris Speaker. A number of weeks ago it was thought the Washington Senators would stay in the thick of the fight and give Jack Stahl's team a ragged run clear down the home stretch. As the scene has changed, however, it now appears as if Griffith's men had shot their bolt, have blown and faded like a mid-sumer rose, that they were destined to be nothing but a nine days' wonder.

The Athletics, showing a belated flash of their one-time form, already have seen themselves very close to the Senators, and, while there may be a certain amount of fluctuating between these two, indications now are that the eventual standing will find the Philadelphians ensconsed in second place. But they have struck their gait far too late to overhaul the Red Sox.

The Boston speed boys have been playing a wonderfully consistent game of topnotch ball ever since they said goodbye to the White Sox away back in June. A perusal of box scores and other statistics will show what a tremendous factor the work of Wood and Speaker has been in this success. Sir Joseph seems almost certain to lead the winning flingers of the Ban Johnson circuit when the season turns from present into past. And if Cobb does not suffer himself to be outbatted by Tris, he will have to keep hustling some.

AUTO RACING REVIVES

A Feature of Sport With the Automobile and Motor

One of the most striking features in automobile history is the revival of racing. For the last two or three years it almost looked as if professional speed contests were doomed to extinction, so marked was the decline. In Europe, the chief event, the "Grand Prix," was not run in 1909, 1910, or 1911. In 1912, however, the race was revived at Dieppe, with undoubted success. In the United States, more races are being held than in any previous season. Here in Canada the new movement is being felt, too. There is no doubt about the popularity of the sport. Automobile racing provides thrills more intense almost than any other contests. Not as many fatalities are chalked up against it as against aeroplaning, but from the spectator's point of view, the former looks to be more dangerous than the latter. It is also said that the drivers in record-breaknig motor races suffer a severer strain than aviators. The latter are in deadly peril; they may run into an "air pocket" at any moment, and fall to the ground, but there isn't the immediate and ever-visible danger of fences or trees and other obstructions. At any second a tire may go or the mechanism break down under the stress, and the whole situation is nerve-racking in the extreme. The natural result follows—most of the racers, although comparatively young, have faces lined with marks of intense strain.

LEATHER AND STEEL WORN BY BURMAN

World's Greatest Motor Driver Never Goes in a Race Without This Equipment

Bob Burman, the world's fastest automobile driver wears a remarkable racing suit of leather, and a steel helmet. Burman has had many narrow escapes from death, and to return to the racing game after an accident is considered the acid test—that is for the driver to still show the same reckless abandon. And Burman is never afraid to race in open competition, or to turn his racing car wide open. He has lowered every world's record that he has ever tried for, and he holds them for every type of course at the present time. He has never been defeated while driving his great Blitzen Benz. The leather suit worn by the champion was made in London, England, while Burman was abroad to purchase his new 300 h. p. car. It is heavily lined in fleece, and is made in one piece. Straps with buckles hold the bottom of the sleeves in place; a heavy belt around the waist, while it is double-breasted, and fastens with both straps and buckles. Having a high military Prussian collar, which also straps securely around the neck. The helmet Burman had made in Paris, in addition to having the regular ear covering so that all sound must come from the rear so that the roar of the wind will not affect the tender ear drum, it has a steel covering under the chin, around the base of the skull it carries a tube of 8-inch gauge aluminum tubing which extends three-quarters of an inch, protecting the face and ears if the driver is thrown from the car. Over the entire skull is a leather covering lined in sheet steel, which in turn is lined in heavy felt to protect the head.

Traveling at the rate of 218 feet per second, should something suddenly happen to stop the Blitzen Benz in its mad flight, the indications are that Burman would be buried at least two hundred feet, and it is well to be prepared for such a shock. The energy of the drive is not called into play—not the physical energy—his work is mostly mental, with skill and daring.

ENGLAND HAS POOR TEAM TO RECAPTURE POLO CUP

It is Doubtful if This Challenge for Next Year Will be Forthcoming

England's chances of bringing back the international polo cup, which Harry Payne Whitney and his team won for the United States three years ago, and which an English team failed to re-capture a year ago, seem to grow slimmer as time flies by. For more than a year the Duke of Westminster, who took upon his shoulders the responsibility of bringing the cup to his country once again, regardless of cost, has been working to get together a team that would be reasonably sure of giving the Americans a good fight, but events have demonstrated that he has been unsuccessful. So poorly has his star combination performed that it is unlikely there will be an English challenge for next year as was confidently expected. It probably will be remembered that the Hurlingham club which sent the English team of last year to America failed to meet expenses, and was saved from a serious financial loss by the action of the Duke of Westminster, who came forward and not only paid all the expenses but undertook to supply the money for the next assault upon American polo supremacy. The duke took over the fourteen ponies which were the property of the polo fund, and with them as a nucleus started the finest aggregation of polo horseflesh in the world. All his enormous income was placed at the disposal of such experts as the Miller brothers, the famous horse dealers, who some years before secured for Harry Payne Whitney some of his finest animals.

The result has been that the duke is now the owner of almost 100 first-class ponies, and, so far as animals are concerned, is more than a match for his American rivals. The duke's real troubles are in a different direction; now that his horses are ready his players are not.

It is realized that there are few polo enthusiasts in England capable of shouldering the financial burdens incident upon an attempt to recapture the international cup. Therefore, while there is no end of criticism of the duke and for the make-up of his team, there are no offers to relieve him of the burden. It is felt however, that before the Eaton team finally decides to cross the Atlantic they shoud prove theri worth against the strongest team of English players that could be selected, mounted upon ponies of at [illegible]

Losing Daughter, St. Louis Physician Offers Big Sum for Cure of Others.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 4.—Following the death of his daughter, Virginia, 7 years old, from infantile paralysis, Dr. Robert Edward Wilson of 4,295 Lindell Boulevard declared in his grief that he would give $10,000 to any physician who would save the lives of his other three children, who are ill of the same disease at his country home, The Oaks, Pattonville, Mo.

"I will give $10,000 to the man who can save my children," was Dr. Wilson's cry after his daughter's death. The pathetic scene in the little girl's room just before her death Saturday night caused Dr. Wilson to go frantic, while two other physicians who had been in attendance were so affected that they had to leave the room.

The things a man is going to do are usually synonymous with the things he will never accomplish.

TREATING FOR PEACE

Turco-Italian Negotiations Not Progressing Very Swiftly.

Italy Is Determined to Hold Tripoli and Cyrenaica, Although She Will Give In on Secondary Points—She Also Wants Italians Admitted to Turkey as Before the War—Islands Desire Autonomy.

Chiasso, Switzerland, Sept. 5.—Italy is determined to maintain its hold on Tripoli and Cyrenaica. No great advance has yet been made in the unofficial negotiations for peace which are now going on in Switzerland between the Italian delegates and representatives of Turkish Government. The former, while expressing their readiness to make concessions in behalf of Italy in secondary matters, have declared it impossible to give in on several vital points. Italy demands absolute and complete sovereignty over Tripoli and Cryenaica, without, however, exacting its recognition from Turkey. It demands the evacuation of the Turkish troops, and it is pointed out that the administration at Constantinople might find a way to meet these demands by proclaiming the independence of these territories, entrusting the Arabs to govern themselves.

It is proposed that Turkey shall immediately readmit Italians to the Ottoman empire under the same conditions as prevailed before the war.

Italy will keep Stampalia as a naval station, while she will return to Turkey the other islands in the Aegean, on condition that their nationality shall be respected, and that their political and administrative organization shall be conducted on the line set forth in the proposal of Count Leopold von Berchtold, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister. Finally, Italy will grant Turkey the same concessions as were granted by Austria when the latter country annexed Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The representatives of several of the islands, including Rhodes, although they have not been received officially by the Italian delegates here, have communicated with the Italian Premier, Marquis de San Giuliano, to whom they submitted a memorandum outlining the desires of the islands. In brief, they declare that if it is impossible to come under Italian sovereignty or to be annexed to Greece, autonomy must be granted similar in form to that granted Crete, otherwise they will oppose the re-establishment of the old order of things.

Died Watching Aviator.

Brockville, Sept. 5.—A strange fatality occurred yesterday afternoon near the close of the first day of the Brockville Fair. Hemstrough, one of the Curtiss aviators, had just made an ascension in a biplane, and, after a long detour, reappeared opposite the grand stand, making a graceful dip.

As he did so, an aged spectator in the crowd, Thomas Cavanagh, was seized with heart failure. Without uttering a cry, Cavanagh fell backwards in a collapse. Several doctors rushed to his assistance, but in less than a minute the man was dead. He was 81 years of age, a wealthy retired farmer, living near Elgin, and came to Brockville against the wish of his aged wife to see the flying machines.

Eighteen Injured In London Tube.

London, Sept. 5.—London's first tube collision of any consequence occurred last night near the Caledonian road station of the Piccadilly tube. Eighteen persons were injured. But for the presence of mind of the engineer the accident might have been much more serious.

At 7.30 p.m. a crowded train on the line from Finsbury Park to Piccadilly was standing at the Caledonian road platform, when an express from Finsbury Park to Hammersmith caught it up. The express was not stopping there, but fortunately the driver of the oncoming train saw the danger in the nick of time.

Britain's Most Powerful Battleship.

Portsmouth, Eng., Sept. 5.—The most powerful battleship yet ordered is to be laid down here in November by the British Admiralty.

She is to be 700 feet in length and is to deplace 30,000 tons, while her high-powered turbine engines are to develop a speed of 29 knots.

It is reported that the new vessel is to be armed with 14-inch guns, the first tried in the British navy.

To Check White Slavery.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—Premier Borden and the Dominion Government will be asked by the Dominion Social and Moral Reform Board to strengthen the law against the white slave traffic, and to make a minor change in the Miller bill to render it more effective for the prevention of the sale of tipsters' "sure thing" cards at the time race meetings are in progress.

May Die From Bludgeon Blow.

Montreal, Sept. 5.—Bathed in his own blood and with his skull fractured, Joseph Pauze was taken to the Royal Victorial Hospital, where he is not expected to recover. It is thought by the police that he was struck over the head with a murderous bludgeon, but up to the present the affair is shrouded in mystery.

Quebec's Welcome to Borden.

Quebec, Sept. 5.—Premier Borden, who is on the Victorian, due here Friday next, has accepted the invitation to a civic reception. He sent to Mayor Drouin the following wireless: "Pray accept warm thanks. We sincerely appreciate great honor of civic reception, which we are delighted to accept."

IS WELL PLEASED.

Roosevelt Satisfied With the Result In Vermont.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Sept. 5.—If he had made terms with the "bosses" at the Republican convention, Col. Roosevelt said yesterday they would have turned to him with the Presidential nomination.

Col. Roosevelt's day tour through Iowa was in blistering heat. The warmth was of benefit to his throat, which was irritated by speaking in the open on cold days in New England. Most of his speeches were made in small towns. The farmers drove in from miles around to hear him, and his audiences were large.

On receiving the returns from Vermont, Col. Roosevelt said he was greatly pleased with the Progressive vote.

"I am greatly relieved at the result in Vermont," he said. "While on my three days' tour in the state, I became seriously concerned lest there should be practically no support whatever for the Progressive state ticket, because a third or half of the men who spoke to me stated their belief in the Progressive national ticket, but did not intend to vote the state Progressive ticket."

Roosevelt In Control.

San Francisco, Sept. 5.—Wednesday's primary election, which gave the Progressive party its first opportunity in California to test its strength, assured the Roosevelt-Johnson organization control of the state convention that is to be composed of the legislative nominees. This means that Republican electors pledged to Roosevelt will be named by the convention. The Taft leaders, in order to get their electors on the ballot, must resort to petitions. San Francisco and Los Angeles voted heavily for the Progressives.

Colonies Must Be Represented.

Montreal, Sept. 5.—That representation in an Imperial Parliament would be advantageous to Canada at the present time was the opinion expressed by F. E. Smith, K.C., M.P., prominent member of the Unionist party, who is in Montreal in company with Sir Max Aitken, en route from Winnipeg to England.

While Mr. Smith favors Imperial representation in the case of Canada, he does not look upon it in the same light with regard to the other colonies.

Canada, he believes, on account of its geographical situation, is better able to take part in the troubles of England and assist in the solution of them than any of the other colonies.

"But," Mr. Smith added, "the scheme would be lop-sided unless all the colonies were represented, and it does not seem as if the time was yet at hand when the other colonies would benefit from such representation. New Zealand and Australia could derive little benefit from such an arrangement at the present time."

Lake Champlain Afloat.

Montreal, Sept. 5.—The C.P.R. liner Lake Champlain from Liverpool which ran aground off Bouncherville, just below this city, Wednesday night at 8.20 o'clock, was refloated at 8.10 yesterday morning, and was tied up at her berth at 9.30. She was not injured in any way.

The cause of the accident is ascribed to the thick fog which hung over the river.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Sept. 4.—Firmness in the wheat market to-day seemed to be based largely on the feeling that as the market had declined three days in succession, a rally was due. Closing prices were firm, ⅜c to ⅝c higher than last night. Corn scored a net gain of ⅝c to 1⅛c, and oats an advance of ¼c to ⅜c. The outcome in provisions was a decline of 3½c to 17½c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅛d lower to ¼d higher on wheat, and unchanged to ⅜d higher on corn. Berlin wheat closed ½c lower, Buda-Pest, ¾c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 4.—There was little or no demand for old crop. Manitoba spring wheat and cables on new wheat for October-November shipment were weaker at a further decline of 3d, which made the bids 1½c to 2c per bushel below cost. The foreign demand for oats continues good and further sales of several loads were made. There is also a good demand for American clipped oats at prices at which considerable could be worked for export, but owing to the scarcity of lake freight from Chicago to Montreal, exporters cannot accept the orders. The local demand for oats is increasing and the market is strong. Flour is steady with a fair local trade passing, but the export demand is quiet again. Demand for millfeed in excess of supply. Butter is fairly active and firm. Cheese is strong. Eggs active. Potatoes lower. Foreign demand for hay good.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 4.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the receipts of live stock for the week ended Aug. 31, were 1550 cattle, 1775 sheep and lambs, 1165 hogs and 800 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 800 cattle, 1500 sheep and lambs, 1600 hogs and 500 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being about steady under a good demand from both packers and butchers for supplies and as the supply was not in excess of the expectations an active trade was done and little stock was left over. The best steers sold at $6.50, but there were really no choice stock to be had and the lower grades brought from that down to $4.50 per cwt. The top price realized for cows was $5.50, and sales were made from that to $3.50 per cwt. Good bulls were scarce, but there was a fair supply of common stock, which sold at $2.50 to $3.50 per cwt.

The tone of the market for lambs was very firm, owing to the continued active demand and sales of Ontario stock were made readily at $6 to $6.25 per cwt. There was also a fairly good demand for sheep and ewes brought $4 to $4.25 per cwt. The market for good to choice calves was stronger and sales were made at from $8 to $12 and the lower grades at from $3 to $6 each.

A stronger feeling prevailed in the market for hogs and prices ruled higher at $8.75 to $9 per cwt., for selected lots, weighed off the cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., Sept. 4.—Cattle—Receipts, 500 head; fairly active and steady.

Veals—Receipts, 25 head; active and 25c higher, $4 to $11.50.

Engineers Meet.

New York, Sept. 5.—With "safety first" as the keynote, the seven hundred engineers, gathered here from twenty-seven different countries for the sessions of the International Congress of Testing Materials, again delved deeply yesterday, the second of their discussion, into their task of devising means whereby deaths from industrial accidents throughout the world may be reduced.

The failure of the Quebec bridge, several years ago, with a loss of nearly one hundred workmen, was mentioned as one of the mysteries that should be solved through the tests of steel columns.

TO SEND DEPUTATION

English Suffragettes Will Keep on Borden's Trail.

Official Organ of the Woman's Suffrage Political Union Says Canadian Premier Is Superior to Mr. Asquith Because He Will Listen to Reason —Mrs. Pethick Lawrence to Head the Delegation.

London, Sept. 5.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Premier Borden having expressed his willingness to receive a deputation upon woman's suffrage on his return to Ottawa, the Woman's Suffrage Political Union does not intend to let the opportunity go by. The Canadian Associated Press, interviewing an official of the union yesterday afternoon, was informed that they have decided to send a strong deputation immediately to Canada, headed by Mrs. Pethick Lawrence. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Harold Pethick and a number of women who have recently become world famous for their militancy.

To-morrow the official organ of the union will publish the following comment:

"Mr. Borden's reply was the most encouraging. From him we have not had foolish ignorant talk of disaster, such as Asquith indulges in. The Canadian Premier has shown himself superior to Asquith in being willing to listen to reason. If he is prepared to be guided by reason and respond to argument, then militancy will not be needed in Canada. It would, however, be affectation for the deputation not to refer to the consequences, which have in this country resulted from the Government's unstatesmanlike dealing with the suffrage question, and to the similar consequence if the Government of Canada were to follow the example of Asquith."

Want Wider Markets, Says Mayor.

Edmonton, Alta., Sept. 5.—An allusion to the demand of the west for reciprocity was made in the civic address to the Duke of Connaught presented by Mayor Armstrong.

After expressing a desire to show loyalty to the Mother Country by extension of the British preference, the mayor continued:

"It is incumbent upon us, if we are true to our best interests, to use all lawful endeavors to enlarge our commercial bounds in order that a ready market may be obtained for our ever-increasing products of the soil, to the end that our people may know that they are subject to only fair, commercial and economic laws and in order that the very best results may be obtained, for thus, and thus only, shall content and loyalty rest upon permanent and abiding basis."

In his reply the duke made no reference to this passage, doubtless on the ground that it savored too much of politics.

Inquiring Into Death.

Orangeville, Sept. 5.—While it is not believed by Coroner Hendry that Jas. Dale, a well-known Caledon farmer, found dead in the barn of the Alexandra Hotel, was the victim of foul play, considerable mystery surrounds the case.

Dale's body was discovered in the barn yesterday morning, and a wound over the eye created suspicion that he had met with violence. An autopsy only partially carried out last night, showed that the neck was broken, but Dr. Hendry told a reporter that the injuries were probably caused by a fall.

An inquest was opened and adjourned until Monday night.

Dale was a prosperous farmer and had an extensive dairy. He lived about a mile from Orangeville.

Colleagues to Meet Him.

Ottawa, Sept. 5.—Hon. Messrs. Perley, C. J. Doherty, W. T. Crothers, W. T. White and W. B. Nantel will leave here on a special train to meet Premier Borden upon his arrival at Montreal on Saturday. A message received by Acting Premier Hon. Geo. E. Foster last evening, says that the Royal George has been sighted, and with fair weather should arrive at Quebec about 11 o'clock Friday morning. Premier Borden and Mr. Pelletier will leave the Royal George there and come to Montreal on the Government steamer Stanley. They are expected to arrive here Monday morning.

Thousand Persons Homeless.

Los Angeles, Sept. 5.—Fully one thousand persons are hunting homes to-day as the result of the fire which destroyed 150 buildings in Ocean Park Wednesday night, causing a loss estimated at $2,500,000, with insurance of only ten per cent. So far as known only one man lost his life.

The burned area extends from Raymond avenue on the north to Ozone avenue on the south, a distance of seven blocks, and from Ocean west to midway between the Speedway and Trolleyway on the east, everything was wiped out.

Ambulance Corps Appointments.

London, Sept. 5.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—With the approval of the Duke of Connaught the following appointments have been made to the St. John Ambulance Brigade:

Col. Sir Henry Pellatt, Toronto, to be commissioner for the Dominion; Dr. C. J. Copp, Toronto, to be assistant commissioner for Ontario, and Major Francis Vaux, Winnipeg, to be assistant commissioner for the province of Manitoba.

Poor Crops In Frontenac.

Kingston, Sept. 5.—Crops in this district are anything but satisfactory. But one-half of the crop is harvested and it is only fair. Wet weather is to blame. The grain has been on the ground for weeks, waiting to be taken in, but rain has prevented this.

PLAN 75 CONTESTS.

Temperance Forces Hold Executive Meeting In Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—There will be about seventy-five local option contests in municipalities throughout Ontario this fall. Such was the report made at a meeting of the executive committee of the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance at the Exhibition grounds yesterday afternoon.

The report of the campaign committee was presented by Rev. Dr. J. H. Hazelwood. It showed that the field work of the alliance for the entire autumn had been mapped out covering the following nineteen counties and two cities: New Ontario, Peel, Kent and Dundas, Essex, Prince Edward, Perth, Welland, Simcoe, Lambton, Huron, Stormont, Glengarry, Prescott, Russell, Victoria and Haliburton, Haldimand, Bruce, Middlesex, and London and Toronto.

Besides the seventy-five places in which fights will be waged, there are about two hundred and sixty localities in which voting might take place, but in many of these it is impossible to get the temperance people into the ring. There are over two hundred possible repeal contests this year, but it is likely that in fully ninety per cent. of these no effort will be made by the liquor interests.

Theron Gibson reported that the finances of the Alliance were in a healthy condition, but assistance was needed from the friends of temperance throughout the province for the proper sustenance of the big campaign contemplated this fall.

The matter of law enforcement was discussed, being introduced by Sontroller J. C. McCarthy. A lively discussion followed, which brought out the fact that the whole question of getting good results from local option bylaws lay in the adequate enforcement of the liquor laws. The Alliance will ask that even better results in the carrying out of the license bylaws be secured by the inspectors.

Found Dying Near Sanitarium.

St. Catharines, Sept. 5.—Peter McCullen, coremaker in the McKinnon Sash Factory, was found lying in a dying condition on the roadway leading to the local consumptive sanitarium by Dr. Sheehan yesterday morning. The doctor carried him to the sanitarium, where he expired a short time afterwards.

McCullen had been in the sanitarium till last Saturday when he left apparently much improved. His illness evidently returned, and the poor fellow was returning to hospital when he collapsed.

His wife is said to reside in Toronto, where Thomas McCullen, a brother, resides.

May Delay Announcement.

Ottawa, Sept. 5.—It is considered doubtful here whether Hon. R. L. Borden will make an announcement of the naval program until Parliament meets.

The Premier is receiving invitations for receptions and banquets from all parts of the country, but will be forced to refuse owing to the important Cabinet Councils which will be held following his return. The banquet by the Toronto Board of Trade on Sept. 23 will be the only one accepted by the Premier.

Crossed English Channel In Canoe.

New York, Sept. 5.—A Dover cable says: A record for hazardous canoeing was made yesterday when two well-known Dover oarsmen, Budgeat and Water, paddled a Canadian canoe across the English Channel to the French coast.

The passage was very rough and high waves threatened every minute to swamp the frail craft. A high wind prevailed.

KINGSTON'S NEW HOTEL ASSURED

The Estimated Cost is $250,000--To be Seven Storeys With 100 Rooms

Kingston is to have a new hotel. Plans are under way for the construction of what is to be one of the best hostelries between Toronto and Montreal, on the site of the British American Hotel.

The new hotel is to be built by Canadian money and is not the hotel which is to be erected by the Boston firm. In addition to several Montreal men there are Toronto capitalists interested and it is stated that not a cent of local money will be solicited. It is understood that an option has been placed on the hotel and that the purchase will be made in less than two weeks.

The proposed expenditure on the new hotel will be in the neighborhood of $250,000. The structure will be seven storeys high and will contain over 100 bedrooms. A new departure will be made in the locating of the dining room. It is stated that the company intend devoting the top floor to a dining room, grill room, lounge room and reading rooms, and that the walls will be made of plate glass in order to give the guests a commanding view of the harbor and surrounding country. From the altitude which the new hotel will reach the country for miles around will be visible.

ABOUT MARRIAGE

The Hand Book of the Ages records precisely 1,435,624 Women's Reasons For Getting Married, none so good, we believe, as this overheard in a Main street car:

1st GIRL—"O dear, I think I shall get married."

2nd GIRL—"In heaven's name, what for?"

1st GIRL—"Well, in the first place, I think it is perfectly natural to want to get married and then in the second place I should like to be able to lie down in the afternoon."—Exchange.

"HAIR THAT GIVES FATHER TIME THE LAUGH"
We are just about as old as we LOOK
People judge us, by the way we LOOK. The man or woman with grey hair is beginning to get in the "Old Timer's Class." This Twentieth Century does NOT want GREY hairs—it wants the energy of Youth. The big things are being done by the YOUNGER generation.
There's a sort of "Has Been" look about those "Grey Hairs." There is always one to criticise and smile scornfully.
Father Time is a stern disciplinarian. Get the best of him. Give him the laugh. Do not be a "Has Been." It's unnecessary.

Stirring Appeal for Belleville's Fair

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Sir,—As a past President of the Belleville Fair, and as Secretary of the Board of Trade, permit me to urge our citizens to rally this year to the support of the exhibition on the 10th and 11th of September. The time is short. The future existence of the fair, which has done so much, and which might do infinitely more with proper encouragement, to draw together the city and the country, hangs in the balance, and depends upon the citizens of Belleville responding to the appeal which year after year has been made by those hard working directors and officials, who give their public-spirited services to further the interests of this district in this most effective way. Banquets are all right; Board of Trade theories are all right; letters and speeches are all right, each in their own places, but this is a final test of the practical co-operation of Belleville as the natural trade centre, with the rich agricultural country surrounding it on all sides and on which for many years we have depended for our moderate prosperity. If the same energy and zeal were manifested on Fair Days that characterized the recent Labor Day celebration the result would not be merely the pleasure of a day, but the building up and continuity of a most valuable connection and the establishment and maintenance of relations both pleasant and profitable with those with whom our interests are identified.

Would it be too late even now for the gentlemen to whom so much credit is due for the recent endeavor to revive a Belleville Holiday, to turn in part of their surplus and all of their energy and make the Belleville Fair of 1912 a triumphant success?

They can do it if they will.

W. N. PONTON.

The C. P. R. May Run A Car Ferry Line

A rival is likely to appear in the car ferry business across Lake Ontario, according to local reports.

At the present time the Cobourg-Charlotte ferry, which is operated jointly by the Grand Trunk and Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg Railways, has a monopoly of the freight ferry business, and the Canadian Pacific Railway in consequence sends most of its freight to Rochester by the longer route, via the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo. The new C. P. R. lake shore line, however, between Toronto and Montreal will bring the C. P. R. in close competition with the Grand Trunk along the north shore of the lake, and it is stated on excellent authority that the company will inaugurate a rival car ferry from Grafton to Charlotte as soon as the new road is ready.

Residents in Grafton have been told that the C. P. R. intends to build an extensive dock there almost immediately, and the locality is confident that this is the first step towards a big car ferry service. Grafton is as near to Charlotte as is Cobourg, while its residents claim that it posses even greater possibilities as a harbor.

Police Court Circles

A man named Breaugh from Deseronto, came up on Labor Day and has been laboring hard, taking nourishment from a bottle ever since. He lost the nipple, and the police got him. Magistrate Masson gave him until 12 o'clock to wallow through the mud and get out of town.

An "Indian lister" had his case enlarged for 30 days, pending good conduct.

A man on the East hill was taken in charge yesterday for alleged assault on his spouse. Out on bail, case enlarged until to-morrow.

Chief of Police Newton, has a letter asking if any one knows the whereabouts of one Kelly Cole, who at one time resided in Belleville. He is a brother of Mrs. Ransford and they have been separated for over twenty years. Any information regarding Cole's present location will be greatly appreciated.

It was reported to the police this afternoon that two little girls had strayed from their home near the Grand Trunk station and had not yet been found.

Cunning Trick Of Bank Robbers

Burglars attempted to blow up the vault of the Bank of Hochelaga at Ste. Jacques l'Achigan, county of L'Assomption, last night. Twelve explosions of nitro glycerine damaged the vault considerably, but the robbers did not succeed in getting any money.

The crowd which gathered around was coolly informed by the burglars that they had been engaged by the bank to make some changes in the flooring, and they requested the spectators to go away because they were going to use dynamite.

The explosions followed. The front door of the safe was blown off, and the proceedings were then interrupted by the manager who stuck his head out of the window and yelled for help.

The crowd rushed back, and the burglars fled, firing as they went, and wounding one man in the crowd, Mr. Mederic Leblanc. Several others had narrow escapes.

THE PANAMA BILL VIOLATES TREATY

Sir Edward Grey So Expresses Himself in Letter--Making Representations

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The British case regarding the Panama Canal is summed up in a letter written by Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, that was read before Newcastle Chamber of Commerce to-day. Sir Edward writes: "The British Government is making representations to the United States Government. There seems to be no doubt that the adoption by the State of the Panama Canal bill, containing provisions for the free use of the canal by American coastwise vessels as well as United States ships in the foreign trade under certain conditions, is a violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, as the canal will not be open on terms of entire equality to the ships of all nations.

"It follows that if a large part of this trade is allowed to pass free the total amounts of the tolls collected will be diminished to a large extent, and, as a consequence, general trade will in future be unduly taxed on account of this suppression of part of the earning power of the canal, and the loss will fall upon the shoulders of foreign ship-owners."

Police Stop a Church Row

BUFFALO, Sept. 4.—A riot was narrowly averted last night when the Reverend Ludwig Zakrzewski, pastor of the Church of the Holy Mother of the Rosary, the church founded by the late Bishop Kaminski at Sycamore and Sobieski streets, turned out four of the former trustees of the church when they came to demand the keys of the school hall, in which they wanted to hold a mass meeting. Lieutenant Joseph Godfrey of the eighth precint, with a squad of twenty policemen, hurried to the hall and dispersed the crowd.

From what the police learned, the pastor gained the displeasure of some of the congregation because he refused to allow Joseph Wozniak, Frank Minawski, John Kazmierczak and Frank Nowak to serve on the board of trustees. Yesterday afternoon the men attempted to secure the keys, but he refused to give them up and the police were notified that trouble was brewing. Several officers drove the crowd away and last night the police learned that a mass meeting would be held in the school hall in the evening to consider the ousting of the pastor.

The women of the church were in favor of retaining the pastor, while most of the men wanted him ousted.

This Father Zakrzewski denies claiming that out of a congregation of 5,000 families only about 40 families are allied with the four former trustees.

Over 5,000 gathered about the doors of the hall last evening, waiting for the former trustees to secure the keys. These men received a refusal from the pastor and returned to the entrance of the hall. Lieutenant Godfrey warned them that if any trouble started everyone whom the police could lay hands on would be arrested. He then ordered the crowd to go home.

The leaders wanted to go to a hall at Broadway and Sweet avenue, but the police refused to allow them to congregate there.

Members of the church belong to the so-called Independent Catholic Church, of which there are many scattered throughout the country. After Bishop Kaminski's death some of his personal property mysteriously disappeared and one night his grave was opened in an effort to find money and jewelery which he was supposed to own.

GLOOM IN THE WEST

Terrific Rainstorm Again Delays the Harvesting.

Cutting Is Stopped In Many Districts, Particularly In Manitoba and the Farmers of Saskatchewan Are Becoming Anxious Over Their Prospects of Cutting the Grain Before Damage Sets In.

Winnipeg, Sept. 5.—A terrific rainstorm which reached its height in the Winnipeg district, where over one and one-quarter inches of rain fell between 9 p.m. and 4 a.m. yesterday morning, was general throughout the west and has cast a fresh gloom on the crop outlook. The general trend of the reports last night showed that cutting had been stopped in most districts, and the ground is so soft that the binders cannot work for two or three days. Wednesday night's rain, the heaviest at Winnipeg, was almost as bad at Portage la Prairie and Brandon, and prevailed with varying severity all the way west to Calgary. The weather forecast last night indicated still more thunder showers.

Only a few districts report actual damage as yet, but the outlook is decidedly dark. A most serious report comes from Gretna and Morden, in the rich Mennonite reserve country of southern Manitoba.

At Gretna all the wheat has been cut for several days, but only one farmer is known to have done any stacking. The stooked grain is standing in fields of water, and is sprouting badly. At Morden ninety per cent. of the wheat is cut, and the conditions are similar. The situation in the reserve is particularly hard, as the standing crop was the best looking in many years.

Following is a summary of last night's reports:

Brandon—Harvesting at a standstill and cannot be resumed for two days. No damage yet.

Portage la Prairie — Very heavy rain, all work stopped; no damage. Soaked grain cannot be handled before end of week.

Gladstone—Heavy rain, much wheat flattened.

Shoal Lake—Heavy rain, slight frost, but no damage. All work delayed.

Dauphin—Seventy per cent. wheat cut, showery, no frost, conditions fair.

Melita—Seventy-five per cent, wheat cut, heavy rain, no more cutting before Friday, no damage yet.

Carman—Heavy rain, wheat in stook is sprouting.

Prince Albert—Little rain, conditions very fair.

Biggar—Seventy-five per cent. wheat cut, but all work now stopped by very heavy rains. No threshing yet.

Lumsden—No rain last night, fair progress in harvesting. Raining past four days, work stopped.

Rosthern—Light rain every day for week, farmers regard outlook very serious.

Yorkton—No rain, conditions good, but need considerable warm weather to complete ripening.

Outlook—Light rain several days, harvesting seriously hampered.

Govan—Wheat practically cut, but continuous rains prevent stacking. Farmers getting anxious.

SHALL I WIN HER?

THE STORY OF A WANDERER

By JAMES GRANT

Author of "The Romance of War," "Under the Red Dragon," "Fairer than A Fairy," etc.

"This must not be," said I resolutely.

"What if Sandilli wills it?" was the haughty question.

"They must be rescued, and sent in safety to the nearest British camp or lager village, otherwise I shall not marry your daughter. I shall refuse your friendship and alliance, and shall seek only to escape even at the risk of being cut to pieces, joint by joint."

"And if I do as you propose—save and send them to their friends—what proof am I to give you of having done so?"

"A letter—even the tiniest scrap of paper—written by either of the ladies will suffice as proof."

I struck my hands despairingly together as I spoke, for how I yearned, craved, and longed for the sight of a single word pencilled ever so hastily by the beloved hand of Clarice is known only to heaven and myself.

"Wah, wah, it shall be done."

"When?"

"Immediately."'

"May I go with you?" I asked I asked pleadingly.

"No."

"Oh, Sandilli ,in gratitude for saving you from death!"

"For that good deed I shall not permit you to risk your life. Sandilli has warriors enough and to spare, and this night shall see the torch planted in the kraal of Mark Graaff."

"This night," thought I. "Then they are nearer this place than I supposed. Oh, Clarice, Clarice! how great is all this misery—how agonising the suspense. Would that I could fly to you!"

On the flyleaf of an old Dutch book which had been brought in with other plunder—it was Hugo de Groot's "History of Holland," I remember—I wrote an explanatory note to Clarice, entreating her to send me a reply as soon as she found herself and her sister rescued and in safe hands; adding, that I prayed heaven to bless and protect her and Fanny that I was a captive with Sandilli in the Gulu Valley, and that, unless rescued by General Somerset, as yet I saw no means of escape—in short, my captiivity was to be the price of their liberation. I shrunk from the shame and absurdity of stating exactly the views of the politic Sandilli.

As soon as this document was written, torn from the volume and folded, it was given to Sandilli, who about mid day departed with a party of chosen Caffres, chiefly on horseback, leaving me under the close guard of another select band; and, indeed, I was plainly told by him that any attempt to escape would only ensure death at their hands.

I looked wih deep interest and anxiety on his departing troop. I never thought a time would come when I should again regard the Caffres with a friendly eye; but these men were going to free Clarice Haywood, and a picturesque and striking looking band they were, with their karosses of black fur, their bare, supple limbs, their wild, gleaming eyes and jangling necklaces of teeth and metal beads, their round shields, assegais, and muskets, while the gray cranes' feathers worn by some starting erectly up over each ear, imparted somthing of the diabolical to the general tout ensemble by the resemblence they bore to Satanic horns.

Slowly passed the day after their departure. I had no idea of attempting an escape at that precise time, as I was intensely anxious to learn the result of this expedition against Mark Sharkeigh's kraal; and had I attempted to leave the house there were the usual woolly-headed wretches with their too ready weapons posted all about me.

I looked round, however, for a weapon—a knife, pistol, or anything which might serve me on an emergency—but looked in vain; the wily Sandilli had carefully removed every thing of such a nature beyond my reach. No arms were there, save those in the hands of his own people.

Wearily passed the day, and I watched the shadows falling eastward across the Gulu Valley, as the red sunlight died away from the peaks of the gray cliffs and the grassy mountains which overlook it. Herds of beautiful antelopes swept across it at times on their way from wood to wood, and the cry of the wild pintado came ever and anon from amid the prickly pears which grew there in groves eight or ten feet in height.

Near the kraal of Sandilli were lovely groves, where the citrons, oranges, lemons, and shaddocks grew in countless thousands, bending the branches to the earth; and these groves were watched by little slave boys of the Fingo tribe, who are employed thus by the Caffres to protect the fruit from monkeys, just as our farmers at home have their corn guarded from the crows.

The keen anxiety, the long tension of an overwrought nervous system for days past, since the loss of Clarice, the storming of the Amatolas, and above all, my recent adventures, were telling upon me now; and though I was in a fever of impatience to learn the result of Sandilli's raid upon Sharkeigh's premises, I could not resist the feeling of utter prostration that was stealing over me.

I obtained and quaffed off a bumper of Caffre smoke, dashed with brandy, and then, throwing myself upon my bed, sank into profound slumber.

During the entire night I must have remained thus, for the morning of the next day was somewhat advanced when I awoke, with a strange and confused conviction that I had nod, in fact, and that it was evening still. But it was morning light I still. But it was morning ligh I saw; the shadows seemed to linger still in the lovely Gulu Valley; but they fell from east to west, for they were made by the rising and not the setting sun.

I felt stiff and chilly, though some friendly hand had spread a soft and warm kaross over me in the night A sound caused me to look up, and I saw seated on the edge of the bed a handsome native girl of very prepossessing aspect, who was very leisurely fanning herself with a tuft of snow-white ostrich feathers, and watching me from time to time with a cunning twinkle—almost a leer—in her glossy and somewhat voluptuous dark eyes.

She placed in my hand two pencilled notes, and a cry of joy escaped me when I perceived that one was from Claricee and the other from Douglas.

The first ran thus:—

"My Own Darling Dick.—When just about to die, I was saved by whom do you think? Sandilli! The kraal was in flames, but dear Fanny and I were taken away by him, and are now safe with a party of the Fingo levy under Gerard Douglas, of all men in the world, and Lieutenant Bonteine, of the 74th. Save for the terror we have undergone, we are quite well, and little Fanny has counted wearily enough the days of our captivity on her white fingers. The Caffre wretches stole her wedding ring." (If poor Carysfort is gone, thought I, Douglas will soon repair that loss.) "But oh, where are you to receive this my darling, my own love? Where and when shall we meet again? I must close in haste as Sandilli's messenger waits, and Douglas is compelled to march at once."

Such was the substance of her beloved note, which I read and kissed again and again, greatly to the astonishment of its deliverer.

"Man never is but always to be blest," thought I. "Where, when and how shall we meet again Clarice? Well may your heart make the inquiry. Shall I ever escape all these toils, and win you as my wife in a peaceful and happy home?"

Then, as I remembered the odious resolution of Sandilli a malediction escaped me, and I started into a position; but again lay down to peruse the note for the twentieth time, during which the native girl was attentively surveying me.

"So Sandilli makes my marriage with his daughter the price of the sisters' safety among the Europeans" I pondered "Well, he has kept his promise, and I must keep mine. So that they are safe, what matters my sacrifice for a time—it can only be for a time surely? Ere long I shall get arms and escape on the first opportunity. I can but die in the attempt."

The sight of Clarice's well-known handwritting announcing that she and Fanny were safe—safe at last in our own lines—with the brief expression of her love and alarm for me, made me loathe Sandilli and his project; yet he had my pledge and promise.

The note of Douglas after his astonishment and joy to hear that I was still alive, and apparently uninjured went on—

"Carysfort—poor fellow!—has been given over by the doctor. If Fanny becomes a widow I shall certainly propose to her after a fitting time. I love her dearly; yet if she refuses, or even marries another, I shall not die of a broken heart; a man can have that feeling but once in his life."

How was I ever to explain the absurd cause of my detention without exposing myself to the ridicule of the troops, of all Europeans, and to the astonishment and grief of Clarice?

What if some chattering Hottentot prisoner—and such were taken daily —told the real story. That I was to be, or was already, the son-in law of the great rebel Caffre Sandilli?

WOMAN'S WORK

What George Pratley Made of His Experiment

Overnight, George Pratley had said that any man could do any woman's work, and had boldly offered to change places with his wife on the following day.

Next morning he was roused from sweet dreams by the prod of a sharp elbow in his ribs.

"Half-past six," said the voice of his wife.

"Well, what of it?" he mumbled. "I don't have to go to work this morning."

"No," said she; "but I'm going out myself the time you generally do; so hurry up and dress yourself, and get the fire lit. I want my cup of tea and round of toast."

He stared at her moodily; but, remembering their compact, began to huddle on his clothes. Fifteen minutes passed, during which time Mrs. Pratley lay listening intently.

"Am I to wait all the morning for that tea?" she called out.

There was no answer; but the noise in the kitchen had awakened the eight children who slept in the adjoining apartment.

"I'm so firsty, please," a shrill voice quavered out; "I fink I shall crack soon!"

"If you don't go to sleep again," roared Mr. Pratley, "you'll wish you'd never woke up at all!" He burst in on his wife with hideously blackened face and hands. "I believe I've caught the chimney alight," he announced huskily. "I put a drop of paraffin on, and the flame all went up——"

"I can't help your troubles," she indifferently, speaking as he would have spoken had their positions been reversed.

He glowered at her, then turned on his heel, muttering, and withdrew once more.

She got up, laughing silently, and washed and dressed. When she aroused the infant sleeping in the cot beside the bed, and washed and dressed him, too. By this time, the other children seemed to have declared in a body for red anarchy. It was difficult, hearing their uproar, to believe that there were only eight of them.

"Well, good-bye, George," crooned Mrs. Pratley, peeping into the kitchen where her husband crouched over a desolate black grate. "I'm off now!"

"You'll have to do with bread-and-scrape and a drink of water," said Mr. Pratley to the children later, as he sawed away at a loaf. Then the knife slipped.

"Here, Amy," he said, when he had bound up the wound, "you cut the bread-and-dripping for 'em."

So Amy did as she was bid, with proud dexterity. And the children condoned the unsatisfactory repast for the sake of the attendant excitement —as children will.

"And what are we going to do next, father?" asked James, the eldest son, aged eleven, who had somehow got it into his head that all this was a new sort of game.

"Ain't we going to have any tea to drink?" whimpered Myrtle, the youngest but three.

Out of His Misery

"How can you have tea when the fire won't light?" exclaimed Mr. Pratley. "Do have some sense about you!" And now, out you go!"

"We'd rather stop and watch you, father, please," ventured James.

"Watch me! What for,"

"It's so funny!" the boy answered ingenuously.

"It ain't half so funny as you'll feel if I have any more of your lip, my son!" cried his outraged parent. "Now—am I to tell you all again?"

And then, just at the breaking-strain of the crisis, he heard the kitchen door open softly behind him. He turned, and rose quickly.

"Well, George, and how are you getting on?"

It was his wife. Never before had she seemed so beautiful, even in their courting days.

"I thought you might have got into trouble enough by now," said she. "so I came back. Do you think you could hold baby a minute?"

What They Think Of Themselves

The New York World, in discussing the Panama Canal question, says:

"In the Panama case it does not matter much whether the British Government has officially summoned us to The Hague or not. We shall get there in due time, and a perplexing indictment will confront us."

It would be a sad climax to the greatest engineering enterprise in history, to the marvelous conquest of tropical fevers, and to the mightiest task in the promotion of peace and civilization that a people ever undertook if, in the very hour of our triumph we were to be hailed before a court of justice for swindling. Yet such is the prospect.

BY WIRE AT 3 P. M.

GREY DID NOT MEAN MONEY

British Foreign Secretary's Meaning was Misunderstood by the United States Authorities

(Intelligencer Special)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The interpretation here of the letter of Sir Edward Grey to the Gateshead Chamber of Commerce re the Panama Canal trouble is that it indicates that negotiations between the two countries are to have a financial basis, his contention being that English shipping is to be unduly burdened with charges for the maintenance of the canal through the complete exemption of American coastwise ships from tolls. The actual amount of increase to the ships of other nations will be about ten per cent. of the upkeep.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Sir Edward Grey did not make any reference to the financial side of the Panama Canal question, and the statements relating to the burden on the British shipping attributed to him were the comments of Hebert Shaw, Secretary of the Gateshead Chamber of Commerce, on his letter.

The Curse of Race Gambling

Arthur Richmond, the young bank clerk charged with stealing $22,000 from the Bank of Toronto, admitted after his arrest that he had found himself $10,000 short before the Hamilton races and that he had taken another $12,000 with which he hoped to win back his first losses.

Now a few years in the penitentiary will be his reward.

Autos and Tourists; New Regulations

The United States customs authorities have issued a new code of regulation and entry of automobiles, motor-cycles, aeroplanes, etc., designed especially to facilitate touring across the Canadian border, which is of interest to Canadians touring in the United States. It embraces manifold rules, but provides for a system of inspection, certificates and bonding of foreign cars brought in for touring, and lays down a flat dictum that all repairs or improvements made on cars taken abroad, beyond those incident to running the machines, shall be charged forty-five per cent. ad valorem.

All automobiles returning after touring abroad and all brought into that country purely for touring will be admitted without duty. All automobile owners, however, are required to go to first customs house available for the inspection and passing of their machines. Automobiles, bicycles, airships and racing shells brought in for racing or similar contests may remain six months under a free admission privilege.

HOW TO CIRCULATE GRIT NEWSPAPERS

"I like The Intelligencer, and would like you to send it to me, upon the same terms that I receive The Belleville Ontario," remarked a gentleman on entering our sanctum yesterday.

"You can have The Intelligencer for one cent a copy, ten cents a week delivered by the carrier boy, or $3.00 a year through the post office. Is not that cheap enough for the latest telegraphic news up to four o'clock every evening. Is not that cheap enough?" repeated the clerk addressed.

"Why, no," was the retort. "Surely you can be as liberal as your Liberal contemporary. Read this." He then handed in the following circular, which, he, with many others, had received, which is reproduced minus the name and street:—

Office of
The Belleville Ontario
Morton & Herity, Publishers

Belleville, Ontario, April 15, 1912

Mr..................................
....

Dear Sir,—

As a result of our recent Voting Contest a friend has presented you with..............Twelve...........months' subscription to our................Daily............edition.

Your subscription is therefore PAID to this edition to ......20th July......1913.

Keep This as Your Receipt

We trust you will enjoy reading The Ontario and that with this complimentary introduction you will become one of the permanent list of patrons.

Faithfully yours,
MORTON & HERITY.
Per..E. C..............

"Oh," said a gentleman who was standing by, "I received a similar circular, and the paper followed."

"Well, I suppose you can afford to read the paper when you get it for nothing," replied The Intelligencer man.

"Not a bit of it. I don't want it. When it comes I just toss it into the waste paper basket. Why it was sent to me free-gratis-for-nothing, I don't know, unless it was that Messrs. Morton & Herity, per E. C., were temporarily seized with a missionary fit, and sent it in the hope of making a convert of me."

"You make a great mistake, my dear fellow," said The Intelligencer man. "You should read it carefully, ponder over its utterances, and it would not be long before you would become, if not one now, a confirmed Tory. Oh, read it."

An interesting problem to solve is, who supplies the rhino to pay for the papers that are thus thrust upon people who otherwise would never think of looking at it?

Is this a continuance of the Grit policy adopted at the last Dominion election, of sending free Grit journals indiscriminately to all classes of people? If so, the result will be similar to that which greatly delighted the majority of electors—a crushing defeat of Gritism.

If Messrs. Morton & Herity have their party so much at heart as to induce them to circulate their paper free, the Liberal party in Hastings should be proud of them. From a party standpoint they are to be commended.

We feel certain that our friends of The Ontario will forgive us if we express a doubt of their love of party to the extent of incurring any such expenditure.

It will be remembered that thousands of copies of The Globe were circulated free during the last election. The extent of that circulation may be judged when it is remembered that no less a sum than $25,000 was saved in postage alone through a little manipulation of the post office department. It was acknowledged by The Globe that these papers were paid for out of party funds subscribed for that purpose. Has a draft upon that fund been made to circulate free the organ of Gritism in Belleville? If any sum has been appropriated for such a purpose, it never came out of the pockets of the Liberal party who run elections in Hastings. They are too well known to be accused of any such folly.

Messrs. Morton & Herity, per E. C., let us know how it is done. The Tory party were never guilty of such generosity. If such a proposition were made to them the reply would be "The Intelligencer needs no such boosting. Its own value is sufficient to secure and keep its circulation."

Let us into the secret. It is worth knowing.

This advertisement of a free Ontario is inserted free.

Port Nelson Terminus of H. B. Railway

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—Port Nelson will be the terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway. The announcement that the Government had decided in favor of the more southern harbor came with the return from the north of Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, who led a party over the proposed line to salt water on James Bay. It is understood that arrangements are being made to proceed at once with the laying out of a harbor at the port and buoys and other equipments are being sent north by steamer next week.

While the engineer's reports have favored the route to Port Nelson as shorter than that to Fort Churchill, and with less natural difficulties, there was some uncertainty as to whether the Government would choose the south port, and the assurance that Nelson has been selected will be particularly gratifying to Ontario. When the terms of the boundary arrangement between Ontario and Manitoba were made public there was some attempt on the part of the Ontario Opposition to deride the importance of the concessions secured by Sir James Whitney and his Ministers; now that the decision in favor of Port Nelson is known the full importance of the advantage the Government secured for the province can be realized.

TUBERCULAR GERMS ASTRAY.

Enough to Inoculate a City, Fall From Railroad Train.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 5.—A bottle containing twelve million tuberculosis germs, enough to infect the entire city, was lost from a train on Saturday, and is in the police office here awaiting a claimant. It was found by Patrolman McGinnis after the train pulled out, and from its address was being shipped to the New Jersey State laboratories for experimental purposes.

What would have happened had some other person found the package and opened it is a matter of much speculation among the doctors here.

Defends Love at First Sight

LONDON, Sept. 3.—A defence of love at first sight was made by Sir James Crichton Browne today in his Presidential address to the conference of Sanitary Inspectors.

"I am a believer," the celebrated physician said, "in the love match, not only from a romantic but from a energetic point of view. In a very large proportion of marriages love plays no part, or only a very subordinate one. Rank, social influence ambition, and what Carlyle calls the cash nexus are dominant factors, but marriages thus made are not the most likely to produce favorable results in the next generation.

"Our aristocracy, the late Prof. Laycock used to say, has been saved by its occasional alliances with actresses and milkmaids. There must be deep physiological significance in the spontaneous, inexplicable attraction that instanty draws two persons into sympathetic union, and the offspring of unions thus brought about are, I believe, more likely to be healthy than the offspring of those who have allied themselves in cold blood from mercenary or morbid motives.

"I am not defending foolish, hasty early marriages, of which we have a great deal too many. The abolition of Gretna Green was a loss to the novelist, but a gain to the country Love at first sight of the right kind blesses him who has experienced it, and is charged with blessing for those who come after him."

The Latest Mexican "Plot"

A plot discovered is a plot defeated. The design of twenty or more Zapatistas to blow up the whole City of Mexico, lay the Alameda in waste destroy the still unfinished opera house and tear up the gardens of the paseo will not be carried out. The plotters are in jail, and the 1021 anniversary of Mexican independence can be celebrated Sept. 15 with all the customary gayety. There is room for suspicion that the reports of trouble in and around the Mexican capital have been greatly exaggerated. Zapata still eludes the [illegible] overvigilant police and regulars, and we are justified in surmising that the plot to turn the celebration of the anniversary of Father Hidalgo's uprising against the Spanish into a festival of blood is largely imaginary. Out of Hidalgo's rebellion, though it was quickly suppressed, grew the victory of the Mexicans over their worst enemies, their Spanish rulers. They have since been their own worst enemies. They are still maintaining a state of unrest in their country and permitting the postponement of peace and prosperity. The events of the last two years have proved that they still need a strong central Government. Law cannot be enforced or order restored unless public opinion upholds the arms of the Government in the National Palace. To support President Madero in his efforts to settle the disturbances is the clear duty of every intelligent Mexican citizen, and if all such could be brought to a realization of that duty there would be no further trouble. New York Times.

Minister Pleased With Hudson Bay Route

Five hundred miles by canoe from Norway House to York Factory in seven and a half days, against unfavorable winds, is the speedy work the party accompanying Hon. Frank Cochrane, minister of railways and canals, on his trip to the Hudson Bay district to determine on a terminal for the Hudson Bay Railway have to report. It was a hard trip throughout, but the Minister comes out satisfied that either in Nelson or Churchill there is a good place for a terminal, but which he favored he would not say. He thinks that the unfavorable report given by Mr. J. H. Clergue, yesterday, is owing to his boat the Beothic, having been tangled in the ice at the south of the bay, but Fort Churchill and Nelson are not affected in the summer months. Mr. Cochrane was accompanied on the trip by Mr. J. P. Gordon, assistant chief engineer of the Hudson Bay Railway, and Mr. G. W. Yates, the Minister's secretary.

Major Courtland Stearns, of the Northwest Mounted Police, Mrs. Stearns, and Dr. T. N. Marcelus, and Sergt. Borden, who were stationed in the Hudson Bay district, returned to Sydney with the party, where they took the Stanley, and after encounting some rough weather, on the Labrador coast, arrived at Montreal.

A guess is eqal to good judgment if you happen to guess right.

MYSTERY AT OSHAWA

John Baleman's Wife is Dead and His House Burned.

Aged Tailor Refuses to Throw Light on Suspicious Tragedy Which Occurs Early In the Morning In His Home — Woman's Head Bears Marks of Blows—Pair Married Recently and Had Quarrelled.

Oshawa, Sept. 6.—Persistently refusing to throw light on the death of his wife, aged 78, who was found dead on the floor of her bedroom at Cedardale, a suburb, yesterday morning, John Baleman, an aged tailor, formerly of Toronto, is held by the police here pending a full investigation. Crown Attorney Farewell of Whitby was here last evening and will be present at an inquest to be opened on Monday night next.

Noticing smoke issuing from the Baleman house about 7 a.m., a boy employed in a grocery store across the street, gave an alarm, to which both the police and fire department responded. The fire was speedily put out, and Constable Stevins discovered the body of Mrs. Baleman stretched out on the bedroom floor, her head lying bathed in blood. A search for Baleman was begun, and later the man was found calmly seated in the police station.

Baleman, who is 77 years old, makes no attempt to explain the wounds on his wife's head, the injuries being apparently the result of blows with a heavy weapon. He freely admits that his married life was very unhappy and marked by frequent violent quarrels. He says the blaze was caused by the overturning of a lamp, over which his wife was curling her hair.

Baleman has hitherto been regarded as of excellent character, and is strictly abstemious in habits.

Before coming to Oshawa nine years ago, Baleman lived for about forty years in Toronto, for the last fifteen years being on Sullivan street. The murdered woman was his second wife, married shortly before they came here. By his first wife Baleman has had two sons and two daughters. One son, Frank, lives at 8 Leonard avenue, Toronto.

FORESTRY MEN MEET

Convention of Canadian Association Opens in Victoria.

Interprovincial Gathering of Experts and Officials Interested In Conservation of Timber Resources Is Welcomed by Premier McBride—Deputy Minister Aubrey White Discusses Ontario Work.

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 6.—The Canadian Forstry Association convention partakes of the nature of an interprovincial conference. Ontario alone of the larger provinces is not represented by Ministerial attendance, but the Deputy Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, Mr. Aubrey White, Prof. Zavitz of the Agricultural College, and Dean Fernow of the University of Toronto are taking a prominent part in the conferences. The representative character of the gathering is, it is understood, being taken advantage of by the Provincial Ministers to reach understandings on several matters of policy, with a view to obtaining uniformity of action as far as possible. Hon. W. R. Ross, British Columbia; Hon. Jules Allard, Quebec, and Premier Fleming of New Brunswick, all Ministers of Lands and Forests in their respective provinces, were in lengthy conference yesterday in connection with the mooted and somewhat involved reform of further removing the administration of forest resources from political influence, while Attorney-General Bowser, British Columbia, and Attorney-General Campbell, Manitoba, thrashed out ideas on law reform.

Among the British Columbia representatives at the convention there is disappointment that none of the members of the Dominion Government are present.

Two important results are anticipated from the convention; the creation of a better understanding and co-operation between the trained scientific forester and the practical lumbermen, and the securing of a foremost place for forestry enterprise in the next interprovincial conference with a view to uniformity in progressive legislation.

British Columbia has taken the plunge with radically advanced enactments, but both Premier McBride and Mr. Ross naively admitted that it had still to be tested in the light of political pressure of certain lumbering interests.

In a very practical and detailed manner, the position of the various provinces were analyzed, particularly those of Ontario and Quebec. Ontaroi's problem is regarded as a twofold one, that of conservation from North Bay to the Manitoba boundary, and reforestation in southern Ontario. The fire-protection system was explained and discussed by Deputy Minister Aubrey White. In the course of the conference one of the visiting Ministers stated he understood that Hon. Frank Cochrane, when Provincial Minister, was inaugurating a policy to place the entire control and management of Ontario forest protection in the hands of one head under a new department, and that the announcement of this policy was pending.

VAGRANCY

ABUSIVE LANGUAGE

Catharine Elizabeth Gerrard accused a lady named Mrs. Martha Merritt, with abusive language. Agnes Pearl Wallace, corroborated the evidence of complainant. The defendant when placed in the box denied all, saying she was sitting on her sofa near an open window reading her little bible and had not used the language she was accused of. Both the complainant and the witness were recalled and denied that Mrs. Merritt's evidence was true. At this point Magistrate Masson stepped into the breach, saying it was two against one, and he would impose a small fine of $1 and costs, upon the understanding that in future amity would exist between the parties.

ASSAULT

Nazareth Droligandeo an Italian 30 years old, better known as "Big Jim", a laborer on the Grand Trunk was arrested this morning on the charge of stabbing with a knife a fellow laborer named Thomas Hill. SPECIAL IS WRECKED

G.T.R. Train Crashes Into Light Engine at Mimico.

Two Trainmen Are Injured, Possibly With Fatal Results, When the Exhibition Train Overtakes an Engine While Leaving Toronto Crowded With Passengers on Their Way to Their Homes.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—Two of the crew of the Exhibition special which left the Union Station shortly before 11 o'clock last night were seriously injured, perhaps fatally, when the special crashed into light engine 206, about 200 yards west of the Mimico yards of the G.T.R. at 11.05. The special had just left the yards when it overtook the light engine and crashed into it. The train, which carried eight coaches, was full of Exhibition visitors leaving Toronto for their home cities and towns.

No satisfactory explanation as to what a light engine was doing on the main tracks of the Grand Trunk when a special was known to have just left was forthcoming when the question was asked.

The fireman of the C.P.R. Exhibition special going west was fatally injured and the engineer also was badly hurt when the special crashed into a light G.T.R. engine, No. 206, just 200 yards west of the G.T.R. Mimico yards at 11.05 last night. Luckily none of the passengers in the eight crowded cars the special was carrying were hurt, although all were badly shaken up and frightened. The fireman in all probability will die. His injuries are very severe. He was badly crushed between the tender and the engine, and was terribly cut. The engineer was badly bruised, but was able to take the crippled engine back to the Junction yards.

The special had just left the Mimico yards and had not attained an excessive speed at the time of the accident. She was making about 20 miles an hour, and was rapidly gaining speed when the crash came. Without the least warning the light engine loomed up on the tracks. The engineer applied the air brake and reversed the throttle, but he was too close to the other engine to stop. Neither he nor the fireman had time to jump. They were caught like rats in a trap.

The night was clear, and the track is straight at the place where the two engines came together. No tail lights were showing on the engine ahead. That is why the engineer on the special did not get a chance to slow up before the impact came.

Three business men forgot to secure their places last night.

Active Business Requires Adequate Telephone Service.

The essentials of adequate telephone service for a busy establishment are:—

1. An open door for outgoing telephone calls.
2. An open door for incoming telephone calls.
3. Facilities for immediate intercommunication between offices and departments.

Private Branch Exchange telephone service meets these requirements. Outgoing and incoming messages can be handled simultaneously. Interior intercommunication can be carried on independently.

Private Branch Exchange telephone service is recognized as the only suitable service for active organizations, and it costs even less than the simpler form of telephone service.

Let us send our representative to explain it in detail and to quote rates.

McLAUGHLIN CARRIAGE CO. ADDITION.

The McLaughlin Carriage Co. of Oshawa have taken out a permit to build an addition to their factory, two stories high, 250ft. x 50ft. Their present manufacturing facilities are inadequate to meet the increasing demand for McLaughlin products. This large addition to an already enormous factory is an excellent indication.

MR. FARNHAM'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mr. Frank Farnham took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence, Canifton. Interment was in Belleville Cemetery. The services at the house were conducted by Rev. W. G. Clarke of the Tabernacle Church, owing to the absence of their pastor, Rev. Mr. Kemp. The bearers were brothers and nephews of the deceased. The many beautiful floral tributes and the large number in attendance gave evidence of esteem for deceasd in his neighborhood.

BIG APPLE CROP.

The apple crop this year promises to be very good indeed. One large firm of orchardists, who have leased apple orchards all through Ontario report that they expect one hundred thousand barrels of apples, against thirty-three thousand last year. Part of this, however is due to improved methods of caring for the orchards The early fruit are only a fair crop Astrachan and Yellow Transparent being light, and Duchess turning out a medium crop. Spies are light and Greenings a good average. Baldwins and Ben Davis are a heavy crop. It is expected that the price of fruit will be much lower this year than last.

A HEARTY WELCOME.

Rev. R. C. Blagrave, Rector of Christ Church, and his bride received a very hearty "welcome home" last night from the congregation. Despite the storm a large audience gathered in the Church Hall and the proceedings were of a highly pleasing character. Mr. Backus, churchwarden, ably presided, Ald. Walter Alford presented to Mr. Blagrave a purse of gold subscribed by the congregation and to Mr. Montgomery. who had officiated during the Pastor's absence. Chief Newton presented an ebony cane. A musical programme was contrbuted to by Messrs W. H. Wrightmyer and F. Burke with Mrs. Campbell as accompanist. Light refreshments were served.

While Russell Harker, son of Mr. John B. Harker, was working yesterday afternoon on the new dwelling which his father is erecting on Bridge Street West, he fell from a height of about fifteen feet. ILLEGAL FISHING.

The Government patrol steamer Navarch, Capt Fleming, Master, arrived here Thursday, p.m. from Brighton Bay, where 2000 yards of nets was being illegaly used which Capt Fleming seized. He also seized some hoop nets near Hay Bay. When the steamer arrived here she looked like a fishing steamer, as she was loaded with nets. If all the patrol steamers were as zealous in their work of protecting the fish as the Navarch very little poaching would be done.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

ETIENNE GIRARDOT—ACTOR.

This popular player, who will appear at the Opera House Wednesday night, Sept. 11, was born in the city of London, England, his father E. Gustave Girardot, being an eminent French painter, and his mother an English woman of gentility. Etienne was educated for commerce, but inheriting a taste for drawing he took up the study of art, abandoning that later for the playhouse. Becoming an actor in some of the old provincial stock companies. Girardot was often compelled to play two parts a night, and as was common in those days the plays were changed nightly which gave the young thespian much to do in the way of study. His parts ranging from Sir Peter Teazle to Macbeth and from the Yellow Dwarf to Antonio in "Much Ado About Nothing." Being of a versatile mind it was not long 'ere Girardot became associated with the Bancroft's in London, with John Hare, with Ellen Terry and others of prominent actor-managers of Great Britain. In 1893, Charles Frohman brought him to this country to enact the role of Lord Bancroft Babberly in "Charley's Aunt," playing it for three years both in Canada and the United States. His work therein established him as a legitimate comedian of the highest rank. This was followed by the leading role in "Miss Frances of Yale," later in "Mamzelle Awkins," and "The Purple Lady."

It was but a step from this to the companies of Mrs. Fiske, wherein this versatile artist made further strides in his chosen profession. A role, in "A Midsummer's Night's Dream," in a big Klaw & Erlanger production at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York followed. Then back again with Mrs. Fiske in "Leah Kleschna."

In 1906 Mr. Girardot in conjunction with Mr. Wilfred North revived "Charley's Aunt", playing it for two years. This season he is being featured in "The Bachelor's Baby," that delightful comedy by Francis Wilson that had near two years run at the Criterion Theatre, New York. At Griffin Opera House, Wednesday, September, 11. Seat sale at Doyle's, Monday, September 9.

MUSICAL ENTHUSIASM.

The applications for reservations on the subscription list for the Nordica Series are coming in with a rush that shows the wide-spread interest in the undertaking, which may rightfully be regarded as being of supreme musical importance. That the public of this city and its vicinity are fully alive to the importance of the Series is attested by the rapid signing up for Course Tickets in the city and the unprecedented number of inquiries and requests for reservations that have been received from surrounding points

This is not surprising when it is considered that the Series will include the greatest dramatic soprano in the world, the greatest of American baritones, one of the greatest pianists of the younger generation, and a fine violinist.

In addition to their musical importance, these concerts promise to be the most brilliant social events of the season, as judging by present indications, the audiences that will greet these great artists will be truly representative ones.

The date of the first concert of the Series is Sept. 16th, when David Bispham, the great actor-singer will be heard, assisted by Harry M. Gilbert, the composer-pianist. The second concert will bring to us Nordica, the unrivalled, assisted by Rummel, the eminent violinist, and Romayne Simmons, pianist. At the third concert we will have the opportunity of hearing Mme. Mary Hallock, a woman of great beauty and who has been hailed by the critics as the feminine Paderewski. Subscription now on at Doyle's Drug Store.

PERFECT BISCUIT BAKING NEED NOT BE DIFFICULT

It all depends on the heat your oven gives.

Ranges with slow ovens are all right for some kinds of biscuits. But an oven, that is chronically slow simply ruins others, and it is useless for many purposes.

Other stoves bake beautifully on one side and not on the other. So you can never depend on them.

"Happy Thought" Ranges are perfect bakers.

If you want a slow oven, a slow fire will produce the desired result. If you want a very hot, quick oven, just build up the fire and keep it going strong for a little while.

This feature saves you money in two ways:
It saves fuel by making it unnecessary to use too much, and by giving you the full heat value of every ounce of fuel.
It saves the food material by ensuring just the right result, no matter what part of the oven you use.
More than a Quarter Million Canadian women use the "Happy Thought" every day.

Trade With Trinidad

A telegram from Ottawa of the 3rd inst., gives the gratifying results of trade between Canada and Trinidad, which is of particular interest in view of the trade agreement recently concluded between Canada and Trinidad. Importations during the year aggregated £5,018,848, as against £3,343,000 last year. Of this total Canada supplied £90,485, an increase of £85,000. A quarter of a million dollars worth of flour figured in the list, while fish aggregated £60,000.

Canada sold 11,594 pounds of butter to the island, while France found a market there for 416,166 pounds. Canada also has lost its hold on the cheese trade, sending only 18,965 pounds, as against 180,700 from Argentina.

In the past the great bulk of this trade has been with the United States. This is the beginning of the result of dealing liberally in traffic matters with our sister colonies.

Safety at Sea

A telegram from London, England, on the 4th inst., conveys the information that, as an outcome of the Titanic enquiry, the British Board of Trade has issued revised rules for increasing the safety of lives at sea. The rules are to become effective on Jan. 1st, 1913. They provide that foreign-going passenger steamships and emigrant ships and foreign-sailing ships carrying passengers shall be required to furnish lifeboat accommodation for all on board.

The lifeboat equipment, which has been increased, must be in the boats as soon as the ship leaves the harbor and there remain throughout the voyage. The number of persons to be carried on each boat must be marked on it.

Sydney Buxton, President of the Board of Trade, in issuing the new rules, make the statement that it may be necessary to obtain further legislative power in order to make adequate boat drill compulsory and secure crews to man the boats properly.

A great difficulty in the way of securing adequate boat drill is that the steamships change a large part of their crews every voyage, and that they remain but a few days in port. How, under these circumstances, the crews can be trained in boat drill is a difficult problem to solve.

The Result of Protection

The decade from 1900 to 1910 was very prosperous for Canadian manufacturing. According to the manufacturing census of 1910, now published, most gratifying progress was made in the amount of capital invested, in the production, in the number of employees, and in the average rate of wages paid. In the decade the number of establishments increased from 14,650 to 19,202; capital invested increased from $446,000,000 to $1,245,000,000; the number of employees from 339,000 to 511,000; salaries and wages from $113,000,000 to $240,000,000; value of output from $481,000,000 to $1,164,000,000. The average wage increased from $334 to $470. These increases, ranging from 178 per cent. on capital involved to 112 per cent. on wages paid, indicate what is surely a very substantial measure of expansion. The ten years in question were years when mergering first became epidemic, and the fact that the number of establishments increased so materially in spite of the amalgamations is in itself particularly gratifying. The experience of Britain with giant amalgamations of corporation capital has shown that mergers do not necessarily spring into existence as the results of protection. That these matters can best be controlled in the interests of the people by domestic action, and not by special use of the tariff as a club, is unquestionable. The industrial life of Canada on the whole was never more vigorous than now, after nearly a third of a century since the inauguration of the National Policy.

Had Canada adopted Free Trade, the Grit policy, no such result would exist.

Official figures of exports and imports for the fiscal quarter of the current fiscal year, namely, to June 30th, show a total of Canadian trade of $237,212,779, an increase of $55,332,291 over the corresponding period of last year.

Imports for the quarter, exclusive of coin and bullion, totalled $152,975,645, as against $117,149,627, and exports $76,266,776, as against $54,624,400 for the first quarter of 1911.

The city of Vancouver has not adopted the single tax exactly, but it has adopted the principle of putting the tax as far as possible, and generally, upon the land and not the improvements. Sir James Whitney had better let the people of Ontario go that far if they want to. He cannot safely pose as the great dictator.—Kingston Whig.

The rush from the Eastern Provinces to the Canadian West continues unabated, despite the dismal pictures painted by Grit pen-artists of the terrible disabilities of the settlers there and the near approach of winter. That this city and district are contributing their quota can be seen by a glance at the "personal" column in The Intelligencer almost any day.

There are times when we seem to be drawing perilously close to the state when mere payments of taxes is considered all that should be demanded of a citizen. Personal service is deemed irksome. We pay policemen to defend our properties, soldiers to defend our country, and even athletes to take exercise for us. Carthage came to her ruin from this very cause.—Toronto News.

The latest development of the merger movement in the United States is the plan in Baltimore to buy up the religious press. Various denominational organs are to be bought up, merged or discarded, and the whole field generally systematized in the interests of economy and profit. The threat is freely made that those not coming in out of the rain will be speedily submerged in the usual way of business.—Ottawa Citizen.

That was an interesting and amusing story we told of the St. Louis couple—artist and model—who, when married, several years ago, declared that they had been wedded in a preexistence in Egypt thousands of years ago, and that they were "absolutely mated." Now they are suing for divorce! Evidently the modern spirit has been too strong for the resurrected Egyptians. What is a little marriage of 1,500 years ago when the divorce habit is so easily contracted?—Kingston Standard.

The gilded balls, the sign of pawnbrokers, are the pills on the shield of the Medici family. Its founder, Cosmo, named after St. Cosmo, the patron of physicians, joined the guild of the doctors (Medici,) as every Florentine enrolled himself in one of these charitable societies. UNSELFISH LOVERS

It is not all lovers who, in their new-found happiness and interests, are unselfish. In their joy and love for one another they frequently find that they are so absorbed in each other's welfare and interests that their companions of other days are neglected. Little duties that both used to perform for friends or neighbors are now neglected, because there seems no time to consider anyone except he or she, as the case may be.

A man will reverence and love a girl just as much (perhaps even more) if he sees that in spite of her great love for him she does not in the least neglect the old people or those who are dependent on her for little things that make all the difference to their comfort and happiness. By doing this, she will make it all the more plain to her future husband that she has the necessary good and sterling qualities that will make a loving and devoted wife.

Old folk are usually very considerate to lovers; for, to quote the old saying, "All the world loves a lover"—and older folk most certainly do.

Just a little thought, some trifling consideration—that is all it wants on both sides. Will those happy couples who are engaged endeavor to remember this: Try to be unselfish to those who may be very dependent on their help. It will be something for the happy lovers to look back upon when they are married, and each can say: "I never once neglected those who looked to me for help." When the lovers are man and wife, each will immensely appreciate that fact in the other. Love increases by unselfish acts and deeds—nay, the whole world is made the better for them.

World's Finest Post Office

London's general postoffice, the finest in the world, is located in King Edward street on the site of old Christ's hospital and is known as King Edward's building. It is seven stories high, covers an area of two blocks, and is made out of mud, chalk and gravel scooped from the bottom of the Thames.

It was the first British government building to be constructed of re-enforced concrete. The work of construction was started in 1905, King Edward laying the cornerstone, and it was not until 1910 that it was ready for occupancy. The total cost of the imposing structure was $1,750,000. It has ten acres of floor space with room for 4000 officials. The building was designed by Henry Tanner.

It was asserted at the time the building was being constructed, that 80,000 square feet of floor space were saved by the use of concrete. Not a single steel joist was placed in the structure and the retaining walls were only eight inches thick. If brick had been used, it is said, the walls would have required a thickness of seven feet to support the weight.

The general postoffice west, which contains the telegraph department controlled by the government, stands on a corner of St. Martin's le Grand. It was built in 1870-73 at a cost of $2,452,000. The telegraph instrument galleries, 300 by 90 feet, contain 500 instruments. Four steam engines of fifty horse-power each are located on a sunken floor and furnish power for shooting messages through pneumatic tubes to the other telegraph offices in the city and the Strand district. Angel street separates this building on the north from the general postoffice north, in which are located the offices of the postmaster-general and other postoffice department heads.

The old general postoffice east, built in 1825-29, on the right hand corner of St. Martin's le Grand, was closed in 1910 at the completion of of King Edward's building and the opening of the new general postoffice.

To the west of the old building is busy Newgate street, which leads to Holborn and Oxford streets.

Grain Dealers' Figures.

Winnipeg, Sept. 6.—The Northwest Grain Dealers' Association issued yesterday the following estimate of the 1912 crop for the three prairie provinces, as follows:

Wheat—10,584,000 acres, at 17 bushels per acre, 179,828,000 bushels.

Oats—5,245,000 acres, at 42 bushels per acre, 220,290,000 bushels.

Barley—1,500,000 acres, at 32 bushels per acre, 48,000,000 bushels.

Flax—1,110,000 acres, at 11 bushels per acre, 12,210,000 bushels.

The final estimate of the wheat crop of 1911 gives 117,109,000 bushels, which shows half a million bushels still in the farmers' hands.

Sewage Caused Epidemic.

Ottawa, Sept. 5.—Faulty construction in the concrete work of the intake pipe, allowing sewage from a sewer pipe alongside to enter thereby, causing an epidemic of typhoid, was the substance of a report yesterday to the judicial enquiry by engineers who examined the intake.

The most important evidence before Judge Gunn yesterday was that of the medical health officer, Dr. Shirreff. Although warned by the city bacteriologist at various periods from May to July that the water was showing signs of contamination, he did not issue public warning against use of the water until July 9, depending on increased doses of hypochlorite to purify it. The fever outbreak began on July 10.

When a range is recommended by one woman to another, it has met the final test.

The staunchest friends of the Gurney-Oxford Range are those women who have experience with it day in and day out. They know how dependable it is; they know that no other range gives such constant and unvarying satisfaction, not simply in management and economy, but in cooking results.

The Gurney-Oxford works constantly for its owner's peace of mind, and it supplements her efforts to make each meal one of absolute satisfaction.

Every woman who has had experience with the Gurney Economizer cannot help telling her friends the satisfaction of being able to regulate the fire by turning up or down one small lever. She tells about the flues that make and keep the oven always evenly heated, but above all she is enthusiastic about the golden brown biscuits, the light delicious bread and pastry, the roasts and fowl done to the queen's taste, that her Gurney-Oxford turns out.

The Gurney-Oxford owes its popularity to the recommendtion of those for whom it works.

BASEBALL.

WHEN WINGO GOT CONTROL.

Good judges of pitching claim that Wingo Anderson, the young left-hander who was with the Cincinnati team for a little while, was by far the wildest pitcher that ever tried to shoot the leather to the pan. When Mr. Anderson was feeling well, he could throw a curve that was the shape of a sickle blade—somthing freakish, terrifying, incomprehensible. If that ball came across the plate, the batsmen simply stood and gazed open-mouthed upon it; if it swung outside the plate, the umpire yelled "ball," and let it go at that and if it swung inside somebody was going to get damaged. In a few parts of games, Anderson walked something like 10 men to the game and struck out about 11. There seemed to be no such thing as hitting them when he got them over, but he passed enough men to make up, and he hit enough to make up considerably more. One of his sickle-shaped curves turned sharply in and caught Ed Konetchy on the dinner basket, and the Cardinals were without the services of their great first baseman for two weeks thereafter.

Anderson was so wild and so dangerous that he was finally shipped to the minors, where, it is supposed, he still remains, but before he went he managed to get control just for one occasion—and the memory lingers with the Reds. The team was spending an idle Sunday in New York, and many of the athletes voyaged down to Coney Island. Along toward 2 in the afternoon, 10 of the boys—all infielders or catchers with one exception, the exception being Anderson—were enjoying life on the Coney Island Bowery, when a terrific rainstorm burst upon them. They sought shelter in one of the nearby amusement concessions, and, gazing out upon the rain, bitterly lamented the fact that they had an engagement to eat at the expense of some friends in the immediate future. With the rain pelting down, not an umbrella in the bunch, and all of them arrayed in spring finery, the chances were good either to miss the banquet or to spoil their new apparel.

Then amid the disconsolate crowd uprose Wingo Anderson. "Leave it to me," cried the erratic pitcher. "Leave it to me, and I'll fix up the bunch. Right here beside us is one of these booths where you throw rings over umbrella handles. Somebody put up a few nickels, and I'll get the rain protectors."

In view of Anderson's reputation as a wild man, the proposition struck his pals as the richest of the year. The joke was too good to be passed up, and Anderson, modestly declining several bets that he couldn't ring a stick in 50 throws, took up his position. He selected a ring, skimmed it over the flock of umbrellas—and settled it firmly on the neck of a big storm defier.

Loud cheers and cries of "accidents will happen." Anderson grinned, and drove another ring clean and true. More cheers. The erratic left hander then shot ring after ring at the bunch of umbrellas, and not one of them missed the mark. In 10 throws he had lassoed 10 umbrellas—not particularly valuable umbrellas, of course, but plenty good enough for hurried-relief work in a Coney Island storm. Amid whoops, yells and tremendous applause, Mr. Anderson took his ten umbrellas and distributed them among his friends.

"That," said the hero, "was a cinch. Seems as if my style of delivery was just right to pitch these rings. If they would make league baseballs ring-shaped I'd guaarntee to never give a base on balls."

Ten umbrellas in 10 pitches. That record will probably remain unsurpassed forever—for Wingo, back in the cactus leagues, is hardly likely ever to see Coney Island again.

MARTY O'TOOLE BACK TO MINORS

The injury to Jimmy Archer, star backstop of the Cubs, is regretted by all fair-minded fans, says the New York Sun. The rivalry between the Cubs and Giants is intense, but even those who have their next summer's wages staked on the colors of McGraw do not want to see a club crippled while it is making a hard fight. Archer will be out of the game at least two weeks, it is reported, and probably for the balance of the season.

Frank Chance can find some consolation, however, in the fact that Johnny Evers is putting in his best year as a second baseman for the Cub machine. Evers has been largely responsible for the Cubs being now in the fight. His hitting, along with that of Tinker, Zimmerman and Saier, has sent the club along in the face of more or less indifferent pitching by Chance's hurling staff. It was predicted this year that Evers, because of the nervous breakdown he suffered last season, would never again be the great second baseman and asset to his club he had been before. But it is apparent to those who have watched him this year that he is playing the game of his life.

Marty O'Toole is said to [illegible] of the saddest young men in base[illegible], just at present, but if he has nothing on Barney Dreyfus, who paid $22,500 for the St. Paul star. O'Toole has been losing so consistently this season that he now gets jeers where he expected cheers, and moreover finds his future clouded in uncertanty. If Marty is turned back to the minors it will go a long way toward dulling the interest in expensive ball players and establishing the theory that they are not always worth the price asked for them.

Canadian Team Wins.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—After a hard battle the Canadian cadets succeeded in winning the much-coveted King's trophy in the team shooting match at Long Branch rifle ranges yesterday. After falling down in some of the other contests the team from Nova Scotia made a fine finish. What undoubtedly is a world's record was made by E. Remnant of England, who fired 21 shots in 90 seconds and had 20 hits. There has never been another score like this made. The range was 200 yards at a shoulder and head target. Knight of England had 19 hits out of 21 shots fired in 90 seconds. The range officers expressed admiration at the wonderful shooting of the two boys.

Next to Nova Scotia with 147 points ranked England with 136. The others were: British Columbia, 135; New Zealand, 131; Manitoba, 106; Woodstock, 95; Australia, 92; Alberta, 79.

THE RING

ALLEN KNOCKED OUT

CALGARY, Alta., September 4.—The theory that once licked, always licked, was again proved to be true when Joe Bayley, lightweight champion of Canada, with a short hook to the jaw put the former champion, Billy Allen, of Ottawa, down and out for the count in the third round bout here this morning. The sudden termination of the bout came as a disappointment to the crowd of five thousand fans who gatherered in Calgary's new arena to watch the two men who, upon their former meeting, had put up the fastest mill in the history of the game in Canada.

Allen was a beaten man before he entered the ring. Not once during the two and a half rounds did the former Champion exhibit championship form. He was nervous at the start, and kept appealing to the referee not to allow Bayley to hit in the breaks. Even before the bout started he showed symptoms of having lost his goat.

BURRELL, A GOLFER

Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, is something of a golfer. Some two years ago when Mr. Burrell had been given a trial course over the Ottawa golf links he turned to Mr. Borden and said: "Wait until we get into power, and then I'll show you how to play golf." No sooner had Mr. Burrell been sworn in as Minister of Agriculture than he made up his mind to prove that his challenge to his chief was no vain boast.

He could not play golf in winter could, after he was sworn in the Ottawa Golf Club just as soon as he could, after he was sworn of the Privy Council, and he tried his 'prentice hand for a while even while the frost was reddening up the pumpkin. But if he could not play golf he determined to do something else which would distinguish him as a member of the Rideau Cub, and he had not been a member thereof more than three weeks befor he won the amateur billiard championship of the club

This resolution was moved by Rev. G. A. Woodside of Brampton, and unanimously adopted by the Board of Social Service and Evangelism of the Presbyterian Church at yesterday's closing session of the board's annual meeting.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

WALDO IS DRASTIC.

Demands That His Accuser Appear Before Him.

New York, Sept. 6.—Rhinelander Waldo, New York's commissioner of police, incensed at statements attributed to Cornelius G. Hayes, deposed inspector, that he would air departmental scandal and cause Waldo to resign, issued a drastic order yesterday commanding Hayes to report at headquarters at once and state "in writing whether he did or did not threaten the commissioner." This further involves the police situation in that Hayes, already accused of making false statements involving the commissioner, may now be tried on further charges.

The former inspector is quoted as having said to the district attorney:

"Let me alone until I'm through with my police troubles. It is certain that I'll be broke. Waldo can't do anything else, but if I'm put on the stand I'll tell a story that will cause Waldo to resign his job instantly. Yes, and it will go further and cause a sensation in the mayor's office. I want to be free from any handicap that the grand jury may put on me.

"Give me this extra time, and the John Doe investigation will get a whole lot more help than it would were I indicted at once and so tied up in my fight with the commissioner."

Commissioner Waldo says that he has nothing to fear from Hayes, and added that the former inspector would have ample opportunity to talk all he wants to at his trial, which will be held at police headquarters to-day.

Bandit May Die.

New Orleans, La., Sept. 6.—Suffering from a severe scalp wound, the bandit, who, single handed, robbed the New York Limited train on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, 22 miles east of New Orleans, Wednesday night, later to be felled by the locomotive driver, was brought to New Orleans yesterday morning and placed in the Charity Hospital.

The bandit said that his name was Howard E. Edwards, and that his family lived in Jupiter, Fla. He gave the police information that is expected to lead to the early capture of three other members of a gang which is believed to have been responsible for a series of sensational train robberies in this section.

Edwards is in a precarious condition and attendants at the hospital declared it doubtful whether he would recover from his injuries.

Leg Washed Up at Niagara.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Sept. 6.—The left leg of a man was found washed up on the American shore of the Niagara river, just above the Whirlpool, Wednesday afternoon by Harry Scott of Lewiston, a Gorge Route employe. The only clothing found on the leg was a brown cotton sock and a Hamilton brown shoe, size 6. According to Coroner Walter A. Scott, the leg was that of a young man. It was well formed and had been in the water less than four days.

Heavy Odds on Wilson.

New York, Sept. 6.—A cable to The Tribune from London says: Since the result of the Vermont election has been announced, the odds on Woodrow Wilson at Lloyds have increased considerably. So great an amount of insurance has been placed on the probable election of Wilson that the rate has gone to 75 per cent. With the market so full, little further business can be done. The rate on Taft is now 40 per cent. and on Roosevelt 25 per cent.

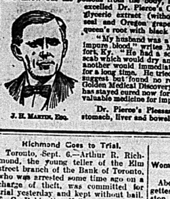
Oppose Compulsory Arbitration.

Newport, Eng., Sept. 6.—Compulsory arbitration of trade disputes is strongly opposed by British trade unionists, who yesterday at the Trades Union Congress, cast an overwhelming vote against the adoption of the principle.

Nearly two million members of trades unions are represented by the 500 delegates attending the congress, which began its sessions Sept. 2.

How The Body Kills Germs.

Germs that get into the body are killed in two ways—by the white corpuscles of the blood, and by a germ-killing substance that is in the blood. Just what this substance is, we do not know. The blood of a healthy person always has some germ-killing substance in it to ward off the attack of disease. The fountain head of life is the stomach. A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished. To put the body in healthy condition, to feed the system on rich, red blood and throw out the poisons from the body, nothing in the past forty years has excelled Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a pure glyceric extract (without alcohol), of bloodroot, golden seal and Oregon grape root, stone root, mandrake and queen's root with black cherrybark.



J. H. MARTIN, ESQ.

"My husband was a sufferer from stomach trouble and impure blood," writes MRS. JAMES H. MARTIN, of Frankfort, Ky. "He had a sore on his face that would form a scab which would dry and drop off in about a month, then another would immediately form. It continued this way for a long time. He tried every remedy that any one would suggest but found no relief. He then tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which completely cured him. He has stayed cured now for two years, and I recommend this valuable medicine for impurities of the blood."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

Richmond Goes to Trial.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—Arthur R. Richmond, the young teller of the Elm street branch of the Bank of Toronto, who was arrested some time ago on a charge of theft, was committed for trial yesterday and kept without bail. T. C. Robinette, K.C., appeared for him and entered a plea of not guilty. Detective Tipton gave evidence. He said that Richmond had told him that he had taken $22,000 in all and that the entire amount had been lost on the race tracks, gambling. Richmond is charged with stealing $26,027.

Held By Pirates.

Hong Kong, China, Sept. 6.—A powerful band of Chinese pirates yesterday carried off the master and chief engineer of a river tug and are holding them for ransom. They demand $20,000.

The pirates first fired a volley on a lighter loaded with oil proceeding up the West River near the town of Kong-moon. Then they boarded the tug towing her and seized the entire crew, but afterards released all except the captain and first engineer.

Girl Wanted to Fly.

Brockville, Sept. 6.—Miss Erma Turkington, daughter of Mark Turkington, with her father's consent, applied to Mr. Hemstrought for a trip in the biplane in one of his flights yesterday, but the aviator was forced to refuse, inasmuch as the machine is built exclusively for display purposes and not for passenger travel.

Miss Turkington was the plucky young lady who saved Miss Pennock from drowning a few weeks ago in the river.

Tramps Murder Constable.

Calgary, Alta., Sept. 6.—Special Policeman Robert G. MacIntosh of the Canadian Pacific Railway was murdered about ten o'clock Wednesday night, presumably by tramps, in the C.P.R. yards. MacIntosh was found lying in the shadow of some box cars about five minutes after the shooting, unconscious, with his revolver still tightly clasped in his right hand.

For Cartier Memorial.

Victoria, Sept. 6.—The British Columbia Government has made a grant of $5,000 towards the fund for the erection of a monument to mark the centennary of Sir George Cartier's birth.

Sir Percy Girouard Coming.

London, Sept. 6.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Among the passengers of the Royal George, which sailed yesterday, were Sir Percy Girouard, Judge Haggart, Mayor Lee of New Westminster, and Prof. Black.

Nothing definite could be obtained regarding the visit of Girouard, but it is understood he will be in Ottawa when the naval question is discussed.

Peterboro Man Shoots Wife.

Peterboro, Sept. 6.—Following a quarrel in their home on Aylmer street yesterday morning, William Lea secured his rifle and shot his wife, the bullet striking the woman in the left cheek.

He was arrested in his room feigning sleep. The woman will recover unless complications set in.

H. L. Drayton at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—H. L. Drayton, K.C., successor of the late Judge Mabee as chairman of the Dominion Railway Commission, has arrived in Ottawa and taken up his new duties at the offices of the commission. He will preside for the first time at a sitting of the board to be held on Sept. 17.

Enquiring Into Infant's Death.

Brantford, Sept. 6.—An inquest has been ordered here into the circumstances surrounding the death of Violet Santache. The attending physician reported that his instructions had not been carried out, and Coroner Ashton ordered an inquest.

SUFFRAGETTES ACTIVE.

Women Tried to Mob Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill.

Aberdeen, Scotland, Sept. 6.—Suffragettes yesterday again waylaid Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, when he landed from the Admiralty yacht here. He was met by a crowd of women, one of whom shrieked "Why don't you stop forcibly feeding our women?" She was seized by the police.

In the meantime another woman made a rush at Mr. Churchill and tried to clutch him, but was prevented by a policeman and several further attempts to molest the First Lord of the Admiralty were frustrated by the vigilance of the police.

Suffragettes Heckle Lloyd-George.

Wrexham, Wales, Sept. 6.—A wild suffragette outbreak was brought about yesterday by the appearance at the National Eisteddfod of David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The pavilion in which he was to deliver an address was crowded, and as soon as he began to speak a woman jumped up and shouted, "Why don't you give women their rights?" She was at once thrown out, but several other women followed her example and were all ejected by the police.

Some of the women were roughly handled by the crowd in the surrounding park, and one of them was seriously injured.

Free Trade Dead He Says.

New York, Sept. 6—Governor Woodrow Wilson, speaking at the workingmen's dinner here last night, boldly declared that free trade sentiment is dead in the United States. He said:

"We ought periodically all of us to go outside and then come in again and realize what is happening. So that when people talk to you about the danger of free trade and the folly of the free trader, do not be afraid that you will meet a free trader in the dark anywhere, because there is not any free trader who can get abroad in America at present. All that we are considering, therefore, in considering the policy of protection, is relative freedom in trade."

The governor reiterated his opposition to a federal commission to regulate monopolies. He said there was no body of men who knew enough to tell the country what the process of industry should be.

Will Fight It Out.

Montreal, Sept. 6.—The sensational developments regarding the Banque Internationale, with the dispute between the Parisian shareholders and Sir Rodolphe Forget, will now be fought out in the courts, according to a judgment yesterday rendered by Mr. Justice Beaudin. This was secured by the Parisian shareholders when their application for a writ of "quo warranto" was granted by the Superior Court. This is the result of the decision of the recent annual meeting of the bank, when the proxies of the Parisian people, representing 55 per cent. of the stock, were ruled out.

Hughes Denies Report.

London, Sept. 6.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Telegraphing last evening from Oxford, where he is the guest of Hon. Lewis Harcourt, Hon. Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of Militia, authorizes the Canadian Associated Press to say that there is not a word of truth in the report appearing in Canada, that he has been refused permission to attend the German army review, and that his arrangements are unaltered.

Safebreakers at Wyebridge.

Wyebridge, Ont., Sept. 6.—The general store of Nelson McRae at Wyebridge was broken into through the night. The safe in the office was broken open and the contents scattered about. The tools used in procuring an entrance were left behind, and the police are working on a clue.

TO MEET SEPT. 25.

Dr. Shearer Announces Moral Reform Council Session.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—Rev. Dr. Shearer, secretary of the Dominion Board of Moral and Social Reform, is issuing the call for the annual meeting of this important national council. The meeting has been fixed for Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 25 and 26.

The board includes representative clergy and laymen from all the evangelical churches. Bishop Farthing of Montreal is one of its most active Anglican members.

Under Dr. Shearer's aggressive field secretaryship the board conducted a Dominion campaign for the prohibition of book-making at race meetings, the agitation resulting in the enactment of the Miller bill under which a limitation of eight days is placed on race meetings with legalized book-making or the pari mutuels.

The chief feature of the annual meeting on Sept. 25 and 26, will be the adoption of plans for a year's educational campaign.

The Presbyterian and Methodist moral reform departments are practically the active branches of the Dominion board. Rev. Dr. Shearer is secretary of the Presbyterian, and Rev. Dr. Moore of the Methodist moral reform departments.

In view of the change of Government at Ottawa, and of the assurances of sympathy with the fight against the white slave traffic, a number of changes in the personnel of the general committee are prepared with a view to rendering it more influential at Ottawa than at present constituted.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Wheat to-day closed heavy after touching the lowest price of the season, 91c a bushel. An estimate that this year's crop in the United States would be 107,000,000 bushels larger than the yield twelve months back was mainly responsible. Final sales ranged from 1c to 1¼c under last night. Corn finished at a net decline of 1¼c to 1½c, oats [illegible] to ½c, and provisions down 5c to 32½c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅝c higher than yesterday on wheat, and ⅜c to ½c higher on corn. Antwerp closed ⅝c lower, Buda-Pest, ¼c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 5.—Some foreign bids for wheat came 3d higher and others were unchanged from yesterday, but even on the decline in Winnipeg very little business was worked, owing to the fact that prices in Winnipeg are held so much above American wheat values that exporters of the latter have been and are still selling large quantities for export. The ocean freight room from here and United States ports is now well booked up to the end of December and what little is left is at very high rates. As far as tramp steamers are concerned, they are difficult to obtain at any price. The situation therefore is that the prospects for moving any large quantity of this year's northwest wheat crop before the close of navigation are poor. The foreign demand for oats is good and sales for quick shipment were made at advanced prices.

There was some demand for new crop spring wheat flour and sales of several thousand sacks were made at 27s for November shipment. Demand for millfeed is good and prices have advanced $1 per ton. The tone of the butter market is strong. Cheese fairly active. Eggs firm.

TORONTO, Sept. 5.—Receipts of live stock were reported by the railways to be 19 carloads, 170 cattle, 672 hogs, 455, sheep and lambs and 62 calves.

Receipts were light. The cattle were principally common and light butchers, and stockers and light feeders, for which there is a good demand, all over, at the present time.

Charles Marbee & R. Wilson, who are making a specialty of handling feeders and stockers, sold 2 loads of these weighing 800 to 900 lbs., at $5.25 to $5.60.

Charles McCurdy bought 30 light butchers, 850 to 950 lbs., at $4.90 to $5.60.

The sheep, lambs and calves were reported as selling at about the same prices as are reported at the Union Yards for same quality.

BELLEVILLE CENTRE OF CANADA'S GREATEST CHEESE DISTRICT

London Paper Publishes a Highly Interesting Interview with Mr. John Elliott, President of the Belleville Board of Trade—Facts and Figures of Great Significance

We reproduce herewith from the Canadian Gazette of London, England, a report of an interview held by that journal with Mr. John Elliott, President of the Belleville Board of Trade and Manager of the local branch of the Standard Bank of Canada. The Gazette devotes to the interview a full page, in which illustrations are given of Front St. at the intersection of Bridge Street looking northward, Belleville harbor looking southward and Belleville market. Our contemporary says:

Mr. J. Elliott, President of the Belleville (Ontario) Board of Trade, is visiting England for a few weeks. To a representative of the Canadian Gazette, Mr. Elliott said that Belleville was progressing most satisfactorily. "No boom, but a sound and steady growth."

"Our population is now, about 12,000 and our local industries are being kept quite active. We have in our midst the largest cement manufacturing concerns. Belleville is the centre of the best and largest cheese producing district in the Dominion. The annual total export of cheese from Canada to the United Kingdom is about $20,000,000, and of this no less than $4,000,000 is exported from the Belleville district, which includes Picton, Napanee, Peterborough, Madoc, Stirling, and Campbelford. The local Cheese Board alone handles $1,000,000 worth of cheese each year.

London Wants Only the Best

"During my visit I am taking the opportunity of meeting as many of the British dealers as possible, as it is by such personal relationship that trade is often fostered. It might interest your readers to know that the London market calls only for the best grade of cheese, Liverpool, Glasgow, and Brisol being satisfied with a slightly lower quality—although all Belleville cheese is of good quality. In fact, deputations come from all parts of Canada to study our methods. We have a high reputation to maintain, and we are only too anxious to continue to justify the high position the Belleville produce has reached in the British markets.

Inducements for Manufacturers

"There is also a big production of canned vegetables, fruits, &c. Our transportation facilities are of the best. Belleville being served by the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Railways, and the Canadian Pacific Company are now making connection. Our water transportation is equally advantageous, as boats trading between Fort William and Montreal make Belleville a port of call. In addition to these, the city offers many inducements to manufacturers. Electric power, generated on the River Trent, is supplied at the rate of $18 per horse-power per annum, and there is an abundance of good factory sites available. Belleville is about midway between Toronto and Montreal, and has a beautiful situation on the bay of Quinte.

Two Hundred Farm Labroers Wanted

"Farm laborers and domestic servants are in demand. Two hundred men could be placed with local farmers immediately on arrival, and the local factories could give employment to the younger members of the families who wished it."—The Canadian Gazette, London, England.

Who Will Attend The New Schools

To The Editor of the Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—

The new school on Ann Steet is to open on Monday next, and as the writer has repeatedly been asked what scholars were to attend that school, we would again print out the dividing lines between the Ann Street School and the Pine Street School, as arranged by the Board some time ago.

Starting at Front Street the line runs up Victoria Avenue to Charles along Charles south to Queen to the eastern limits of the city. All living south and west of this line will attend Ann Street School.

As No. 2 school in West Belleville will not accommodate the number of pupils who desire to attend there, the principle, Mr. Barragar, will take in all possible, and the remainder will attend Ann Street School until a new school is provided in West Belleville.

ELECTRIC STORM WAS A FIERCE ONE

Heaviest Seen Here in Many Years --Damage in Town Slight-- Fires in Country

Nature's elements were at war last evening, and the fiercest electrical storm that has been seen here in many years was the result. At about 6 p. m. the roll of thunder was heard to the north of the city and heavy masses of dark clouds with ragged edges were seen hurrying in that direction, until frequent flashes of lightning outlined them clearly and sharply. An hour later the deep booming of heaven's artillery became manifest, and within a few minutes the heavens were obscured by dense masses of black coluds, which hung over Belleville like a pall. From behind these came sharp reports and almost incessant flashes of blinding light. When the storm was at its height there rang out a sharp, almost deafening, crash and rain poured down in a torrent for a length of time. After about an hour's duration the battle of the elements passed away, but far into the night the heavens to the eastward were illuminated with flashes of light veiled by clouds.

So far as can be ascertained only trifling damage was done in the city, a telegraph or telephone pole on Mill Street being shattered and a few limbs torn from trees. The electric light, however, was shut off for a length of time and telegraph communication was interrupted temporarily.

A thunder bolt entered the lower part of Wm. Smith's house on Coleman street, but did no damage.

BARNS BURNED.

While, as has been said, no material damage resulted in the city from the storm, it was unfortunately otherwise in the country, three barns in Thurlow being struck by lightning and destroyed, with all their contents, the flames being plainly visible in town.

At Ross' Corners a barn owned by Mr. N. Vermilyea and tenanted by Mr. Egbert Brown, was struck by the electric fluid and completely destroyed with all its contents, which included a quantity of grain and hay, but fortunately no live stock. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

Mr. Farewell Davis' barn, in the 6th concession, and another barn in the 4th concession were also destroyed, but no particulars could be obtained.

It was also reported that four barns in the vicinity of Orono were burned by lightning.

Strangely, we are informed that little or none of this terrific storms was felt in Trenton, only twelve miles west of us.

WEDDING BELLS.

TOWNSEND—ALLISON.

A very pretty house wedding took place at two o'clock on Thursday, August 29th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs D. W. Allison, Picton, when their daughter, Edith, was united in marriage to Mr. Frank Townsend, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Townsend of Ameliasburg, by the Rev. A. K. Edmison of Demorestville.

The parlor was decorated with asters and ferns, while the dining-room was rich with golden glow, and the hall was a mass of flowers, all tastefully arranged.

The bride wore a pretty gown of white satin, and carried white flowers, while the bridesmaid, Miss Mabel, wore pink and carrid pink flowers. Mr. Mahlon Eckhart ably supported the groom.

The bride and groom drove to Belleville taking the train for Napanee and other points, and will shortly return and be at home in Ameliasburg.

Many gifts were left by the forty odd guests assembled, and friends far and near sent appropriate gifts to show their love for Edith, and to express good wishes for a long and prosperous married life for Mr. and Mrs. Frank Townsend.

TRAIN ROBBER CAUGHT

Engineer Hit Him on the Head With a Coal Pick.

NEW ORLEANS, La., September 4.—The Louisville and Nashville passenger train leaving here for the north at 8 o'clock was held up by a train robber near Micheaud twelve miles from here. The train was stopped near the same spot where train robbers, supposed to be the same, attempted to hold up a freight train.

The robbers evidently expected to rob the express car, but there was none on the train, and they had to get what they could from passengers. Engineer Barr, of Mobile, struck the robber over the head with a coal pick. The bandit is dying in a hospital at Bay St. Louis, but will give no name. All the loot, except one mail bag, thorwn from the car was recovered.

Harrowsmith Triplets Are Doing Well

The triplets born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jackson at Harrowsmith on Thursday last, are doing well today. The mother is at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Curran, and two nurses are in attendance on her and her interesting family.

Dr. Warren Wilkins, the attending physician, stated that both mother and babes were doing well and that he anticipated the happiest result. It was his first case, and he is naturally elated over the event.

Both the parents are young and are natives of the Sydenham district. They were married there about seven years ago and were already the parents of two promising children.

About a year ago they removed to Belleville, where Mr. Jackson is employed as brakeman on the G. T. R. A few weeks ago Mrs. Thomas came down on a visit to her parents at Harrowsmith.

Two Men Shot At a Charivari

Francis Baker and William Kiell, two young men belonging to Wolfe Island, are in the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, in a serious condition, as the result of the explosion of a rifle, when they were taking a prominent part in a charivari party at the island, Wednesday morning.

The marriage took place on the island, at 10.30 o'clock Wednesday morning, of Miss O'Shea, daughter of Michael O'Shea, and James Berry, two well-known young people on the island, and Messrs. Kiell and Baker were members of a party who made arrangements to give the young couple a "send-off". However, the afair turned out rather serious for them. In some unaccountable matter, the rifle exploded, and the young men received its contents.

Dr. C. A. Morrison, of Kingston, was hastily summoned, and taken over to the island in a motor boat, and after attending the injured men, had them removed to the Hotel Dieu. This afternoon, doctors were using the X-ray on both of them.

While in a serious condition, it is expected that both will recover. One of the young men received about thirty shots in the shoulder and the other, twelve in his head.

Striker's Triplets

The King's bounty of $15 was granted at the request of Mrs. Barnardo to Mrs. Baker, Dorset Street, London, England, who gave birth to triplets (two boys and a girl). The father had not been working for seven weeks up till the time of the addition to his family, owing to a strike.

SHALL I WIN HER?

THE STORY OF A WANDERER

By JAMES GRANT

Author of "The Romance of War," "Under the Red Dragon," "Fairer than A Fairy," etc.

"Are you a Caffre?" I asked, now surveying the tawny girl with some interest, for her skin was not much darker than that of some Italian girls, and her hair was long and silky.

"My mother was a Griqua."

"And your father?"

"Sandilli the great chief," said she proudly.

"And you—you?" I gasped.

"Am Mariqua, the girl who is to marry you," she replied, with a waggery almost European, as she swept my face with her fan of ostrich feathers.

"Good heaven!" I exclaimed, and I sprang to my feet in earnest now.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

I scarcely know how to relate the strange events that must fill this chapter up, unless I drop some of the links in my chequered story.

My thoughts were with Clarice Haywood, who, although saved at last, was yet quite lost to me. If I was ever to escape and rejoin her, arms and a fleet horse were absolutely necessary; and to procure these I must dissemble and foil the savage in his own wily fashion.

It is a perilous doctrine that temptation of itself palliates an offence and yet there is much to consider on this point in all temptations and offences.

The girl thrust upon me by the Caffre chief was all and every way unlike the kind of woman I had, to my own disgust and horror conjured up—a Caffre belle, with hooked nose and negro lips, her skin anointed with grease and sibilo, or iron ore, that sparkled in the sun, her woolly hair plaited into cords, and adorned by metal pendules, her attire an apron cut into throngs, a kaross of skin, and moccasins.

All unlike a creature of this kind the girl whom I now saw was of mixed race—the daughter of a Griqua mother, whose tribe was descended from the old original Dutch colonists of South Africa on one side and the aborigines on the other, a tribe occupying the Orange River territory, which is larger than Great Britain.

She had the indescribable grace and ease of carriage peculiar to the women of Caffraria and the Fingoes, but in this girl much of the Dutch blood predominated. Probably she was not more than sixteen years of age; but in that tropical region she was considered a woman. Her figure was faultlessly beautiful, and a dress which consisted of a low corset of scaret stuff, and a double skirt of scarlet on green, barely reaching to below the knee, a kaross of black fur edged with scarlet, and a profusion of beads, displayed fully enough of it. For one of a mixed race, her skin was wonderfully fair —fair, almost, as I have said, as that of an Italian girl of the dusky type.

Her finely tapered arms were bare and her delicate little feet were encased in embroidered shoes, that were too complete to be termed sandals, and joined her beaded moccasins.

There was much of European regularity in her face, which was singularly sweet in expression, though the lips were somewhat full and red her eyes were large and dark, soft as those of a gazelle, and full of lustre. Though the head-dress of the Griqua girls generally consists of two brightly colored silk handkerchiefs, her head was bare, and her tresses, which were long rather silky and of the deepest jet, were braided round in heavy coils, interwoven with bright metal beads.

Amid the beads at her neck was one formed from the root of a bush that grows by the Orange River, and which possesses a sweet and peculiar perfume.

Under her smooth, clear olive skin I could see the hot southern blood mantling in her cheek, as I surveyed her with a mingled expression of face indeed.

My situation was a very embarrassing one, to say the least of it; for my Griqua beauty was quite as much a "girl of the period," as her fairer sisters elsewhere and like them in taste, was very much disposed to lionize and idolize me as a distinguished foreigner—more than all, perhaps, from the northern mixture in her blood, as a pure European.

Something of a genuine blush blended with the tender smile that filled her face, when placing upon my arm two hands, which, though very brown, were small, and so beautifully formed that a sculptor woud have doted on them she said:

"You will not hate, but learn to love me in time though the people of my father are at war with yours?"

"I shall never hate you be assured of that," said I gently, while I placed the letters of Clarice Douglas in the pocket of my now tattered blouse; "but what will my people say if I return to them no more?"

"Does it matter to us what they say?"

"Us?" I queried, feeling myself as already adopted.

"Yes—to you and to me; besides, as the witch doctors have predicted my father is a great chief, and he will drive all your wicked people from the land of the Kousie."

I shook my head and almost smiled.

"And you have forsaken them to come and live with us?"

"I have forsaken them to come and dwell with you," said I, gallantly, making almost a wry face nevertheless, while she took my hand between her own and covered it with kisses.

The entire situation was fast becoming bewildering—awkward to the last degree. I felt myself an "engaged man" here as well as elsewhere; but here, in spite of my teeth.

After a pause she resumed.

"How many Gods have you? As the Umlanjeni will tell you, we have but the sun and the wind to worship."

"We have but one."

"So I have heard the Orange River missionaries say."

"You have heard them preach?"

"Yes; in the language of the Griquas: and you will marry me in their faith?"

"This is too much," I exclaimed impatiently, and turned away, feeling for a time thoroughly annoyed for the daughter seemed to be even "longer headed" than her father.

"Do not be offended with me," said she, caressing my neck; "the poor Griqua girl does so love and worship her white lord."

"Love me, do you say? Why, you have only known me five minutes—if you understand what five minutes are."

"I have watched by your bed since the sun rose above the mountains; and while watching thus I have learned—"

"What?"

"To love you."

"Impossible! You can't know what love is."

Her large eyes filled with a strange light and she said half petulantly.

"I am not used to being contradicted; and I said I love you."

"Why?"

"Because you looked pale, and weary, and sad; you sighed often in your sleep; you dreamt."

"How do you know that?"

"Because you uttered a word, or a name; I know not which."

"Clarice?"

"Yes that was the sound. You murmured it many times. Then your lips quivered and a tear left your eye—a tear which I kissed away."

"You?"

"Yes; but so softly, so gently that you never felt me nor awoke."

"By Jove!" thought I, "all this is becoming too much of a good thing."

"I shall often watch you so," said she, with a soft smile.

"When?"

"When we are married," was the cool reply.

"If I marry you, Mariqua, it must be in the fashion of your own tribe —as a Caffre, if I am to become one."

"But I am a Griqua," said she, coldly, and half turning her olive-tinted shoulder to me.

Bouquet for J. W. Johnson M. P. P.

(From Trenton Advocate.)

Some Eastern papers referring to the possible early retirement from office of Hon. Mr. Matheson, Principal Treasurer, are suggesting Mr. A. E. Donovan, M.P.P., Brockville, as his successor. We sincerely trust Col. Matheson may long continue in the position at present so ably filled by him, but should impaired health oblige him to relinquish office, let us whisper to the Premier that he need not go as far east as Brockville to find a suitable successor to the hon. gentleman. All the Premier need do is to call up Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P. for West Hastings, and invite him to accept the portfolio. In Mr. Johnson the Premier would find a Treasurer who would be a credit to the great Province of Ontario.

School Opening Is Postponed

It was anticipated that Ann Street Public School would be ready for opening on Monday next but it will not be opened until Monday the 16th instant. The architect was in the city today from Toronto and advised that the opening be delayed for a week considering it necessary to do so.

Smallpox Case Quite Neglected

MONTREAL Sept. 6.—The mother suffering from smallpox, the father working every day as a Montreal Tramways employe, coming into direct daily contact with hundreds of persons, children playing about the streets and mixing up with the youngsters of the neighborhood, such is the condition of affairs revealed as existing in one family, as a result of a complaint filed at the City Health Office Tuesday morning. The family which is French-Canadian, resides on Huntley street, and when the civic health officers paid a hurried visit to the house, it was found that the mother bore unmistakeable signs of having been suffering from the dread disease, whilst a young child is rgarded as a smallpox suspect. In the flat immediately above that occupied by the family, it was said that another child was ill, but despite all efforts of the visiting civic officer, it was found impossible to gain entrance to the premises. Another visit will be paid, and, if the attempt proves unsuccessful, drastic methods will be employed by the health authorities.

Cheese Weighing Is Investigated

KINGSTON, Sept. 6.—Members of the Frontenac Cheese Board, who appeared here this afternoon before the Royal Commission appointed by the Dominion Government to inquire into the grievances of dairymen regarding the weighing of cheese at Montreal, gave it as their opinion that it would be in the interests of dairying to have an official Government referee in Montreal to act with regard to disputes.

They held, with Dr. J. A. Edwards, M.P. for Frontenac, who inspired the appointment of the Commission, that the system of weighing cheese at the metropolis was unfair to the producer. Charging for cheese under weight and making no allowance for cheese overweight did not appeal to them.

The Frontenac cheese men asked that their scales be tested by a Government expert, as they were unable to assign any reason for the reported shortage of weight. The test will be made. A few Frontenacers gave it as their opinion that the shipping of cheese when it was too young was probably the cause of some of the trouble. Dr. Edwards was present.

The next session of the Commission will be held at Cornwall on the 13th. After that there will be no further sittings of the Commission until October, in view of the farmers being very busy this month.

DISLOCATES JOINTS AT WILL

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—Wm. Reinhardt, Is Over Car Accident.

CHICAGO, Sept.—William Reinhardt, according to the police, has the power to throw his shoulders out of joint at will. This unusual faculty got Reinhardt into trouble last night. He was taken from a cot in a west side hospital and locked up in a police station on a charge of attempting to operate a confidence game.

Reinhardt fell from a street car a few days ago and company officials said they had ascertained that he at one time swindled a railroad out of $1,500 because he was able to dislocate his shoulder joints. An attorney offered a settlement for $1,000 for injury of the shoulders and Reinhardt's arrest followed.

Rain Could Not Dampen the Ardor of the People--An Enthusiastic Reception

(Intelligencer Special)

THREE RIVERS, Que., Sept. 7.—Right Hon. R. L. Borden, accompanied by other members of the Cabinet, arrived here this morning aboard the Government steamer Lady Grey. They were met at the wharf by the Mayor, Dr. L. P. Normain and a large crowd of citizens, whom a deluge of rain did not deter from attending the welcome to the Canadian Premier upon his return from Britain. The visitors were driven to the Town Hall, where an address of welcome was read to Mr. Borden by the Mayor, in which he was assured of the admiration of the citizens of Three Rivers. The Premier warmly thanked the citizens for their welcome.

Suffragettes Outwitted The King's Guards

(Intelligencer Special)

BALMORAL, Scotland, Sept. 7.—Suffragettes completely outwitted the guards and gained entrance to King George's Highland castle last night. The King is residing here during the shooting season and the grounds are carefully guarded, but the suffragettes left purple flags all around His Majesty's private golf links bearing the words "Votes for women means peace for Cabinet Ministers," and carried off the flags marking the holes.

The Moonshiner Did Not Appear

MONTREAL, Sept. 6.—George Tremblay, who on April 26th was found guilty of running an illicit still at 40 Dalhousie Street, and was sentenced by Judge Lafontaine to a fine of $500, failed to put in an appearance when his name was called, and at the request of A. W. Grenier, counsel for the Revenue Department, Judge Lanctot ordered the bail of $1,000 forfeited, and ordered the issue of a new warrant for the arrest of the accused.

On March 20th last, Capt. Fennell, of the Young Street police station, accompanied by Constables Ward and Ledoux, went to the suspected premises ,their attention to the place being attracted by a strong smell of fermenting liquor. Tremblay was found inside the building dressed in overalls and was engaged in fixing some piping in connection with the still. One of the three large vats in the place contained about a thousand gallons of liquor undergoing the process of fermentation.

Wild Buffalo in Hudson Bay Country

WINNIPEG, Sept. 6.—Harry Radford, the American explorer, who left Edmonton, Alta., three years ago for the north country, reached Trenton river last winter, and has been hunting there this summer, according to word just received by the Hudson Bay Company. News of his arrival at the Bay across the barren lands was the first that had been heard from Radford for more than a year.

Radford says there are more than 350 wild buffalo in the Slave Lake district in the Hudson Bay country. He says they are well protected and there is every reason to believe they will multiply rapidly. The Indians, he said, guard the animals, and will not allow them to be shot.

10,000 Operatives' Wages Lowered

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 4.—A 20 per cent. reduction has been agreed to in the wages of 10,000 operatives in glass bottle factories of the country, after a conference of 10 days between representatives and the National Association of Glass Manufacturers.

The manufacturers wanted a 30 per cent cut, and the men struggled for the maintenance of the old scale, which has prevailed for 40 years.

Manufacturers who have not installed the new automatic blowing machines found themselves confronted by the necessity of cutting wages or leasing expensive devices which reduced the cost of manufacture 40 per cent.

492 Prisoners In Penitentiary

Kingston Penitentiary now boasts a population of four hundred and ninety-two, the largest since 1839 when six hundred and twenty names were on the roll call. Of these sixty are life prisoners, also a record number. Despite these figures there has been a slight decrease in the number of convictions, especially those of a serious nature. This is because of the changed attitude of the judges in regard to capital punishment. Of the 442 souls only eleven are women. This is much smaller than usual, the record being 30.

The parole system has been in effect since 1900 and since that time 580 convicts have been released upon the conditions of the act. This, of course, must be taken into consideration when one looks at the figures in total.

Upon the whole conditions among criminals are better than they were even a few years ago. The parole system is one feature which has been instrumental in reducing that criminal type of convict, who, disheartened and desperate, is truly a menace to society. The realms of insanity and crime have also been more clearly defined, with encouraging results.

Police Court Circles

The police during their rounds last night found the back door of a prominent business place insecure.

A LISTER'S CASE.

Edwin E. Thompson was today before Magistrate Masson charged with being intoxicated and also being upon the prohibited list. The accused at first demurred to telling where he obtained the liquor, but later stated that Clem. Ellis had procured it for him. The Magistrate enlarged the case until Friday next and in the meantime the accused is out on bail.

FINED FOR ASSAULT.

Naazreth Drolsandeo, an Italian who was arrested yesterday on a charge of stabbing with a knife a party named Thomas Hill, was this morning before the Magistrate. Through the interpreter the foreigner alleged that he did not intend to stab Hill, but was whittling at the time when some trouble occurred between them. He pleaded guilty to assault and had to compensate Hill and pay all costs, totaling $23.75, which was paid. Before being discharged Drolsandeo was given some timely advice by His Worship.

Girl was on Ship As a Boy

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The steamship Carpathia of the Cunard Line was obliged to stop in midstream after getting away nicely from the pier yesterday so that Capt. Rostron could send ashore a girl stowaway.

The young woman was Connie Magnett, who says she is English and a dancer, but to all appearance she was a boy who was triyng to stow away for a trip abroad. Miss Magnett went aboard some time before the ship sailed and her costume did not attract any particular attention. She said she had a message for Capt. Rostron, and she then hid in what she thought would be an unoccupied stateroom. The whistle for casting off mooring sounded before she was discovered.

A steward who brought a load of baggage to the room found her and reported to the purser. The purser came running, and then, with the girl in tow, reported to the captain on the bridge.

"I thought there was going to be a war at first," said Miss Magnett, explaining. "There were so many orders. I know I cried, and the captain found out that I wasn't a boy because I had forgotten to bring a boy's handkerchief. He stopped the ship, signalled for a tug, and made me climb down a shaky rope ladder to go ashore I tried to persuade him that I was only homesick and that I thought I might be a cabin boy as well as anybody else. But he made me leave.

"On the dock a policeman suspected me, and I was afraid I was going to be arrested, but finally they let me pass, and I went home."

Being slender and young she had no difficulty in making herself look boyish enough to pass casual inspection, but she confessed that she felt very shaky all of the time.

WHARF STREET DEBATING CLUB

The Club Will Lend Influence and Money to Belleville Fair--Also Orators

The Wharf Street Debating Club opened their meeting at 7.30 sharp last night at the Lodge Rooms, Wharf Street with the officers and a large number of members present. The Secretary reported that the famous crossing opposite the Ferry House is being kept nice and clean by the city, that a light will be placed at the junction of Front and Pinnacle Streets as at the present time the members are liable to break an arm in going home from meeting, it is so dark at that spot and that great prospects of an extension of the water works from F. Duesberry's property down past the Ferry House is now quite certain.

It was also moved by Bro. Wm. Lindsay, seconded by Bro. W. J. Watkins, that this club bend every energy to assist in every possible way, with time, attendance, influence and money the Belleville Fair next week and by so doing make the Fair an undoubted success.

It was also decided to furnish one of our orators to the Association, each day to give a lecture to the farmers on the proper way to raise fish of the kind that according to the Globe some years ago, used to "sniff oats across a fence', and also how to plant and grow coal on their farms.

Capt. Dick Duesberry then arose and invited the members of the club to a sail and luncheon on his beautiful sloop, The Cabbage Queen, some day next week. The popular Capt. was thanked for his kindness, and his invitation accepted, by the President, after which the club was closed in peace and harmony at 9 10 p.m.

New Witness in Rosenthal Murder

NEW YORK, September 6.—District Attorney Whitman's case against the four alleged murderers of Herman Rosenthal, "Whitey Jack" Lewis, "Dago Frank" Cirofici, "Lefty Louie" Rosenzweig, and Harry Harrowitz, alias "Gyp the Blood," was strengthened greatly yesterday by the discovery of a new witness of the actual murder. This witness is a young woman attached to the Salvation Army. She was returning home after a night spent in collecting money in Tenderloin resorts. At two o'clock on the morning of July 16 she was directly in front of the Metropole Hotel when the shooting occurred and saw all the murderers.

She has identified all of them by their pictures, and is certain she can pick them out of any number of men.

Live Chickens Sent by Mail

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Urbaners of the parcels post system to be started Jan. 1 are likely to get noisy mail when the delivery begins of live chickens, rabbits and other country products by mail. Fresh eggs and country butter will also be handled through the parcel post.

This is no dream of cheaper cost of living, but will be a reality under the new law, which is designed to put the producer into direct communication with the consumer.

General farm and garden produce comes under the law, the Government will not only carry these things, but an indemnity will be provided for their loss or damage in transit. A C. O. D. system will be a novel feature of the parcels post, which will be a great convenience to farmers and merchants.

Poultry dealers are especially interested in the parcels post and have flooded the department with statistics showing how eggs and chickens may be handled and carried.

Rockefeller Employe Shoots Black Handler

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Joseph Drago, proprietor of a fruit store in Cortland street, and an employe of John D. Rockefeller's estate, was approached by a member of the Black Hand society and $500 was demanded of him. Drago refused to pay over the money and a pistol duel took place in Fountain square. Drago shot the Black Hand agent in the leg and then ran away. The agent held the crowd at bay at the point of a revolver and made his escape along the railroad tracks.

Drago's wife runs his fruit store while he works on the Rockefeller estate. Drago would not tell the police anything excepting that the Black Hand wanted $500.

It was said last night that the deputy sheriffs at Pocantico Hills expected some interesting developments, probably to-day, but they would not say of what nature.

If there is anything in the world more changeable than a woman it is some other woman.

Methodist Church Fails to Secure Pastors in Britain.

Crisis In the Affairs of the Ministry Is Precipitated by a Cablegram From Rev. Dr. Woodworth to the Effect That He Has Only Persuaded About Twenty to Come Across—Emergency Meeting.

Toronto, Sept. 7.—Rev. Dr. Carman and the other Methodist general conference officers have had a crisis precipitating upon them by a cablegram from England from Rev. Dr. Woodworth. The supply of preachers to fill up the shortage in Canada has vanished.

Two months ago Dr. Woodworth was sent to England to recruit from the theological colleges because the western provinces were in urgent need of a hundred preachers, in addition to the Canadian supply, which was completely exhausted. He sailed for the land of John Wesley with a full assurance of readily filling up his list, and, as a few years ago, he expected to use keen discrimination in making his selections. He found that a new situation had developed during the past half decade. Theological students were no longer to be had for the asking. After several weeks' hard hunting Dr. Woodworth has scarcely been able to secure a score. He is now on the ocean with his little band, the members of which will have "circuits" of vast circumference in consequence.

The critical condition of affairs in the west is similar with the Presbyterians. This is one of the most potent factors in causing the federation movement of the Methodist and Presbytery general committees, the Presbyterians having failed to vote unitedly enough to warrant immediate organic church union.

An emergency meeting of the Methodist Home Mission executive will be held as soon as possible after Dr. Woodworth's arrival to deal with the unexpected condition of affairs revealed by the failure of his mission.

BORDEN IS WELCOMED

Ancient Capital Receives Premier in Gala Attire.

City Fathers and Cheering Crowds Lay Aside Politics In Their Effort to Honor the Canadian Prime Minister—Messrs. Borden and Pelletier Reply to Address But Absolutely Refuse to Discuss Naval Question.

Quebec, Sept. 7.—Quebec gave a remarkable reception yesterday afternoon to Hon. R. L. Borden, Premier of Canada, on his arrival from the old country. Quebec was the first to greet him, and Quebec certainly did so in splendid style, the hospitality of the ancient capital being exhibited in its most brilliant manner. Last night Mr. Borden sped on his way to Three Rivers on the steamer Lady Grey, where another reception awaited him.

The demonstration on behalf of Mr. Borden was devoid of politics. It was purely a civic one, and many Liberals as well as Conservatives did honor to the man who is now at the helm of Canadian politics. Accompanying Mr. Borden was Hon. L. P. Pelletier, and most of the Cabinet Ministers were present here to receive the returning Ministers.

Disembarking from the steamer Victorian, the Premier was landed by the Government steamer Lady Grey on the King's Wharf, where he was met by the mayor and aldermen and many leading citizens and escorted to the city hall. The parade of carriages and automobiles was a most imposing one, and as the Premier passed through the gaily decorated streets he was repeatedly cheered by the crowds which had assembled.

The council chamber of the city hall had been transformed into a veritable fairy palace. The drapings and decorations, which had been used on the occasion of the visit of the present King when he came to Quebec for the tercentenary, were again brought into use, and amidst a myriad of electric lights, palms, ferns and flowers the Premier was acclaimed by a crowd which thronged the large chamber. It was a brillaint scene when the Premier, accompanied by Mrs. Borden and Mr. Pelletier and Mrs. Pelletier, entered. The Premier and party were received with a roar of cheers, and the band of the Royal Canadian Garrison Artillery rendered "O Canada." From the end of the hall flashed out the motto, in colored lights, "Hommage de Quebec au Hon. R. L. Borden."

Mayor Drouin read the address and Mr. Borden replied. When he started his remarks in French he was loudly cheered. In replying, Mr. Borden expressed the sincere appreciation of himself and his colleagues for the cordial and gracious reception which the City of Quebec was extending them. Mr. Borden referred to the great opportunity which Quebec offered for development.

Hon. Mr. Pelletier referred to the entente which now existed between England and France, and which had been brought about by Canada. Today England and France, formerly enemies, were walking together hand in hand, and his experience in France in connection with the settlement of the cable rates question had been greatly facilitated by the good feeling which now existed.

Mr. Borden and party embarked on the Lady Grey shortly before six o'clock and started on his trip up the river.

The Premier would not discuss public questions. He had, he said, a remarkably pleasant trip, but upon the German war scare or any other matters he had only his usual pleasant way of saying that he had nothing to say. Last night many buildings were illuminated in honor of the day's proceedings.

In regard to the naval policy, Premier Borden said the people must continue to speculate as to when it would be announced to the country. It would be decided when the full facts and details of the British situation could be laid before the Cabinet.

GIVE PROPER CARE TO THE HAIR AND YOU WILL NEVER NEED A WIG

The man who wears a toupee does not like it, but has the courage of his convictions.

Nature never intended that the top of the head should be entirely without protection. A bald head is very susceptible to contraction of colds and neuralgia. Wearing an artificial top piece counteracts this tendency, and, aside from the improvements in the personal appearance, is amply justified.

"How much better it would have been had the man, now chronically bald and wearing a toupee, but realized earlier in life the approaching danger and devoted a little regular attention to his hair, which would have saved it.

There is a remedy which will absolutely prevent baldness. Loss of hair in nine case out of ten is unnecessary, being due to dandruff and the germ that causes it. This germ must be destroyed and the accumulation of dandruff checked. Then the hair will not fall out, but instead will grow naturally and luxuriantly.

Newbro's Herpicide is the remedy, regular applications of which will do this. It has long been known as the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ and is absolutely dependable.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Herpicide applications may always be obtained at the better barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

Anyone desiring to try Newbro's Herpicide before purchasing a large bottle will receive a nice sample and booklet by sending 10c in postage or silver to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich. Doyle's Drug Store Special Agency.

The New York Stock Market

By HUGH M. CERIGHTON

(Mr. Creighton, whose address is No. 60 Broadway, N.Y. City will be pleased to answer readers' inquiries regarding any stock or bond.)

MONEY

Ruling Discount Rates:

	Open Market	Govt. Bank
London	3⅝	4
Paris..	2⅝	3
Berlin	4⅝	4½
Vienna	4⅝	5
Brussels..	3½	4
Amsterdam	4	4

New York Rates:
Call Money—3⅜
60 days—4¾—5
Six Months—5

Commercial Paper:
Prime 5¼ to 5⅜, Single names 5½—6.

The fact that the money market has been able during the past ten days to absorb the offerings of commercial paper without any advance in rates would seem to indicate that the high rates for call money will be temporary. The demand for money from the interior which has depleted the New York banks cash reserves may neccessitate gold imports. Capable judges of the financial situation estimate that the U. S. yet has a balance with Europe as a result of investment buying of our recent offerings of high income securities. In New York the outlook is for irregular rates until well into October.

THE STOCK MARKET

The trend of prices continues to depend upon financial conditions more than all other factors combined. This was exemplified by the equanimity with which the result of the Vermont election was accepted. In fact the Street has not as yet decided what is to be considered "good" or "bad" news politically. In the meantime the market is fairly steady with a tendency to seek a lower level, due in a great measure to lack of leadership, uncertainty and undecided opinion among the traders. However, the tendency of the market can be attributed to but one factor, viz.: the rates for money and because the demand for money bids fair to continue througout September it seems highly probable that prices will work lower. The market has already discounted the splendid agricultural prospects. There is no apparent source from which favorable stock marke news might emanate.

THE OUTLOOK FOR RAILROAD SHARES

A summary of the net earnings of the railroads of the United States for the fiscal year, ending June 30th, shows a material decrease in net earnings. Many causes throughout the past year contributed to this condition. The most important factor was the increase in employees' wages which expanded operating expenses. Other factors were the stagnation in commercial and industrial business, and strikes and floods in the middle west which seriously affected the roads operating in that territory. To arrive at a fair estimate of the outlook for the present year, the present outlook must be compared with the factors which caused last year's decrease. In making such a comparison it is plain that the railroads can expect a material increase in tonnage because of a general improvement in commercial business and a large agricultural yield. As against this, evidently there will be no reduction in wages this year, and there may be some advances. Taken as a whole it would seem fair to estimate that railroad net earnings this year will be larger than the year just past. Seasoned dividend paying stocks like Pennsylvania—C. & N. W.—Northern Pacific—Great Northern Pfd.—Baltimore & Ohio—Atchison—Southern Pacific and Southern Ry. Pfd. are all worthy of the investor's consideration on any material decline in price between now and the middle of October.

SWEARING ILLEGAL

Swearing is still a penal offence in certain English towns. Windsor, for instance, inflicts a fine "not exceeding half a crown" on every person convicted of using unorthodox adjectives in the street, and even a harmless fortuitous expletive uttered in the hearing of a policeman may result in a visit to a magistrate. Tiverton goes one better by making it a punishable offence to talk too loudly, even in one's own house. To go farther and fare worse, is there not a German town, with an unprounceable name, where it is a crime to sneeze on the street,

With these completed the addition of new stained glass windows and newly furnished throughout, will make this one of the most up to date churches in this district, a credit to the city and to the Methodists of West Belleville.

MEYERS' ORCHARD.

The few remaining apple trees of the large orchard which was planted by John W. Meyers one of Belleville's pioneer settlers, about 1804, have done well this year better than for many years past. Those of them which have been cared for are bearing abundantly, and even those which have received no attention have a considerable quantity of fruit on them. These are amongst the oldest apple trees in Ontario.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

THE BACHELOR'S BABY.

Unselfish love, ever the theme of the playwright is to have new exemplification upon the Opera House's ample stage, Wednesday night, Sept. 11, when Francis Wilson's famous New York comedy success "The Bachelor's Baby" is being presented here. The story in short, retails the doings of a child-hating bachelor, who, through this hatred has lost the love of an estimable young woman. Being made the guardian of a five-year-old orphan niece, he first abhors the little one, but is finally won by her childish artlessness, and becomes her abject slave, and through her succeeds in becoming reconciled with the girl of his choice, who would not entrust herself to him because of his antipathy towards the little one. This in brief, is the theme, but the developement of the same is ludicrous, laughable, and rib-tickling in the extreme. The bachelor, who first hates and later on loves the little one is being played by Etienne Girardot and he will have the support of a number of players, well known among the best, now behind the footlights. The company that is to offer "The Bachelor's Baby," will bring the entire scenic equipment requisite for the proper portrayal of the charm and beauty of Francis Wilson's famed diction. Prices 25, 35, 50, 75, $1.00. Plan at Doyle's, Monday Sept. 9.

WILL STAMP OUT EVIL

Moral Reformers Create Body to Fight White Slavery.

National Committee Will Begin a Vigorous Campaign Against Traffic In Young Women and Will Cooperate With Organizations Abroad —Council Laments Failure of Miller Bill to Stop Gambling.

Toronto, Sept. 7.—At the annual meeting of the Moral and Social Reform Council of Canada yesterday members were present from all parts of Canada, the organizations represented including the Church of England, the Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist and Congregational Churches, the Trade and Labor Congress of Canada, the Dominion Grange and Farmers' Association, the Salvation Army, the Canadian Purity-education Association and the Evangelical Association of North America. Dr. Carman, general superintendent of the Methodist Church, occupied the chair, and Dr. J. G. Shearer and Dr. T. Albert Moore acted as associate secretaries.

A committee to be known as the National Committee for the suppression of the white slave traffic was appointed to carry on a vigorous campaign against the traffic in Canada and to co-operate with similar committees in other countries.

Gratification was also expressed at the action of the mayor and police commissioners of Vancouver in issuing instructions to enforce the law against the system of recognizing segregated vice districts.

A resolution was adopted lamenting that, notwithstanding the great labor and expense in providing recent amendments to the statutes to prevent face-track gambling, the ingenuity of those engaged in this demoralizing practice has more than nullified the instituted reforms, and by new devices they practice more than ever the evils sought to be remedied. The council, however, added a rider expressive of their finding a ray of hope in the course pursued by the Minister of Justice in his amendment at the last session of Parliament calculated to prohibit the ganting of licenses for race-track gambling without the sanction of the local representative in Parliament.

Other resolutions adopted expressed regret at the death of General Booth and appreciation of his services to mankind and the Kingdom of God; instructed the executive to seek legislation prohibiting the practice of polygamy in Canada, and set forth the need of requiring registration of contagious diseases and of a certificate of physical fitness to all candidates for marriage licenses.

Coincident with next year's annual meeting a moral and social reform congress will be held in Toronto.

Local Probibitionists on the War Path

There is to be a general attack next January upon the liquor traffic. The Executive Committee of the Dominion Alliance held a meeting last week at the Toronto Exhibition Grounds and determined, it is said, to contest no less than 75 Ontario municipalities in favor of local option. The report presented showed that there were 260 places in the province in which voting on the question of local option might take place, but in many of them it was impossible to organize campaigns. There will be contests for the repeal of local option in over 200 places this year, according to the report, but the officials anticipate that in fully 90 per cent. of these no effort will be made to have the law repealed.

The places where contests are likely to take place are Toronto and Hamilton, and 19 counties, as follows:—New Ontario, Peel, Kent and Dundas, Essex, Prince Edward, Perth, Welland, Simcoe, Lambton, Huron, Stormont, Glengarry, Prescott and Russell, Victoria and Haliburton, Haldimand, Bruce, Toronto, Middlesex and London.

The Alliance has not yet decided to attack Belleville.

Storage for Western Crops

However numerous and capacious the elevators erected in the West, however enlarged the transportation service may become, the farmers in that part of Canada will have to provide, as from the outset the farmers of Eastern Canada provided, for the shelter of their grain after threshing. They must have granaries of their own. They may desire to hold their wheat for higher prices, or they may be forced to hold it, and there ougt to be no risk of its being damaged by exposure.—Mail and Empire.

The foregoing is precisely in accord with what The Intelligencer urged several weeks ago, in commenting on the alleged grievances of the western wheat growers, as voiced by the Grain Grawers' Association and the Grit press of Manitoba and Ontario.

Were the farmers in the Western Provinces to provide storage for their grain instead of depending upon its sale immediately after threshing, the lack of transportation, which is the chief cause of complaint, would be largely, if not wholly, obviated. This must of necessity be done, because, owing to the tremendous immigration into that territory and the consequent enormous annual increase in the production of wheat and other products, it is not at present possible for the railways to handle all the traffic which offers within the time to which they are limited. The sooner that our fellow-citizens realize this fact and act upon it, the better it will be for all concerned.

M. Buchanan, of Brasstown, N.C. It cost Buchanan $400 to have the tree cut, divided into sections and hauled to the railroad, but 16,000 feet of lumber was scaled from it. A concrete roadway seventeen feet wide and a quarter of a mile long has been built in St. Paul, Minn., at a cost of $1,365; and the work was done by day labor, too, and under the direction of the commissioner of public works. The estimate prepared by the city engineer, which included an allowance of about ten per cent. for contractors' profit, was $1,907.50. The work, therefore, when done by day labor, saved the city $542.50. But, more than that, the first load of gravel and sand was laid as foundation on June 22nd and the street was open for traffic on July 3rd. Will Messrs. Lindsay and the Public Works Department please make note of this.

Newport, Eng., Sept. 5.—Compulsory arbitration of trade disputes is strongly opposed by British trade unionists, who today at the Trades Union Congress cast an overwhelming vote against the adoption of the principle. Nearly 2,000,000 of trade unionists are represented by the 500 delegates attending the Congress which began its sessions Sept. 2.

This action of the trade unionists is nothing new. They submit to no law except their own dictum, and this state of things will continue just so long as politicians count their votes. Our boasted liberty is fast passing away.

TAX REFORM BIGGEST QUESTION OF THE DAY

Member of British House Addressed Convention at Toronto—Progress in Great Britain—Great Victory for Single-taxers in Recent Election

(Toronto Globe)

"It is not through Marconi and the cable that we are getting into touch with one another and making friends all over the world, but we are getting into touch with our brothers everywhere because we have got a principle that is a great world movement."

Addressing a largely attended meeting of the Tax Reform League of Eastern Canada held in St. James Parish House, Toronto, Mr. Francis Neilson, M.P., of London, Eng., thus explained his presence in Canada. In an eloquent address on the subject of taxation of land values he referred to the bitter fight that is being waged against the vested interests on the land question, which he characterized as the greatest problem of the day. Addresses on the principles of advanced taxation were also delivered by Mr. James R. Brown of New York, and Mr. W. W. Buchanan of Winnipeg.

Great Britain Alive to Issue

Mr. Neilson, who was enthusiastically received, said that the people in England were eager to hear what had been done in the United States and Canada with reference to the adoption of the single tax, and they had sent him to this country because they wanted to learn of the progress here from one of their own men. As an indication of the trend of public opinion in Great Britain he cited the recent contest in Northwest Norfolk, stating that it was significant that Mr. Memmerde, K. C., who had fought on the question of the taxation of and values in a constituency composed almost entirely of farm laborers was elected by a majority of over six hundred, and had polled a larger vote than the preceding member at the two previous elections. The victory was so compete that the people began to think there really was something in the single tax, while Whigs and Cabinet Ministers were so surprised that they commenced writing for pamphlets concerning the single tax and some of them even joined the League.

Leonard Outhwaite's Victory

The speaker also referred to the comfortable majority that had been given to Leonard Outhwaite, who favored the taxation of land values, and added that if ever there was a man qualified to represent the workingmen of England it was Outhwaite.

Speaking of the fight that has been waged against the vested interests and monopolies of England he said that the trusts of the United States were as nothing compared with them, yet they were encouraged because the young men of England were taking an interest in living issues. Their hope lay in Brotherhood movement, with all the best types of producers wanting to know what their position in the universe is and what are their natural rights. Once having it established in their own minds that they had natural rights they asserted themselves. At night schools every winter thousands of them were studying economics. When they got these young men, with their knowledge of conditions and their determination to make things as they should be, they cared not for vested interests. They would shift them.

Discussed Plans For Reform

The third annual meeting of the League was attended by delegates from all parts of the Province. Mr. Stewart Lyon, the President, presided. After the meeting had elected officers for next year and received the annual reports, plans were discussed for the advancing of tax reform, those taking part in the discussion including Messrs. Francis Neilson, M.P., London, England; R. J. McCormick, M.P.P. for East Lambton; W. A. Douglass; J. J. Hurley of Brantford; Ald. Johnson, London; Stewart Muir; John L. Wideman, St. Jacobs; J. J. Morrison The Grange; Thos. Sinclair, Hamilton, and J. M. Walton, Aurora. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association was unofficially represented.

Progress Made in Ontario.

In his Presidential address Mr. Lyon spoke of the progress which had been made in the Province of Ontario during the past year, and urged the need for men who believed that the community creates the value of land, and that the taxes should go to the municipality to be used in defraying the cost of public improvements and utilities. They had a good deal of support, he said in the Liberal party, and more in the Conservative party than some people imagined.

Encouraging Words From Delegates

The reports of delegates from outside points were most encouraging. Ald. Johnson of London said they hoped soon to form an association in that city, while Mr. J. J. Hurley of Brantford declared that the people were beginning to grasp the principles of taxation and were studying the question as never before. Mr. J. J. Morrison of The Grange was convinced that over ninety per cent. of the farmers were thoroughly in favor of abolishing the present system of assessing farm buildings, and the majority of the Granges, if not all were in favor of tax reform. According to Mr. Stewart Muir, there could not be any doubt in an honest, investigating mind that the problem of taxation had become so acute in Ontario that it had to be faced by one party or the other. He knew of no social question which was attracting more attention than that of tax reform.

Officers Elected

Officers were elected as follows Hon. President, Joseph Fels; President, Julian Sale; Vive President for Quebec, Romeo Langlais; for New Brunswick, Ald. H. H. Stuart, Newcastle, N.B.; for Nova Scotia, Hon. K. Macgregor of New Glasgow; for Ontario, W. M. Southam, Ottawa; Treasurer, D. B. Jacques; Secretary A. B. Farmer; Assistant Secretary, Sydenham Thompson; Executive Committee, W. A. Douglass, J. J. Carroll, P. P. Farmer and Milton Kerr, with a strong recommendation from the Nominating Committee that A. C. Thompson of Toronto be added.

QUEER AFRICAN RACE

Where Princesses Are Not Allowed to Marry And the Kings Are Killed

An African tribe with some most extraordinary customs has been discovered by Dr. C. G. Seligmann, of the Wellcome Tropical Research Laboratories, one of the branches of the Gordon Memorial College at Khartoum. This tribe is the Shilluk, which lives in a narrow strip of land along the banks of the Nile on the northern edge of the Bahr-El-Ghazel province. There are about 40,000 of them. They live in small villages of huts surrounded by fences of dura stalks.

The most striking feature is the veneration paid to the king, and the marked line of demarcation between the aristocracy and the commoners. The former is constituted entirely of the Royal family—children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren of the King. Royal descent, however, is not recognised beyond the fourth generation. Polygamy is practised, and the King has a large number of wives. In fact, the greater number of the houses in Fashoda are the residences of the King's Consorts. The sons likewise take many wives, but the daughters must remain unmarried, for the reason that it is unfitting for a King's daughter to marry a commoner, while at the same time she cannot marry a son.

The difference between the aristocracy and the commoners is exemplified in a still more striking manner. All the commoners of both sexes have their lower central teeth knocked out, and even the grandchildren may conform to this practice if they please.

Though the people honor the King in his prime, when he gets old and feeble they promptly prepare for his successor. The Sovereign is killed with due ceremony at the first signs of ill-health or old age. Any son has the right to attempt to despatch his father, and if successful to reign in his stead. The deed is carried out at night, because the King is alone in his enclosure with his wives, and without the bodyguard which attend his movements during the day.

When the man was killed at Gilbert's Lane crossing last Saturday, from articles found in the pockets and a description, it was thought that the body was that of Pond. John Ferguson, of Sackville, a friend of Pond's came to the city and identified the body as his. Yesterday, however, the error was discovered and the man was recognized as Eloi Lorette, of Sackville. An inquest into his death was commenced this evening.

JIMMY LAVENDER—CHICAGO'S FAVORITE COLOR

Who was it said "Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them"—like the Cubs?

They had greatness thrust upon them in the manly shape of James Sanford Lavender—great pitcher of the baseball.

It's a queer game, isn't it? Imagine such a pitcher as young Lavender being thrust on any club. But that's what happened. Jimmy was passed up by Connie Mack, the Boston Nationals, Detroit, and even Chicago had no intention of keeping him——and would not have, except a bit of baseball politics worked out wrong.

They were all color blind. Lavender appeared of a lemon hue to them, with a faint tinge of yellow streaking through it—a very poor color scheme for any pitcher (wup! almost a pun here!).

They have more sense now—that is, more sense of color—and more feeling for color too, you might say, when you observe them looking blue, and waxing green with envy. But that does not worry the young phenom; he is Chicago's favorite color, and his game is showing no signs of fading. To him more than any one else is due the excellent standing the Cubs hold in the pennant race.

Jimmy smiles one of those deep smiles, sort o' grim-like, yet overflowing with satisfaction. It makes him fell mighty good on the inside to know that he has proven to be a real Georgia peach instead of a lemon.

I was listening to Lavender talk. It's worth your while—honest; go up and talk to him whenever you get the chance. He is from the South, ma friend—yes, suh!—from Montezuma Georgia—about 26 years old, suh! And he possesses some of those real Georgian vocal chords that vibrate language in that smooth, soft, Southern way, so delightful of accent and alluring of sound.

So I just sat tight and listened.

"I hardly know how I got started playing ball," he said. "It just grew on me so gradual that I hardly noticed it. Of course every kid plays ball more or less, only some play more and better than others, and I guess it was just natural for me to play a little better than any of my little chums around Montezuma's back lots.

"Although I played early and often, I did not devote all my young, melon-cholic days to the game—I took t'me out for work. I worked, I had to—my dad made me—yes, suh!—or I probably would not have stopped my ball game to work any more than I would have stopped to eat or sleep—you know how that is. My folks are in the lumber business, and when I finished school I attended the Georgia Military Academy—but not to be a soldier. Why, I was forced into the business, too—every morning at 8 o'clock until 6 at night.

"I used to get away about twice a week though—to play ball, of course. I played with everybody and everywhere, and got to be very well known throughout the state, so whenever I was wanted to pitch a game they would telephone and I would tell a foreman and then off for the day.

"Oh! by the way," he ejaculated softly, "I used to hook up with Nap Rucker of the Brooklyn club quite often on my trips about the state, and we grew to be great friends as well as great rivals. He could pitch then, too!" mused Jimmy.

"Wel in 1906 I received my first regular offer to play ball. It was from Agusta, Ga., and as the baseball fever had been growing on me, my weak constitution couldn't stand it, and I succumbed and was put to bed in an Agusta berth. The favorable conditions here caused me to grow even worse, until I was soon in the incurable ward. So I raised no objections to being signed up by the Atlanta club the following year at an increased salary.

"My stay with Atlanta was short, as I went to the Danville club in the Virginia League before the end of that season. I finished the season of 1907 with the Danville club, and it was from this club"—Jimmy's face lighted up—"that I was first drafted to the big ring. Connie Mack of the world's champions was the first man to sign me up, and the first one to let me go. I went to Holyoke, Conn., without even being given a trial by Careful Connie. I wasn't discouraged, because I had not failed yet. I wasn't given the chance to fail, but I did feel a bit downhearted.

"Two seasons sneaked by—1909 and 1910—before Detroit drafted me and watered my ambitions with a little hope.

"But once again I was turned back without a trial. I was getting used to this by now and didn't take—yes, suh! I never even expected to be given my lawful rights—a fair trial—again.

"Back, back to Providence I was sent without a trial. Providence, eh? Providence again?—the name seemed to mean nothing to me—all I ever got was a freeze-out by getting in a draft" he laughed. "Well, as usual, at the end of this 1911 season I was again drafted! It was the fourth time and it proved to be the last. It was the Cubs this time."

"Well, they must have given you the long delayed chance," I ventured.

"No! wait a minute. The Cubs had absolutely no intention of keeping me. I was obtained merely to serve in a trade for a player nanmed Miller of Montreal, whm the Cubs were after. But the deal fell through and so did all the bad luck which seemed to be trying to knock me for a ghoul, and, and—well, here I am, that's all."

"Ooh!" we gasped, and allow us to gasp again, and repeat. "Verily do some have greatness thrust upon them."

We feel sorry for the man who is unable to distinguish between a friend and an acquaintance.

Occasionally a man's excuse for spending the evenings downtown is that he is married to the wrong woman.

ROWING

WILL ROW NEXT MONTH.

TORONTO, September 6.—Next Saturday will be the seventeenth anniversary of the day when Jacob Gill Gaudaur, of Atherley, Ont., won the sculling championship of the world from James Stanbury of Australia, in a race over the Thames course, from Putney to Mortlake. Gaudaur lost the title exacly five years later, when, on September 7, 1901, on the Lake of the Woods, at Rat Portage, now Kenora, he was defeated by another Australian, George Towns.

Now, after all these years, another Canadian is about to set out in quest of the golden fleece that his uncle, Edward Hanlan, first brought to his native Toronto as long aga as 1879, that race being rowed on the coaly Tyne of Newcastle. The main conditions of the match have been agreed on by cable, and Edward Durnan, champion of America, proceeds to England next week to meet the titleholder, Ernest Barry, in a race next month, probably Monday.

Durnan will sail by the Laurentic from Montreal Saturday, September 14, and, as he is always in good condition, he will need little time to be ready for the battle. Yesterday he ordered by cable a new boat from Phelps, the builder who turned out the shell in which he defeated Haines on Toronto Bay last month, and this will be at his disposal shortly after his arrival in London.

SCHOLES AS TRAINER

TORONTO, September 6.—Lou Scholes will accompany Eddie Durnan to England to manage and train the American champion for his race with Barry for the world's championship.

WOLF BROKE LOOSE

Caused Wild Excitement But finally Knocked Over by Elephant.

With a snap at the hand of a trainer, a wolf broke loose while being exercised at the White City, Manchester, and created wild excitement not only among the people but also among the animals of the Menagerie, where normally it lived behind iron bars.

While the public ordinarily knows nothing of these diversions, certain animals are from time to time taken out of their cages for exercise.

Two wolves were being taken out on leash for a stroll round the ground, when one of them, a Damascus wolf, suddenly became vicious, and turning on the trainer, snapped at him.

The trainer was taken by surprise. The attack was so fierce and unexpected that the man dropped the leash. It was as though this was what the animal had aimed at, and he was gone on the instant. A little genuine freedom was what his heart craved, and he bounded across the ground. The doors of the jungle were at once closed to prevent escape into the rest of the grounds, and there followed an exciting chase within the big building. The wolf sprang over the counter at the refreshment bar, and sought cover by crouching beneath.

But he was to be given no quarter. Ropes were procured, and the attendants made efforts to lassoo the animal, but they only succeeded in driving the snarling creature from its shelter. It dashed round the jungle, and sprang at the cage of one of the performing lions. The lion resented the intrusion, and, with a thrust of its paw, knocked the wolf on to the jungle floor over the railing which runs round the cages.

The wolf then made for the table where "Mary Ellen," the Indian elephant, was housed. It flew at the throat of one of the fox terriers which attend the elephant, and that the elephant was not pleased with. Their big patron came to the rescue, and, with an angry bellow, aimed a terrific blow at the wolf with its trunk, rending it crashing against the partition dividing the stall.

A net was at once thrown over it, and it was easily secured. An examination showed that it had been badly injured.

BANISHED AVIATOR

Arrived in England From France on Novel Machine

Jules Nardini, the Italian aviator who was banished from France and who for two days was delayed at Calais by fog and wind, finally made a successful flight across the Channel.

His objective was Dover, but his compass failed, and he landed at Deal. Had he missed the land at Deal, Nardini must have shared the fate of Cecil Grace, and been carried into the North Sea.

He flies a novel machine, which, instead of propellers, has a rotating wing that draws the machine by air suction. It is a monoplane with a 50 h. p. engine.

Nardini breakfasted at Deal, and then flew to Dover, following the coast, and descending at the aerodrome at Whitefield, where the hangars proved his guide.

NEW LIGHTS IN HOUSE

Electricity to Replace Gas in the British House of Commons

It is proposed to substitute electric lighting for gas illumination in the British House of Commons. The new form of lighting, according to a report made on the subject is to be effected by groups of three metal filament incandescent lamps enclosed in a holophane globe placed over the glass roof.

With a view to deciding whether electric lighting would affect the eyesight of members, Dr. Treacher Collins paid a visit to the House of Commons. He pointed out in his report that "the rays will be filtered by passage through three layers of glass—(1) that covering the lamp itself, (2) the holophane globe, and (3) the ornamental pane of glass. The ultra violet rays will be cut off by the amber color of the latter. There is therefore, no fear that the eyesight of members of Parliament will be affected by ultra violet rays."

It has for long been a complaint among members that the present method of lighting has rendered it difficult for them to read in the Chamber; but the lights are intended for another purpose. Dr. Collins says:—

"The illumination from the roof is supplemented on the back benches by lamps fixed to the pillars in front of them. These do what I was told was required of them— that is, light up the faces of members so that they can be seen by the Speaker."

The Site of Etocetum

A fund is being raised by the North Staffordshire Field Club for the excavation of the Roman settlement of Etocetum, which occupied the site of the present village of Wall, near Lichfield. Recent diggings have revealed evidence of an extensive range of buildings.

Collecting Spent Bullets

Willim Lawrence, aged fifty-two and Arthur Yates, aged forty-three, were sentenced to one month's hard labor at Kingston-on-Thames, on the charge of stealing seven pounds of lead bullets, the property of the Secretary for War. The evidence showed they had collected from the rifle ranges at Pirbright spent bullets.

Mussels in Water Main

Recently it was found that a 36 inch water main at Hampton-on-Thames was showing signs of becoming choked. It was opened, and ninety tons of fresh water mussels were taken out of a quarter of a mile of the main. The mussels were so tightly massed that the bore was reduced from 36 inches to 9 inches.

A dessert spoon full in a glass of water is the popular dose of Abbey's Effervescent Salt. It improves the appetite, steadies the nerves and brings about a good healthy condition. TWO SIZES 25c & 60c ALL DRUGGISTS

The latest development of the merger movement in the United States is the plan in Baltimore to buy up the religious press. Various denominational organs are to be bought up, merged or discarded, and the whole field generally systematized in the interests of economy and profit. The threat is freely made that those not coming in out of the rain will be speedily submerged in the usual way of business.—Ottawa Citizen.

That was an interesting and amusing story we told of the St. Louis couple—artist and model—who, when married, several years ago, declared that they had been wedded in a pre-existence in Egypt thousands of years ago, and that they were "absolutely mated." Now they are suing for divorce! Evidently the modern spirit has been too strong for the resurrected Egyptians. What is a little marriage of 1,500 years ago when the divorce habit is so easily contracted?—Kingston Standard.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

MORE SUNSHINE.

Old Sol's Appearance Brings Joy to the West.

Winnipeg, Sept. 7.—An optimistic note was sounded all over the west to-day as the result of bright sunshine and high winds. So favorable are the conditions to-day, in spite of Thursday night's general storm, that "longs" on the local grain exchange were anxious to sell yesterday. Obviously there was a fear that prices would drop and prices of grain cannot drop unless conditions for a big crop continue favorable.

On the Brandon and Portage Plains the high wind and warm sunshine placed the fields in condition for the binders before noon and harvesting operations were general throughout the province. At points in Saskatchewan, especially the Saskatoon district, the situation has much improved and harvesting conditions are far in advance of other years.

Brandon reports 85 per cent. of the grain in that district harvested with threshing to commence on Monday. At many points through the prairie provinces there was no rain Thursday night, but the wind yesterday was general and that is what is required. The temperature, too, is quite satisfactory for farming operations, as it is necessary to dry out the land. From every direction comes a cheery note as a result of these conditions following the storm.

Fear Wheat May Sprout.

Saskatoon, Sept. 7.—Farmers are rejoicing at the much brighter outlook and wonderful improvement in the weather. Old-timers Thursday night were predicting that the high southwest wind, if it continued, would soon blow off the rain, and their prophecy proved true for after a stormy night the weather yesterday was bright and cool with good drying wind.

If it does not get too warm little damage is expected from the rains of the past few days, but should the sun gain power there is grave danger that much of the wheat in stock will sprout —a few cases of which are already reported. Oats in this district will be a heavy crop.

DENOUNCE SYNDICALISM.

British Laborites Overwhelmingly Defeat New Scheme.

Newport, Eng., Sept. 7.—Syndicalism was crushingly defeated at the Trades Union Congress here yesterday by the adoption by an overwhelming majority of a resolution which the syndicalists strenuously opposed, pledging the support of the independent working classes of Great Britain to political action in the industrial fight for a more equitable share of the wealth of the country.

Syndicalism is the most discussed feature of present day socialism. It is a movement for the placing of means of production, such as factories, mines and railways, under the control of the workmen themselves.

Delegates, representing 1,967,109 workers, are in attendance upon the congress. In spite of the stormy year which labor has experienced in England, the number of members of the affiliated unions represented in the present congress is 304,976 more than the total of last year. Although it is said that the treasuries of the unions are almost empty by reason of the strikes during the past year, the figures given above are considered to indicate that the vitality of English trades unionism is unimpaired.

Sought To Lock Her Up.

Oshawa, Sept. 7.—It was disclosed yesterday that John Bateman, whose wife was found dead in her bedroom Thursday, had made several attempts to have her committed to an insane asylum.

About a year ago he obtained separation papers, and made another attempt to have her sent to an asylum, but without success.

Popular opinion has it that Mrs. Bateman was perfectly sane, but that Bateman has an uncontrollable temper and is subject to fits of fury.

Pending action by the crown, the accused is being held on a charge of assault, occasioning bodily harm.

The marriage of the Batemans was the result of an advertisement for a wife, inserted in the Toronto papers about ten years ago.

The doctors think Mrs. Bateman was killed by a blow from a hatchet which cut through the skull.

Two British Officers Killed.

Stevenage, Eng., Sept. 7.—Two more British army officers lost their lives while flying yesterday.

Capt. Patrick Hamilton had taken Lieut. Stewart with him as a passenger in his biplane. The two officers had flown for a considerable time when a strong wind suddenly sprang up and in endeavoring to make headway against it one of the wings of the aeroplane collapsed.

The machine fell to the ground from an altitude of 250 feet.

Hagersville Takes Hydro.

Hagersville, Sept. 7.—The village of Hagersville carried the bylaw for the Hydro-Electric yesterday by a majority of 132. Only four votes were cast against, as only freeholders could vote on this bylaw. The votes polled was not large.

Natural gas has been cheap and plentiful in this locality, and now both natural gas and electricity are expected at a low price.

Suicide Was Montreal Man.

Brampton, Sept. 7.—The identity of the man who committed suicide on the G.T.R. train near Brampton last Thursday has been established. A photograph of the dead man was sent to Montreal, and the superintendent of police in that city sent word to the Brampton authorities that he was Paul Cluzel, who disappeared from that city on August 26.

Another Barn Destroyed.

Kingston, Sept. 7.—Lightning was severe in the vicinity of Fredericksburg station, a barn belonging to Mr. Grimshaw being struck. The barn was filled with hay and the contents were totally destroyed. Buildings nearby were saved.

Concrete Pipe Faulty.

Ottawa, Sept. 7.—At the judicial enquiry yesterday into the break in the waterworks pipe, Cavehon & Haycock, consulting engineers, who examnied the intake pipe and aqueduct, gave evidence touching the cause of the typhoid epidemic.

Summarized, they alleged faulty construction in the concrete section of the pipe, say there are many leaks, condemn that in some joints recaulking or strand were used on it, assert there were no specifications prepared for the work, and say that pipe for conveying water for a city supply should be one of steel, and not of concrete.

Relative to bacteriological tests, Drs. Drunm and Higgins, Government officials, and C. Laidlaw, a prominent physician here, say they have made many tests of Ottawa water during the past month or more and find it in great many places to be polluted.

Bryce In Washington.

Honolulu, Sept. 7.—James Bryce, British ambassador to the United States, arrived here yesterday on his return to Washington from Australia, where he spent the summer. He was officially welcomed to the islands outside the harbor by a launch loaded with dignitaries.

Secretary Walter Fisher of the Department of the Interior, also arrived yesterday by the steamer Chiyo and was met by Governor Frear, charges against whom the secretary will investigate. The charges, made by Delegate Kalanianaole are in connection with Governor Frear's administration of the homestead laws.

Girl Walked 15,000 Miles.

Philadelphia, Sept. 7.—Miss Dora Rodriques, a 19-year-old girl from Amsterdam, is here to-day after completing a walk of 15,000 miles. She has tramped through every country in North America and Europe.

She is the daughter of a diamond dealer in Amsterdam and lived with an aunt in Scotland until three and a half years ago, when she decided to see the world afoot.

"Britannic" a Total Loss.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Sept. 7.—The steamer Britannic, which went ashore in the St. Lawrence at Weaver's Point, below Morrisburg, was abandoned by wreckers yesterday after two weeks unsuccessful effort to release her. The vessel, which was owned by M. McMoran of Port Colborne, Ont., was returning light from Montreal, where she became disabled in swift water.

Bright Lights Caused Wreck.

Montreal, Sept. 7.—Word has been received here from the Minister of Marine and Fisheries at Ottawa, ordering an investigation into the action of the pilot, Louis C. Bouille, in command of the Lake Champlain, when it ran aground. The commissioners appointed Commander H. St. George Lindsay, Capt. Nash and Pilot Perron.

At the enquiry, which commenced yesterday, Capt. Kendall, master of the Lake Champlain, testified that for half an hour before the boat ran aground, the guiding lights were obscured because of the dense smoke from the dredges and a passing coal barge with its tug. Also, he claimed, that the light at Dominion Park was so dazzling that it was impossible to see the buoy lights. "These are a real menace to navigation and were the cause of the accident," said Captain Kendall.

It is thought that the proprietors of the grounds will be forced to place a wall between the lights and the river.

Panama Tolls To Be Low.

Washington, Sept. 7.—Prof. Emery R. Johnson, special commissioner on Panama traffic and tolls, discloses in a report a factor that doubtless will be urged by the American negotiators.

After pointing out the many advantages of the Suez in the way of coaling facilities, low insurance rates for the superior opportunities for picking up cargoes between terminals, and the like, Prof. Johnson declares that the only possibility of the Panama Canal getting a fair share of the world's business is to place the tolls at a figure actually lower than by the Suez route.

These are now $1.25 per ton, so that the rate on the American canal must be sensibly lower than this, and the professor has even mentioned a flat dollar rate for the first few years of the canal's operation at least.

Scientists Honor Sir Wm. White.

Dundee, Scotland, Sept. 7.—Sir William Henry White, the well-known naval expert, yesterday was elected president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, which has been in session here for several days' past. The next meeting of the association will be held in Birmingham.

Drowned In Five Foot Tank.

Alvinston, Ont., Sept. .—Hugh R. Carruthers, aged 40, manager of the Brook municipal telephone system, was drowned in a five foot tank of water yesterday afternoon when fixing a valve in the power house. He was knocked backwards into a tank and held there by the overhead pipes.

To Expand Present Policy?

London, Sept. 7.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—It is definitely stated in naval service quarters, says The Manchester Guardian, that the permanent naval policy, as decided upon by Mr. Borden and his colleagues, while in London, will consist in the main of the Laurier policy, with a representation for Canada in the Imperial Parliament. The Niobe and Rainbow will be better manned.

The naval college at Halifax is to continue, while better provision will be made for training men.

The Niobe and Rainbow are shortly due in England, when the engagement of the original crews will expire. The new crews will be specially adapted to the naval developments which are about to take place.

Cabinet Ministers Enjoyed Trip.

Father Point, Que., Sept. 7.—The Canadian Ministers and their fellow passengers enjoyed a pleasant trip on the Victorian. The last day aboard was spent in games and a concert in the second cabin and a dance on the promenade deck, which was closed in as a spacious ballroom filled in the evening. Mrs. Borden presented the prizes won at the games.

Sir Charles Healy, K.C.B., Coming.

Quebec, Sept. 7.—Sir Charles Chadwick Healy, K.C.B., the leading spirit in the naval reserve organization of England, was a passenger on the Victorian, and is on his way to visit his son in Toronto. There was a full complement of Ontario passengers aboard.

Diphtheria Victim Buried.

Kingston, Sept. 7.—The remains of the late Patrick D. Fowler, who died from diphtheria in St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, Feb. 21, were brought to Kingston under special Government supervision and placed in St. Mary's vault.

Too Inexperienced, That's All.

St. Catharines, Sept. 7.—In the police court yesterday morning Chief Thunderwater, an Indian from the Tuscarora Reserve, near Buffalo, explained to Magistrate Campbell the reason the Indian cannot control his senses on taking intoxicating drink. He argued that the white man has been drinking firewater for several thousand years and has become seasoned, whereas the poor Indian has been drinking but 400 years, and his system is not yet able to stand the effects. He asked the magistrate to punish all white people who supply liquor to Indians, and stated the redskins have formed a society, the aim of which is to prosecute bootleggers supplying Indians with drink. He asked that a fine be not imposed on these men, but a term in jail be given, as the white bosses will pay the fines.

Navy Program In Fortnight.

Quebec, Sept. 7.—How soon the Canadian Government's naval policy will be announced depends on the receipt of the final budget of information promised by Winston Churchill but it will in all likelihood be within a fortnight.

Can't Keep Progressive Off Ticket.

Topeka, Kas., Sept. 7.—Federal Judge Sanborn of Denver has denied the application for an injunction to keep the Kansas Roosevelt electors off the Republican ticket. The decision reached here yesterday afternoon.

Won, but Not Held.

A learned English judge asked a woman to marry him because she, knowing his weakness, had mixed a salad so artistically that he declared he could not live without eating another. The judge soon repented of his folly. The lady had a foolish nature and a temper which so tormented her husband that he would prolong the sessions of his court far into the night. "Gentlemen," he was accustomed to say when counsel or jury murmured at the lateness of the hour, "as we must be somewhere, we cannot be better anywhere than we are here."

Praise For the Growlers.

"The growlers," says a Georgia philosopher, "are the boys that keep the world moving, for when folks are growling all the time the world stops to ask the reason and straightway finds a remedy for the trouble. If the world paid any attention to the optimists things would be at a standstill. Taking it for granted that everything's O. K. is the end of progress."—Atlanta Constitution.

Road Markers.

On some of the Yorkshire moors white posts are to be seen along the narrow tracks which serve as roads. They are called "stoops" and are something like boundary posts in appearance. A casual observer might imagine that they really did denote a county or parish boundary, but such is not the case. When snow covers the ground and the paths are invisible these posts point out where they lie and so save the wayfarer from being lost.—London Mail

GOT OUT OF HIS CAGE.

Gorilla Caused Excitement Before He Was Caught.

Toronto, Sept. 7.—The escape of a gorilla from a sideshow and its flight caused a panic in the women's building at the Exhibition yesterday afternoon. One old lady fainted while a younger woman became hysterical.

The animal got loose from its cage at the Don Carlos Monkey Hotel. It is a wonder that several persons were not injured by the man-killing beast. Already one trainer had been fatally torn by this monkey, and the owner of the show, Don Carlos himself, has been terribly mauled in several encounters.

Shortly after one o'clock "Shorty," as the gorilla is called, got out of his cage.

The animal dashed down the lawn behind the press bureau. Crossing to the west he climbed the steps of the women's building and scampered in.

Instantly all was confusion. Women shrieked, chairs were overturned, many ladies climbed on top of convenient furniture.

Don Carlos chanced to be in front of the show when he heard the cries and shouts. Calling in several attendants, he armed himself with a twitch fastened on to the end of a pole and hastened to the building.

In the meantime the gorilla had entered one of the rooms. A man approached the door cautiously and with a bang closed it.

There was a sigh of relief and the women in the building glanced their thanks to the gentleman.

All was not over, however. There were several shrieks from behind the closed door which the man was holding. The ladies mounted the chairs once more. Finally the door was thrown open and three elderly ladies tottered out. One of them immediately collapsed.

After a few minutes' work the gorilla was cornered with the twitch. He was then taken back to his cage.

GOOD THINGS

Rev. F. B. Meyer: Men and women are created by imputing to them noble qualities of which they are not conscious and by giving them responsibility.—At Regent's Park College.

Archbishop of Canterbury: It is a mistake to imagine that our times are harder and more flurried than those of our grandfathers. Every age is to itself an age of bustle and change.—At Southend.

Sir William Richmond: All through life we have to act; so the sooner we learn some of the parts that will fell to us—hero, modest helper, accepted or rejected lover—the better we shall conduct ourselves.—At the Village Children's Historical Play Society.

Bishop of Oxford: It is the serious minority which accomplishes great things.—At Alfreton.

Bishop of Ripon: Every child that grows up without adequate care is certain to be a burden to the State in after life.—At Lady Clenconner's reception.

Sir Andrew Wingate: If we lose Sunday, we are losing what France and Italy are trying to get back.—At the Victoria Institute.

Mr. S. C. Carpenter: One of the most striking features of the present decade is the miraculous way in which the right people have appeared to meet new needs.—In the "Commonwealth."

Judge Goodnow: A wife is a necessity, and not a luxury.—At Chicago.

ROYALTIES AND EVENING DRESS

The Queen and other members of the Royal Family, including the Princess Royal, have always had a great preference for the demi evening gown with high lace yoke and long sleeves. When there are no guests to dinner at Buckingham Palace it is this style of robe her Majesty favors and a string of pearls and one or two brooches for ornaments. At Sandringham and in Scotland, when the Royal Family are alone, the Queen never wears a low-necked dress. Even when she visited the Opera and the theatres the Princess Royal's gowns were always high and with long transparent sleeves. Queen Victoria was most punctilious about the low-cut dress for dinner wear, and until the latter years of her reign she and her ladies and guests were always attired in the evenings as for a ball. King Edward, too, wished to see Queen Alexandra and his daughters always in full dress at dinner.

A CHEAP PUDDING

One cupful each of flour, suet, sugar, raisins, currants, potatoes, and carrots. Chop the suet, potatoes, and carrots, then mix all together. Tie in a cloth, plunge into boiling water, and boil for three hours.

GERMAN RICE

Boil half a pound of rice in water till quite soft. Mix with it four ounces each of sugar, chopped suet, and raisins. Beat in one egg, then pour into a basin and steam for two hours.

GOOD FIRE-LIGHTERS

Keep all empty matchboxes, and fill them with used matches, scraps of fat, or dried orange skin. If used for lighting fire, only a very few pieces of wood will be required. We always do this, and it saves a lot of firewood.

Ontario Sunday School Association

At a special session, called for the purpose, the Central Executive Committee of the Ontario Sunday School Association engaged Mr. Preston G. Orwig as Superintendent of the Secondary Division of the Ontario Sunday School Association. At a former meeting it was decided that, in selecting a successor to Rev. Mr. Glassford, the effort should be made to secure one trained in special work with the Secondary Division, comprising the Intermediate and Senior Departments of the Sunday School, familiarly termed "the teen age." The Committee entrusted with the recommendation has been at work investigating all through the summer months.

During recent years the "teen age" has been asserting itself. It is recognized that here is the broken link in the Sunday School work. A special sub-committee of the Ontario Sunday School Association has been making a definite study of conditions. Meanwhile the Boys' Work Committee of the Interprovincial Y. M. C. A., feeling the urgent need, has been developing what it calls "non-equipment work," which is an effort to help the "between Sundays" problem of the youth. In May last the two committees held conference and are planning co-operation.

Inasmuch as Ontario is the first of all the States and Provinces to place a worker in the field in this Department, and in view of the fact that the Ontario Sunday School Association and the Boys' Department of the Interprovincial Y.M.C.A. have both developed a spirit and plan of co-operation, it was felt that the opporunity which offered was most important, and that it was incumbent upon the Ontario Sunday School Association to provide a trained leader for this department.

Rev. Mr. Glassford, though resigning the Field Secretaryship, still retains the Honorary Superintendency of the Adult Department. While Mr. Orwig's special attention will be devoted to the Secondary Division, he will fill all the requirements of a general field worker.

Mr. Orwig is the son of a minister, has a business education, a business experience, and, though still under thirty years of age, has had five years, experience as a worker in Sundays Schools, also in the Boy Scout Movement, and in the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Orwig will spend the last half of September in a Training Convention tour with Mr. John L. Alexander, Superintendent of the Secondary Division of the International Sunday School Association and will report for duty October 1st. He will identify himself with the membership of the Toronto Presbyterian churches.

Montreal is to Try Bitulithic

MONTREAL Sept. 5.—As the Board of Control will recommend to the city Council that six street sections be paved with "bitulithic" and sand stone at the sides, and as the cost is greater than that of asphalt, Mayor Lavalle, after the meeting of the Board of Control yesterday afternoon stated that the controllers were following the advice of the chief engineer that "bitulithic" was the best paving material for the grades of certain streets, and more than that they were acting in conformity with the resolution of the City Council which had accepted a preliminary report in favor of "bitulithic" Mayor Lavallee pointed out that the use of asphalt on certain streets was not desirable on account of its slippery surface, and that was the reason the Chief Engineer had advised them to give "bitulithic" a trial.

As the difference in the cost will be about $7,600, "bitulithic" costing that much more than asphalt, the recommendations of the Board of Control will probably be subjected to considerable discussion on the part of the aldermen. This is the second report the board has submitted and the Chief Engineer still insists that the higher priced paving will give the better satisfaction for the new street sections he has selected.

Prospects are Bright For Belleville Fair

On Tuesday and Wednesday of next week the Belleville fair will take place of the Belleville Agricultural Park. The prospects are that it will be one of the best fairs ever held under the auspices of the Association. From the Secretary, Mr. R. H. Ketcheson, we learn that the entries in the various classes are far in excess of any previous year and many new exhibitors are making a display here for the first time. The entries of horses in the different classes are exceptionally large.

On Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon the speeding events will no doubt prove attractive, as the various events will be well contested.

An excellent programme of attractions has been arranged for, which will be clean and up to date. This includes Cora Youngblood, Musical Sextette, Mlle. Delora, the world's most Perfect Woman. Four Original Mayos, the newest comedy act in America. An entirely new feature is The Midway.

A special feature of the fair this year will be an exhibit of the use of electricity on the farm and in the home. There will be a number of different farm implements operated by elteirte motors, milking and the care of milk by electricity, cooking, ironing, etc., by electricity. This exhibit is supplied by the Trenton Electric and Water Co., and will tour the fall fairs in the district.

The grounds will be opened on Tuesday evening, when an attractive programme will be presented.

The Frock Coat Of a Marquis

The Marquis de Soveral undoubtedly created the sensation of the week in men's fashions by appearing one day at the races in a frock coat suit of golden brown, the lapels turned back with silk of a darker shade, says the London correspondent of Men's wear. His hat was black silk, and the tie worn was pure white—gloves the proverbial white kid for which he has become famous for introducing into this country.

I remember when he alighted from the royal carriage the rush of well-dressed men to look at this frock suit. Certainly the color was something smart, and suitable for such an occasion as Royal Ascot. During the races, and again in town the same evening, I heard many many men say it was an extraordinary suit, but it was worn with conspicuous success.

While mentioning frock coats let me say they were conspicuous by their absence, except among two or three of the royal guests, who no doubt adopt this particular shape garment in compliment to his Majesty. Most religiously did I stroll around the enclosures with my eye open for the frock coat, and I would be perfectly safe in saying that out of the 10,000 or 20,000 men present there were about 100 frock coats, and some of the coats I would not dare mention, as they were quite relics, and might be put away in one's museum. Most of the men present wore black, and even in the royal entourage gray of a light shade was tabooed this year.

The point which strick me most was that many men of the royal party were wearing colored ties, and, as will be remembered, it was considered to be very bad taste for anyone to be seen in a colored tie with town clothes a little while ago.

Another thing noted was the decadence in the wearing of spats. I remember Ascots where every other man you met was wearing white pique or linen spats; indeed there were many worn, but the majority of the men were favoring colored uppers on their boots or black patent shoes, and these looked very nice when worn with silk socks, chiefly black with a fine line of mauve or a little tracing of white.

Prices Were High On the Market

Although the attendance upon the market this morning was good, and considerable produce was offered for sale, the prices, as usual, were high, especially for butter and eggs. The former sold at 32c. and 33c. per pound in single lots, while eggs sold at 25c. per dozen. Dressed poultry also commanded good prices.

Potatoes are quite plentiful and sold at $1 per bag.

Garden produce, while in good demand, sold at reasonable prices.

In dressed meats there is no change to note in prices.

Well-Known Steamer Sunk at Dry Dock

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 6.—The Toronto-owned steamer Frontier, formerly known as the Argyle, which formerly run on the Bay of Quinte is lying filled with water, at the entrance to Muir's dry-dock at Port Dalhousie, as the result of a leak which assumed such proportions as soon as the pumps were stopped that it was impossible to get the vessel into the dock before she sank.

It is understood that the steamer was brought across from Toronto for the purpose of having repairs effected to stop the very leak which proved her undoing at the last moment. The leak developed in the middle of the lake during one of her regular runs between Toronto and Lewiston.

When the Frontier arrived off Muir's dry dock this afternoon it was found that the draught of the vessel was too great to permit of her being navigated through the dock gates. In order to lighten her the fires were extinguished, and all the water was withdrawn from her boilers. The troublesome leak in her bottom immediately assumed large proportions, and, there being no steam to operate her pumps, it was impossible to keep back the advancing water. Every effort was made to tow the boat into the dock, but she was only half way in when her buoyancy was reduced to a minus quantity. Then she slipped back and slowly settled on the bottom. It will require a steam pump to float her again.

The Frontier is operated by the People's Line, and commanded by Capt. Enright of St. Catharines.

SHOULD HAVE MADE A WILL

Children Neglect Aged Mother

A sad case was brought to the attention of a charitable society recently, when they received an application for relief from an elderly woman.

Her husband had been prosperous but died without leaving a will. The widow did not insist on her rights to a third of the estate, but turned everything over to the children, believing that they would look after her for the balance of her life. She had lived with one after another of her married sons and daughters, and her story of the way in which she was treated causes a very serious reflection on the ingratitude of children.

The main point is, however, that it is not fair for a man to leave to an unprotected and inexperienced woman the responsibility of deciding on purely business affairs. It was the plain duty of the husband, as it is the duty of every person, to make a will. There is no excuse, because it is no longer necessary to employ a lawyer or incur large expense—the BAX Will Forms can be obtained for 35 cents. Accompanying each form is a specimen will properly filled out and full instructions for your guidance.

The BAX Will Form filled out and witnessed by two friends is absolutely binding and indisputable.

For sale by C. B. Scantlebury and G. L. Sills, Belleville, or sent on receipt of 35 cents by the BAX Will Form Company, Toronto.

SHALL I WIN HER?

THE STORY OF A WANDERER

By JAMES GRANT

Author of "The Romance of War," "Under the Red Dragon," "Fairer than A Fairy," etc.

The girl was pouting and very prettily too.

"Your husband should have a horse—a fleet horse—and such arms as become a man, a warrior," said I, reverting to my ever-present thought and desire.

"He shall have both, and everything becoming the Inkosi—the husband of Sandilli's daughter."

"The husband of Mariqua," said I insinuatingly.

"The husband, my lord, and lover of the Griqua girl," she added, patting my cheeks with her hands and placing her pretty mouth in very close proximity to mine; but I was not prepared to bestow even upon her the caresses which I deemed the property of my absent Clarice, so I drew back.

"Heavens!" thought I, while gazing on her as she clung to me in a manner that, if bewildering was, to say the least of it, not unpleasant "is it possible that a being so innocent and artless is really a barbarian—a pagan—a Caffre, ignorant of the death she must die, and when dead, after the fashion of her people no other grave than the maws of the vultures and jackals?"

For a moment I thought I would endeavor to teach her, and train her mind; but sunk in densest darkness as she was, the task seemed a vain one

"But the horse and arms, a musket and hatchet, Mariqua?" said I toying a little with her, in the hope that before matters proceeded too far, I might obtain, from her or through her influence, what I required and then "be off without beat of drum."

"You shall have all—the fleet horse of Pitoi, the son of Vonga, a musket and a sharp hatchet too."

"But when—when?' I asked impatiently.

"When we are married," said she coyly and prettily, as she dropped her head on my shoulder.

"Wah—wah—wah!" said approvingly a voice with which I was now unpleasantly familiar, and Sandilli with his black kaross and crane's feathers, a dagha pipe in one hand and a bundle of bloodstained assegais in the other, stood before me, a most unpromising looking father in law, who had been regarding the scene with approbation, and with the air of one who would have no trifling with his daughter's "young affections."

The grin on his sardonic visage, the fierce hook of his nose, the cicatrised ornamentation of his skin, the row of white teeth he showed and the glistening of his fierce dark eyes, with the effect of the two crane's feathers, reminded me somehow of Mephistopheles in the opera of Faust.

His sudden appearance—his evident satisfaction at the rapid progress of matters—his entire bearing which seemed to say, "I have fulfilled my part of our contract, and now look for the fulfillment of yours," greatly alarmed and exasperated me.

The sudden and absurd love of the girl I might soothe or tolerate; but there would be no baffling old Sandilli.

Proud of having a white over, the girl was as determined to keep possession of me as he was. So from her I could have but small hope of assistance, unless I played my part well, like that of the "gay young knight who loved and rode away"

Then I was not without fears of her vengeance if I treated her with indifference or neglect and especially that of her father, if she complained to him, for he would have thought no more of poking his assegai into me than into a pumpkin.

Though Mariqua was in many respects a mere savage, she was so gentle, trusting and artless that I was not without some remorse of conscience for playing the part I did; yet it was forced upon me by circumstances beyond my control and to have attempted any explanation to her, or temporizing with her father, would only have insured his wrath, which was prompt enough at all times, and very probably lead to my being broiled between red hot stones, like the poor Dutch doctor.

I was full of supreme joy to feel assured of the safety of Clarice Haywood. I burning with desire to achieve my liberty and rejoin her; but only hoped to do either by falling apparently into the plans of my captors.

Every moment I perused and reperused her little note this longing grew stronger on me, and yet days and even weeks were stealing away The words of it seemed to be the utterance of her own lips, and brought her sweet and highbred presence more vividly before me; but ere long the soft pencilling became almost effaced and the fragment of paper frayed, yet I treasured it with all a lover's tenderness.

I obtained some day's delay by feigning an illness, but this was done in vain The witch doctors were summoned from all quarters— those odious cruel and cunning Umlanjeni, at the thought of whom my blood ran cold—and dreading a consultation with them, I consented to do anything Sandilli required of me, and so a great gathering of savages was convened in a Gulu valley on a lovely evening in August, and the Wolf's den—the home farm of Sandilli—became a scene of noisy whooping, yelling and rejoicing, amid which I felt that I cut a perilous and absurd figure that filled my heart with anger and mortification.

The ceremony was simple enough, and consisted chiefly in the tying of a piece of the dried chitterling from some wild animal round the slender throat of the girl.

I was attired in a headdress of fur, like one of those which our troops found in such numbers in the royal Gakt kraal on the Amatolas, a kaross of tiger skin—like the crane's feathers a badge of chieftainship—was placed upon my shoulders, and an assegai was put in my hand. I grasped it with stern joy. It seemed to be my first instalment, perhaps of liberty—my guide to Clarice Haywood.

Around us the odious Umanjeni perfumed many strange and satanic like capers and incontations and all the men present, to the number of thousands—wretches who would with joy have slain me had such been the behest of ther leaders—whooped and danced like fiends, striking their shields of hide and brandishing their assegais to a wild chorus in obedience to Sandilli, and making a horrible medley of sound.

There was a feast, at which all kinds of animals, wild and tame, were devoured with great relish, and plenty of Cape wine and Dutch beer plundered from lonely kraals and open villages was drunk from vessels made of the shells of ostrich eggs and land tortoises.

The atmosphere was sickening redolent of the fumes from thousands of dagha pipes full of damp hempseed.

The scene around me was utterly bewildering. The bad wine, of which I had partaken rather freely, to drown care and desperation, together with the intoxicating effect of the dagha pipes, made me feel as one in a dream, and I could scarcely reply to Sandilli when, after the abominable hubbub was over he proposed to depart to his camp, which was situated I knew not where, as he and all about me took especial care to keep me entirely in the dark as to the movements of the Caffres and of our troops.

"I shall exepect my dear son—the husband of Mariqua to begin soon the duties of a gallant chief," said he, with a strange leer in his eye.

"In what way?" I asked rather sulkily.

"By leading my people against the white men—these accursed tortoises in particular—and by teaching us their art in war."

"Agreed; but I must have a horse and arms."

Sandilli eyed me keenly and doubtfully.

"In time you shall have both," he said, after a pause.

"So am I always told; but when?"

"When I return to take you with me to the field."

"What if I refuse?"

His eyes shot fire, and the grasp of his mahogany like hand tightened on his assegai; but he said quietly—

"My son will know better than to do that."

"If I fight Sandilli it shall be in the van," said I feeling that I was not improving matters at present, and that my best chance at escape—if not shot down by our own people—would be in getting as far to the front as possible.

"Wah, wah, wah!" said he approvingly.

"And if I fall—"

"Who then, will love poor Mariqua?' said the girl, as she wound her soft brown arms affectionately around me.

I shivered as she spoke for I felt all the dark falsehood of my present position.

PROF. J. F. DAVIS

563 CHURCH ST., TORONTO.

I want to say to the people of Toronto and elsewhere that "Fruit-a-tives" is my only medicine and has been for the last four years. Previous to that, I had been very much troubled with Rheumatism and Kidney Disease, and had taken many remedies as well as employing hot applications of salt bags etc., without getting satisfactory results.

Noticing the advertisement of "Fruit-a-tives", I adopted this treatment altogether and, as everybody knows, since taking "Fruit-a-tives", I have been enjoying the very best health and find it a pleasure to follow my vocation of Dancing and Deportment Instruction".

PROF. J. F. DAVIS.

Prof. Davis, the celebrated teacher of dancing and deportment in Toronto, is quite frank in stating that "Fruit-a-tives" alone cured him of distressing Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble.

OLDEST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

A Sketch of Historic Presbyterianism at Williamstown

Williamstown is the oldest Presbyterian congregation in Ontario, having been established in 1787 by the Rev. John Bethune, who had been Chaplain of a British regiment, the 84th, in the War of the Revolution. At the close of the war, this regiment was disbanded and many of the members settled in Glengarry, which was then unbroken forest.

Mr. Bethune remained in Montreal and got together the congregation of St. Gabriel Street Church, to whom he preached from March 12, 1786, to May 6, 1787, when he removed to Williamstown and started the organization of the Presbyterian church, there.

The site of Williamstown was a grant from the Crown to Sir John Jhonson, and the village was so named in memory of Sir John's father, Sir William Johnson, who died in 1774, just before the breaking out of the War of the Revolution. The first church built at Williamstown, shortly after Mr. Bethune arrived there, was an unpretentious log building, the seats being planks laid on cedar blocks. During the week it was used as a school.

About 1809 a stone church was put up a little to the east of the present structure, but through some defect in the foundation it fell.

The erection of the present church was commenced in 1812, when the walls were put up and the roof put on. Little more was done till the close of the war of 1812-14, and it was not till early in 1818 that the church was completed.

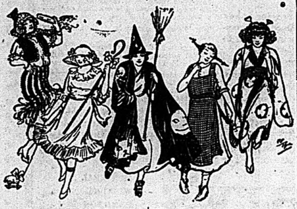
LATEST PARIS FASHIONS

For the Impromptu Masquerade

THE impromptu masquerade or fancy dress ball at the summer resort is pretty sure to be the jolliest event of the social season. It means a scurrying about for costumes when the "standby" has not been included in the summer wardrobe, and many are the amusing makeshifts resorted to by the hotel guests at such a moment.

Many of them are immensely clever and, while not, perhaps, exactly historically correct, show the character represented by familiar and accepted details.

Entering into the spirit of the occasion with zest and enthusiasm, one who happens to have a naturally developed "actor's sense" will instinctively throw aside any self-consciousness and become absorbed in the character represented, to the delight of the onlooker.



It is surprising what one can beg or borrow for costumes at the most out of the way summer hotel. Take, for instance, "Carmen," the first figure shown on this page.

Over a bright hued petticoat a striped scarf, confiscated from a bureau if no shoulder scarf or Roman sash is at hand, has been tied in Spanish fashion. A simple white cotton blouse, cut low at the neck and rolled up at the sleeves, is partly covered by a bolero, but just as correct a neck finish would be a fichu of a fringed silk handkerchief or one of lace or muslin.

The real Spanish touch would be in the lace scarf draped over a high backed comb in mantilla fashion, as the Spanish girl arranges it for gala array. Another hair dressing is the bright silk handkerchief folded over the head three-corner wise, knotted low toward the back. This should be topped off by a wide brimmed hat. A red rose held between the teeth or tucked behind the ear is traditional, as well as some one of the familiar accessories, such as playing cards for fortune telling, a tamborine, a fan, to say nothing of shoes with brightly painted high heels.

"Bo-Peep" has even less difficulty in getting herself up, for a filmy white dress or even a white blouse and a separate skirt may be used, shortened by an invisibly placed tuck under some ruffle. A broad silk sash of dainty hue and a wide brimmed straw hat with roses and an artistic streamer end drawn under the chin and tied at one side will do, with half hose worn over long flesh colored or transparent white silk stockings. A toy lamb and a crook fashioned from a slender sapling wired and stuffed at the curved end, then covered with white paper, make the necessary accessories. It's a graceful costume for the pretty and dainty girl, especially when carried out in white, pink and blue pompadour colorings.

The witch is a good disguise for a girl who likes a character rôle, and the big enveloping cape may be made from a couple of old curtains or black cambric bought at the village shop. The top is gathered about the neck and bright yellow figures are cut out of paper or cambric and sewn or pasted on. The hat, made of pasteboard, has a cornucopia crown set on a circular brim, sewn together and covered with paper. The broom can be made of twigs. If the hotel cat can be persuaded to lend her presence for the grand march all the more effective. A pretty light evening dress can be worn underneath, so that the costume may be thrown aside later in the evening.

A boyish girl with a sense of fun can very easily carry out the droll little figure that comes next in line. Funny little Sis Hopkins, arrayed in a kitchen apron, run down shoes, torn stockings and any sort of dilapidated dress, may add a sunbonnet or not, as she chooses. This costume, like the preceding one, may be worn over a simple party frock, basted up with large stitches under the short dress, which are easily pulled out when the little country girl costume has been removed. The hair is flattened down and braided in tiny pigtails that will be nice and crimpy later in the evening, when caught up quickly in a pretty coiffure with the help of a broad satin ribbon and bow.

If a lovely Japanese kimono is at hand a dear little Japanese maid may be conjured up by using a broad sash and dressing the hair with fans or flowers, as shown in the sketch. If the real slippers are not at hand stockings drawn over slippers and tied with ribbons or tapes will look like Japanese sandals.

Outside of these "put-together-in-a-minute" costumes many popular priced patterns may be obtained, so that a costume may be quickly fashioned, and millinery, rather than dressmaking, stitches used. There is a peasant dress pattern which makes any one of several nationalities, Italian, Dutch or French.

For the artistically slender or perfectly proportioned girl the dainty Empire gown, with its high waist line, is so near the present fashion that an up to date dress worn with a long floating scarf, and another wreathed into a turban into which some borrowed aigrettes have been thrust, will make a lovely Empress Josephine.

A Pocahontas dress, fashioned by the aid of a pattern, and canton flannel slashed into fringe on the edges and trimmed by gayly colored beads is just the thing for one who has nice long hair to braid into two plaits, hanging forward over the shoulders and banded around the forehead by a narrow ribbon into which two eagle's feathers or imitations have been thrust.

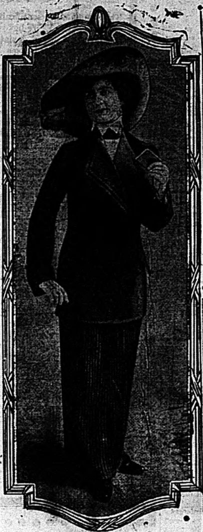
THE FIRST IMPORTED FALL MODELS



A Coat and Skirt of Covert Cloth.

IT is an interesting fact that the first fall Paris models are imported and often exhibited in New York early in June, for the manufacturers of ready made clothes must get the fashion ideas far in advance of the dressmaking establishments. So the resident Paris buyers are commissioned to scour that city to find the latest and most advanced fashion details, and as these people are experts who know almost intuitively the trend fashion will take, their conjectures are often remarkably correct.

These early importations are "Americanized" by the New York and Middle West designers, sometimes into an artistic and charming simplicity, sometimes, alas! ruined by overtrimming, in a mistaken effort to give a lot for the money. But out of all these tentative efforts come, as with the Paris designer, the successful models that become the fashion from one end of the country to the other.

So these three models illustrated here, sent over by the Paris representative of the Dry Goods Economist, are the latest creations from three of the leading master designers of the French capital and contain many ideas new to New York and just at present the vogue in Paris.

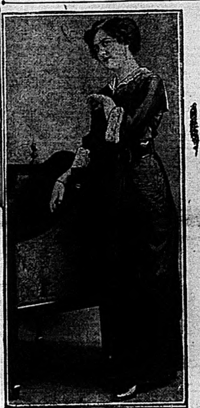
Take the upper left hand photograph of a Béchoff-David tailored suit, made from covert cloth, so popular a decade or so ago. The skirt is pleated in the new flat accordion style; the coat is on the late lines, with overshoulder seam in front and seams from the armholes at the back, and has in addition a centre back seam ending in a shallow inverted pleat. These three seams are crossed by a belt at the waist line. The new double rever is an attractive feature that might be used on even a simpler model.

A Paquin model exhibiting many new style points also is shown. Made of light weight black broadcloth, it has a few pleats caught up in the back in an illusive reminder of fashions of the early 70's, defined much more sharply in the third photograph. In the Paquin gown the draped pleats disappear under a wide separate panel, which has a box pleated effect from the outside pleated edges and ends in a rather blunt point.

The belt is a genuine novelty, made of patent leather, with two metal slides, which do not quite meet in front. This space is filled in by a black satin sash, passing under and through these slides, tying once and falling in long fringed ends. The deep one sided yoke in front that ends in a collar in the back is of uncommon cut, and the narrow flat satin folds used as embroidery over the hips are repeated on the back panel point. Gauzy batiste collar and cuffs delicately embroidered lighten this gown's somewhat sombre coloring.

That contrasting materials in tailored suits, both morning and afternoon types, will be continued as an ultra smart style through the fall and winter is verified by the Martial & Armand afternoon tailored suit. On very new and unusual lines, curiously reminiscent of the fair women of that epoch immortalized by the painter Alfred Stevens, the silhouette seems changed by the new corset lines.

A Watteau pleat is added to the back of the tan broadcloth coat and the black velvet skirt has the drapery arranged so that it puffs out and makes the slanting centre back a continuous outward and downward line. This is broken only by a curved strap diverging from the lapped seam placed slightly to the left. The strap fastens over the drapery with a large velvet button. The train ends in pointed fashion. In the high buttoned coat, its godet and basque bolero waist line bespeaks this old time style, which in spite of its frequent over-elaboration has an indefinable air of elegance.



The Sash Passes Through the Metal Belt Slide.

In fashion revivals to be sure nothing comes back in just the same way, but every so many years the great designers in turning over the old fashion plates see an old style from a new and artistic and and often improved angle. Models are made and the fashionable public accepts after a first gasp of surprise, or the fashion dies from an impersonal neglect.

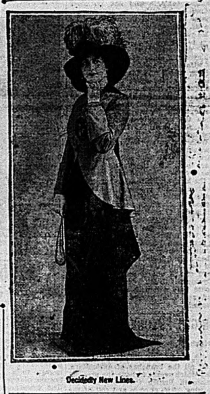
FASHION HINTS.

In Paris they are making a coat negligee which is the ideal garment for travelling. The negligee is cut similarly to the ulster, having the panel back, narrow underarm forms, straight double breasted front and medium sized set-in sleeves of the conventional coat shape. When made in dark serge or taffeta, fastened with self-covered square buttons and finished at the throat with a high turned over collar the negligee looks precisely like a runabout coat, and no woman who wears it in the corridor of a steamship or a sleeping car need be embarrassed when encountering a stranger of the opposite sex. Some of these coat negligees have adjustable linings which may be basted to the arm's eyes and about the neck when the temperature demands additional warmth.

One of the chic fancies of the moment in Paris for young girls pouring tea is a tulle or net apron with pockets. It fastens on either shoulder with soft knots of ribbon and small roses. The belt is formed by a ribbon running through a puff of the tulle. The apron finishes with a ruffle across the lower edge with a heading of small roses. Roses also trim the pockets.

Amazingly simple of design are the neckpieces consisting of a quarter yard wide strip of shot taffeta, which is just long enough to go around the throat. Bordering this strip is a narrow band of ostrich feathers, and at both ends it is fulled into yard long strips of No. 12 self-toned velvet ribbon ties, which are knotted to form two short loops and so many long ends.

The fashionable chiffon scarfs always so becoming have had a smart note added to them this season. A certain shop is showing some imported ones in lace over chiffon with a heavy six inch silk fringe as a finish. They are about two and a half yards long, including the fringe which holds them together. They are charming in black Chantilly lace over white chiffon with a heavy black fringe. The white Chantilly and other light laces over pink, blue, lilac and gold are alluring and beautiful.



Decidedly New Lines.

Adapting the Inexpensive Corset to Your Figure.

HO be well dressed one's corset must fit perfectly. This is true of even the slim sisterhood, but when it comes to the woman of avoirdupois it becomes of an importance not to be exaggerated. Of course, one's first idea is that to be well corseted is only possible to those who can pay commensurately with the effect.

I have discovered it is not necessary to buy expensive corsets to obtain the trim, well set up look all stout women long for. It is economical to buy corsets that cost in the neighborhood of $10, because they last longer and look the part longer. It's one of the many economies that only plenty of money allows. It's like buying at a bargain winter things in early spring and next summer materials when late September puts tempting price tags on them. You can't do it on a modest income. Those are the real economies of the well to do.

To come back to corsets. When I found I had the problem to solve of 170 pounds of flesh on a "five-foot-two" frame and a microscopic dress allowance I began to experiment. Gradually I have scaled down from the best "ready to wear" corset, at $10 to $15, elaborately refitted by the corsetieres at the shops where I bought them, to $1.50 corsets refitted by myself. My waist is thirty inches. I buy a twenty-seven inch corset, for which I pay $1.50.

I pick out a low bust, as low as I can get it, and as long over the hips as I line to top. Have it large enough from the waist line up to fit when laced into place, with a three inch space between the sides in the back; then lace the whole corset so the space the entire length is three inches. Now take gussets, beginning at nothing and widening so as to take out all unnecessary fulness, sew firmly by machine and fell by hand. Use extra long, flat corset strings and pull the corsets wide apart, each time you take them off.

I imagine most stout women find that a "ready to wear" corset that fits from the waist up does not fit from the waist down.

My experience with the $1.50 article is so satisfactory under my present mode of procedure that should my income suddenly expand there are many other luxuries I should indulge in before I thought a made-to-order corset necessary to my happiness.

The only change would be in the number of corsets I allowed myself. Now I have two a year. I wear also a supplementary garment—a low cut, well fitted close princess slip, made of a good, firm cambric, with casings for bones which can be taken out when the garment goes to the laundry. I put on hooks and eyes close together to fasten in the back. This I find a lot more satisfactory than the brassiere. It takes the place of corset cover and petticoat and does away with undesirable bunchiness.

With this for a tight foundation, wear your outside garments loose. My experience is that it takes away all sloppiness and gives a feeling of thinness that is very comforting, and it is the coolest mode of dressing for hot weather, as it reduces the number of garments to be pulled, pinned and belted into place.

Be sure to make your slips of firm and strong material. Of course the matter of finishing is of individual taste, but have the firm edge of the slip come well-

Simple Summer Costume of Net

It has been somewhat of a problem to the modiste to invent a simple summer costume of net which would be all that such a gown should be in daintiness and simplicity and yet be sufficiently dignified for the matron with grown daughters.

"There are plenty of pretty net gowns, for instance, for daughters," said a modiste who always has the needs of the matron at heart, "but there seems to be nothing for the mother. What was wanted was a gown which would do to wear at dinner in summer, which would not be too elaborate to put on at six o'clock, which is really broad daylight in the summer or when going out for a spin in the car before dinner, for instance, with only a light wrap over it. The usual evening gown seemed too elaborate for this purpose, and yet the summer lingerie gown which serves the young girl so well was not sufficiently dignified." To fill this want this modiste has designed an exquisite net gown, as dainty as that of a débutante, as summery as the most simple of lingerie frocks and yet having certain little dignified touches which make it perfectly possible and becoming for the woman who wisely recognizes that she looks youngest when she is not trying to look too young, developed in deep cream net and trimmed with white satin and a few tiny bunches of artificial flowers, but there are many color combinations in which the gown can be had. Its price when made to order is $50.

Frock sets are more and more taking the form of stoles which cover most of the blouse and of cuffs which disguise the shape of the sleeves. One of these models is of macrame lace edged with folds of taffeta in the mesh tone and finished about the throat with a flat turn over collar of black velvet trimmed with a narrow insertion of macrame. The cuffs are flat half turn overs of velvet bordered so deeply with macrame insertion edged with taffeta folds that the turning of the corner at the outer side of the arm makes a sharp point of lace and silk which extends to the elbow. A second stole of allover lace has its lower edge cut in battlements, which are bound with pale blue taffeta, and at its throat is a turned over narrow collar of the silk, which in front forms a sharp V. The deep cuffs or silk have straight upper edges which start near the elbow and at the lower edge are cut into three sharp points which are filled in with fans of the

MADE HIS WAY IN THE NORTH

A Fine Story of a Real Character in Northern Ontario, With Its Old Country Connection

The younger son of a younger son of an English house so illustrious that some decades ago it furnished Canada with a Viceroy, came in advanced middle age to northern Ontario and with his own hands built himself a house, not much to look at, certainly, but enough to shield himself and his wife and children from the wind and the rain and the frost and the snow. It was Home. Years passed. But what a change! The little beeches he had planted yesterday to screen the shack from the public gaze now embowered a colonial mansion, with deep verandahs for the quick hot summers and wide fireplaces for the long cold winters. In the [illegible] where the turf was as close as on an Oxford lawn and as green as emerald, three or four of the herd of pedigree cattle he had bred drank at the creek, lazily flicking off the flies. He walked through a paddock where he was feeding cattle for the Toronto market till he came to the tennis court, where his sons were flying to and fro after the ball. Fred, the elder, had just returned from his first year at [illegible], and tomorrow he was going to Moose Factory, where he was going to work during his vacation as shipping clerk to an elevator company. He remembered what he told him when he left for his first term:

"Now, my boy, after I've given you a start you've got to pay your own way. It's no disgrace to work in this country, and you can get real hard practical experience of the workaday world in the vacation to make real the theories you will learn in the classroom. In Canada there's room for everybody, and you don't have to worry for the future."

Turning back, he looked over his farm, stretching clear to the railroad which ran north to James Bay and south to Toronto. It was green with crops. He must presently go down to the men who were picking strawberries for the Cobalt market, and if he saw any more bugs on the potatoes he must have them sprayed. And all this land was his own; his, the younger son's, who had no more chance of becoming a landed proprietor in England than of damming the St. Lawrence.

He could now look back with pleasure to the years of hope, of transitory disappointment and of final achievement since the time he and his wife and the children came to the old log shack on the bank of the creek. He lived again the despair of the first year, when a June frost froze all the crops, and his surprise and relief when he found that it was only the tops that were brown, the nights when the mosquitoes would not let them sleep, and the triumph of the first harvesting.

With that money he had bought his first calves and erected the little old barn which he was still using as a place to keep his buggies and harness. The first year he had been president of the local agricultural society he had commenced the present house, a very modest frame building as at first designed, but which he had enlarged and added to as years went by. The year before last he had entertained a visitor from the old country, who had told him that the old estate had at last been broken up, and was in small holdings, and he had wondered when he had found himself comparing his own lot with that of the present head of the house, much to his own advantage. Next year, perhaps, he would take a trip to the old country and see what things were like for himself.

BRIGHT FUTURE FOR FRUIT

British Columbia is Developing on Fruit Growing Lines

Of all the branches of agriculture, that which seems to have the greatest future in British Columbia is fruit-growing. The climate and soil of the Province are peculiarly favorable to tree growth. This was well known to pioneers of the coast, and as far back as Hudson's Bay Company days the best of apples were grown on both Vancouver Island and the mainland. But difficulties were great and trying in these early days and even in more recent years, extending even well into the nineties. Shipping facilities were poor, roads non-existent, and markets none the best, while the cost of clearing and reclaiming the land was, in many instances, prohibitive. It is scarcely to be wondered at that so many of the pioneers simply waited. Waiting was worth while, from a financial, if not from an agricultural, point of view, for real estate values have advanced enormously with the increase in population. Subdivision of the old ranches has followed and the day of small things has vanished. The total plantings in 1911 were 25,000 acres. The increase in 1912 will be fifty per cent.

FINEST WEDDING GIFT

Probably the most magnificent wedding present ever made was that of Cardinal Mazarin to Maria Theresa. It consisted of an entire dinner service of pure gold, two gorgeous state carriages, twelve of the finest horses procurable in Russia and Italy, and jewels that cost the donor a little more than six million dollars. The Cardinal gave each of his seven nieces a fortune on her marriage, and Saint Simon records the fact that in his will he left to one of his nephews-in-law nearly six millions dollars. The tapestries, books, paintings and furniture he left behind him are to-day the choicest treasures of many museums, and are fought for by the richest men in the world on the rare occasions when they come into the market.

Much of a woman's self-confidence is due to the fit of her gown.

Too many people are willing to forget and forgive for a consideration.

IN THE GARDEN

Keep the hedges clipped.

Thin the apples and plums if too heavily loaded.

Lawn clippings and green waste from the garden make good chicken feed.

Keep the cultivator and weeder going. They not only kill weeds, but conserve moisture.

Keep the sweet peas picked. It is better for the plants, and the house can be made more attractive by their use.

Keep the new strawberry bed clean cultivated until the runners are matted too much to permit the cultivator to go through.

If the strawberry plants are vigorous, and the bed not too weedy, it may pay to renovate it for another year. Mow the plants close to the ground, rake off the foliage and burn it. Plow a furrow, cutting out all but about one foot of the row, and then go through and take out the weeds and diseased plants in this row. Fill the furrow with thoroughly rotted manure and cultivate the soil back. Keep up a thorough cultivation of the soil all the season.

MIXED FARMING

Vice-President Bury is Much Interested in the Subject

Vice-president Bury, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, while in Calgary returning from a trip to the Coast, said the company is very much interested in the question of mixed farming, and will do everything in its power to encourage the farmers to engage to a greater extent in this branch of agriculture. He believed that more mixed farming was essential to the welfare of the country and it is astonishing to find so much agricultural produce being imported. "On this trip," he said, "I was served with butter from New Zealand, button from Australia, fruit from the United States, marmalade from England, and potatoes from Virginia. At Vancouver I noticed a shipment of twenty-five carloads of condensed milk from Eastern Canada being loaded on a vessel for export. All these articles should be produced in Western Canada."

5. A dry, spacious and sunny dwelling.
6. Scrupulous cleanliness.

In returning a verdict of "Suicide while of unsound mind," the jury added a rider that restrictions should be imposed on the sale of veronal, which the coroner described as almost as deadly a poison as prussic acid, "as deadly as a rattlesnake or a mad dog."

Settle the Range Question NOW
—Settle It Definitely

Reason out the whole proposition. State in black and white what you require in a range—what you must have.

1st. The range you are going to buy must be a perfect cooking apparatus.

That demands scientifically proportioned Oven and Fire-box—also heating flues that do not deviate one iota from correct principles in range building.

2nd. The range you are going to buy must be handsome in appearance, yet easily kept clean.

This demands a rich, not lavish, nickel adornment, with bold, strong carving, none of that delicate, impossible-to-keep-clean tracery.

3rd. The range you are going to buy must be economical on fuel and a time-saver.

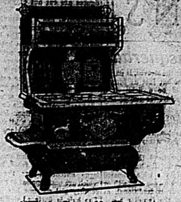
So, you must be sure that the fire-box radiates the maximum of heat quickly—you must know that every cubit inch of warm air is utilized—you must see that the Oven attends strictly to business with the least possible attention on your part.

4th. The range you are going to buy must be a range of many conveniences.

That demands years of experiment—unusual care—inventive genius and liberal expenditure on the part of the manufacturer before you can get the range of many conveniences.

5th. The range you are going to buy must be a permanent investment.

Therefore, you must know that the material of each part is specially manufactured to serve its special purpose—that every part is tested, then, assembled by stove experts who joy in their work.



"Pandora" Range

6th. The range you are going to buy must be guaranteed by manufacturers with a reputation to sustain.

Investigate, and you'll find that the manufacturers with the best reputation are precisely those who must turn out the best ranges.

The "PANDORA" is the BEST Answer to the Range Question

The Reasons Why

The "Pandora" is a perfect baker and cooker, because——Oven, Fire-box and Heating Flues are scientifically proportioned — the temperature always under cook's control.

The "Pandora" is a handsome range, yet easily kept clean, because——The carving is bold—our "Duplex" nickel makes for beauty and durability, while the burnished surfaces remain as smooth as plate glass.

The "Pandora" range is economical on fuel and a time-saver, because——Every cubit inch of fresh warm air flows around the oven twice before passing into smoke pipe. Thermometer shows in plain figures exact degree of heat for baking pies,cakes,etc.

The "Pandora" is a range of many conveniences, because——It is furnished with every feature which makes for range perfection, some of them exclusive McClary features. The one piece enamelled reservoir is easily kept clean,—the towel rod supplied is one-third emery—a first-class and handy knife sharpener.

The "Pandora" range is a permanent investment, because——Every inch of material is selected for its special purpose, then, tested before range is assembled.

The "Pandora" range is amply guaranteed by the McClary name. Every McClary agent is authorized to guarantee the "Pandora" Range to give utter satisfaction.

Now, read the column of reasons to the right of this advertisement—don't hurry—read carefully, then, you will be convinced that the Pandora is the range you want to buy because the "Pandora" is the one perfect range—the range that gives utter satisfaction in the kitchen, and—The "PANDORA" SAVES MONEY. Your husband will agree with you. But—you just take him to the nearest McClary agent and he'll buy the range you want—The "Pandora" Range.

AGRICULTURE AT COAST

Development of the Farming Industry in British Columbia

Agriculture is more and more giving promise of becoming to British Columbia what it has already become to the Provinces of the prairies—not only the staple, but the leading industry. This Province produced in the year 1911 agricultural products valued at $31,641,926, an increase for the year of $7,242,838, or 50.3 per cent. This sum of nearly twenty-two millions was made up in large part as follows: Milk, $2,295,800; fruit and vegetables, $5,084,241; hay, $4,912,566; grain, $3,160,327; eggs, $255,112; honey, $35,173. These figures are official and are from a bulletin issued recently by the Department of Agriculture at Victoria. To their total one must add the year's share of the ten million dollars' worth of live stock held on the farms and ranches of the Province. This would bring the value of farm products for the twelve months within easy distance of the output of British Columbia's two greatest industries, mining and lumbering and would place it far in the lead of fishing, the next industry. The mines of the Province yielded in 1911 $23,211,816; the forests, $24,823,000, and the fisheries, $11,000,000.

STOP TRAINS BY WIRELESS

Signalman 20 Miles Away Can Apply Brakes, Says Inventor

Herr von Kramer, the inventor of the system of communicating by telephone from moving trains, says he has developed an invention in conjunction with Herr Kapp, who has evolved a sensitive detector, whereby it is possible to pick up the feeble currents received by a train and relay them up into stronger currents so as to operate electric bells and hooters and even apply brakes. He declares that a signalman from ten to twenty miles away will thereby be enabled to stop a train by merely pressing a button.

The Germans are leaders in a new industry, which is the means of making wood into yarn, cloth, twine, carpets, and imitation silk and canvas, all of which are proof against the action of both hot and cold water. "Silvatin" yarn is made near Berlin, from spruce wood. In Saxony, "xylolin" yarn is manufactured from paper and wood pulp. Sawdust and the waste wood from fashioning rectangular boards from tree trunks can now be scientifically converted into useful materials.

Alleged Spurring of a Horse

Mr. J. G. Hutchison was, at St. Clears, Carmarthenshire, found not guilty of cruelty in spurring a horse at the Point-to-Point Races. An inspector in the service of the R.S.P.C.A. said the horse's flanks were covered with patches of blood, which was dripping to the ground. Mr. Hutchison said the horse got rowelled accidentally. A little blood mixed with sweat and foam gave the appearance described.

CHURCH JEWELS STOLEN

Thieves Make Rich Haul From Much Revered Statue

A gross act of sacrilege has caused concern among the worshippers of the Church of Sant Andrea della Valle, in the Corso Vittorio Emanuele, Rome. A famous statue, known as the Bambino di San Gaetano has been despoiled by marauders of all the jewels which had been presented to it by grateful devotees.

Miraculous virtue was attributed to the "bambino," and many people whose devout prayers murmured before the holy image had received the desired answer testified their gratitude for the spiritual or temporal blessings received by presenting gifts to adorn that statue. The full value of these donations is not accurately known, but it is estimated to be between $4,000 and $5,000.

STILL "PIRATES OF PENZANCE"

Alfred Bowling, master of the London steamer South America, wrecked recently off the Cornish coast, giving evidence at the Board of Trade inquiry at Newcastle said that the boat in which the crew escaped was hauled backwards and forwards between the ship and the shore by a rope.

During the night some Cornishmen cut the rope and stole it, and the witness and the mate then had to swim ashore to restore the rope. The master added that people from Penzance and other places stole things from the ship. "The instinct for piracy is as strong as ever down there," he concluded.

Making ONE Dollar Do the Work of Two

YOUR DOLLARS vary in value according as they vary in purchasing power.

THE MAN or woman who studies advertising is able, frequently, to make one dollar do the usual work of two.

THE EXPERIENCED reader of advertisements will always make a dollar command a premium, that is, make it buy more than the dollar of a non-reader of advertisements.

HOW MUCH "above par" are the dollars in your packet?

IT WILL depend on how closely you study the buying opportunities outlined in the store advertisements.

TRIBUTE TO KING EDWARD

Beautiful Monument to be Erected at Birmingham—Marble Statue of His Majesty

Rapid progress is being made with the colossal statue of King Edward in marble which is to be erected at Birmingham, the plaster model of which is now at Carrara. When the "pointing" is completed, that is, the stone hewn out to the rough shape of the plaster model, both will be shipped to London, and the sculptor himself will start upon the finishing stage and a few months should see the statue complete.

In addition to the heroic figure of his late Majesty, the monument will include three very beautiful pieces of sculpture mounted upon the massive pedestal upon which the statue is to stand. These will be in bronze, and will include two symbolical pieces representing Peace and Education, the third being the figure of St. George.

These three works are finished in the clay, and are to be sent to the bronze founders to be cast. The group "Education" represents a man and a boy. The man has his right arm around the child's body, whilst with his left he holds a scroll upon which the boy sees written instructive matter. The boy holds in his hands the model of a bridge (engineering), there are books indicating science, and art is represented by a folio and palette, etc.

"Peace," the corresponding figure, is a female with her left arm around a globe, across which doves are seen flying. The right arm holds up the drapery which covers the lower part of the figure, and in the folds of this and in her lap she has abundance of roses, symbolising the joy of peace. These roses are seen repeating themselves round the foot of the globe and through the fingers of the hand caressing the globe. The figure is seated in a decorative chair with arms reaching high up the back, and on the top of each arm are small groups representing "Sympathy" and "Understanding."

On the face of the pedestal will be the bronze figure of St. George and the Dragon, over which an elaborately designed wrought crown appears.

"I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, of the so-called "cures" on the market. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost."

DEMONSTRATION FARMING

To Show That Mixed Farming Can be Made Pay Handsomely

To encourage mixed farming in the prairie provinces and prove to the farmers generally that this class of agriculutral industry can b made to pay handsomely, and incidentally to start every farmer in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba along the line of mixed farming, the Canadian Pacific Irrigation Department has inaugurated a campaign of locating mixed farming demonstration farms in the three prairie provinces. These farms have already been located. Work has commenced on the breaking of the ground and building of houses, and in Calgary, Mr. James Hart, superintendent of improved farms for the C.P.I. announced that ten of the new demonstration farms would be located in Alberta, ten in Saskatchewan and five in Manitoba. The International Railway Company has applied to the government for permission to dam the Fraser River near Yale, B.C., to develop power for the operation of tramways on the lower mainland. United States capital is behind the project.

SPOKE TOO SOON

"You ought to have seen Mr. Marshall when he called upon Dolly the other night," remarked Johnny to his sister's young man, who was taking tea with the family. "I tell you he looked fine a-sitting there alongside of her with his arm——"

"Johnny!" gasped his sister, her face the color of a boiled lobster.

"Well, so he did," persisted Johnny. "He had his arm——"

"John!" screamed the mother, frantically.

"Why," whined the boy. "I was—"

"John," said his father, sternly "leave the room!"

And Johnny left, crying as he went: "I was only going to say that he had his army clothes on."

DOTTED PONGEE

One of the prettiest pattern dresses seen this year is pongee in natural tone dotted in emerald green. The design is shown above and the embroidery used for trimming is done on pongee in same shade of green as dots. Green velvet makes the girdle, which finishes in a large bow at back with long ends. The design is simple but decidedly chic.

THE ENGAGEMENT RING

A Girl Must be Careful and Not Display It Too Much

It is a grand moment for both the girl and the man when he slips the little gold and jewelled circle round her third finger. It means so much to both of them—perhaps even more to the girl than the man, because her sex sets greater store by the ring that binds, and she has more sentiment. And, moreover, although the couple may have been mutually engaged without a ring, that small emblem of a plighted troth becomes very sacred to a girl. A very great deal must happen before either she returns it or he demands it back.

It is very natural that a girl should be very proud of her engagement ring, but she should be careful not to make it too obtrusive. Even her best friends will get weary of her continual "Oh, isn't it a beautiful ring—and isn't he perfect?" The praise of a man and his token of promise is all very well in moderation, but it can be and often is carried to excess.

A girl can be just as proud and delighted with her ring by a quiet pride and joy as by continually demonstrating her pleasure before her friends.

Nor is it good taste for a man to ask his acquaintances how they like the ring. They are bound to say it meets with their entire approval, whether they think so or not! Courtesy cannot say otherwise.

With regard to the ring, so it is with other little things during the 'happy days' of courtship. An engaged couple should be careful not to sing one another's praises too much to their relatives, friends and acquaintances. Let people find out for themselves the sterling qualities of both. Real friends will be quick enough to appreciate their good points, but an engaged couple may rest assured—and eat it with humble pie—that real true friends will find out faults in them that are entirely unsuspected by the owners! But this need not trouble lovers. Everyone knows that it is often the case that it is because of people's faults that they are dear to us.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

A Good Idea to Keep Lime in the Pantry

Flour absorbs all odors, so keep it closely covered.

A Small Box of Lime kept in the pantry will help to make the air quite dry and pure. It should be renewed occasionally.

Before putting Milk into the saucepan, boil rapidly a few spoonfuls of water (enough to just cover the bottom of the pan) and it will never burn, however fierce the fire.

Where there are several children constantly in need of new shoes, the one who has to provide them will do well to try this: Cover soles of shoes with three or four coats of copal varnish, and they will never need resoling.

The Really Best Method of cleaning mirrors and windows is to rub them with a paste of whiting and water When this dries polish with dry chamois and remove the powder. A little alcohol in cold water also gives a brilliant polish. Soapsuds should never be used.

It is not generally known that slices of lemon put into the copper when boiling clothes will make them beautifully white and take all the stains out of pocket-handkerchiefs and children's aprons. Cut the lemon, with the rind, into slices, and let it remain in the boiler till the clothes are ready to come out.

In Spite of all the remedies offered for driving away ants from the house, the only sure way seems to be to catch and kill them. Set in the closets plates coated thick with soft lard, with little sticks leaning against them for the ants to climb. When filled, drop into a pan of boiling water, and then set the plate as before.

To remove Grease or oil spots from clothing, especially light suits as worn by cyclists and tourists, mix a little fuller's earth into a paste, spread it over the affected part and allow the same to dry thoroughly. In doing so it draws and absorbs the grease. Then take a stiff brush, which will quickly remove the dried earth, and the result will be pleasing, and far more satisfactory than most other methods.

Painted Wood, panellings, and wainscoting can be rapidly and effectually cleaned with potato-water. Put half a dozen tubers into a pail, having previously peeled, washed and grated them. oPur a gallon or two of fresh water over them and let them stand for half an hour; then strain and use with a house flannel. No scrubbing will be needed, but another flannel with clean water must be used for rinsing purposes. This is good for any kind of wood.

A BEAUTY HINT

If you want to make your face look thinner, arrange the hair loosely, but not allowing it to flop forward. This is much better than straining it back. Do not cover the head with curls, as this only increases the size. A neat, close arrangement of the hair at the back is better.

A DRESS HINT

Always have some arrangement on your dress to give length by a downward line. For instance, if you make yourself one of the little seamless blouses, have a piece of perpendicular embroidery let into the front, or slit the blouse a little on one side and insert one of those pretty white muslin frills. Never have a blouse and skirt of different colors. This is a most important rule if you want to look slimmer. Blouse, skirt and waistbelt should always be the same shade.

A BACHELOR'S WISDOM

A perfect duty is to exercise gentleness and cheerfulness.

The sweetest music of all is the sound of a voice when it speaks words of tenderness and comfort to a friend.

True wealth is of the heart, not of the hand.

We would all do well to perform kindnesses when they are needed, and not to put them off until they are of no use.

Those in search of bright rays in the midst of storm and stress usually find them.

Strive to be what you would have your friends become.

Marking time leaves no mark on time.

Never let the burdens of to-morrow break the back of to-day.

PINK AND WHITE ROBE

What could be daintier for a young girl than a frock of white dotted swiss with embroidered designs in pink? Above model shows the way of construction with the girdle and rosette of pink satin ribbon. These daintily embroidered robe frocks come in all the pretty light colors and are surprisingly reasonable in price.

FIGHTING THE FLIES

How to Minimize the Nuisance These Pests Cause

A recent issue of The Woman's World gives a list of rules for dealing with the nuisance that it would be well if all householders would read, use, and remember. The list is as follows:

Keep the flies away from the sick, especially those ill with contagious diseases. Kill every fly that strays into the sick-room His body is covered with disease germs.

Do not allow decaying material of any sort to accumulate on or near your premises.

All refuse which tends in any way to fermentation, such as bedding straw, paper waste and vegetable matter, should be disposed of or covered with lime or kerosene oil.

Screen all food.

Keep all receptacles for garbage carefully covered and the cans cleaned or sprinkled with oil or lime.

Keep all stable manure in vault or pit, screened or sprinkled with lime, oil, or other cheap preparation.

See that your sewage system is in good order, that it does not leak, is up to date, and not exposed to flies.

Pour kerosene into the drains.

Cover food after a meal, burn or bury all table refuse.

Screen all food exposed for sale.

Screen all windows and doors, especially the kitchen and dining-room.

Burn pyrethrum powder in the house to kill the flies.

Don't forget, if you see flies, their breeding place is nearby filth. It may be behind the door, under the table or in the cuspidor.

If there is no dirt and filth there will be no flies.

If there is a nuisance in the neighborhood, write at once to the health department.

It is far better that the beauty of the carpet should fade than that your face should bear the marks of a sympathetic wear and tear. You can easily buy a new carpet when one of your good husband's numerous ships comes in in the near future, but you cannot buy a new face.

Dozens of the smartest suits this summer have the black and white striped collar. This suit could be pretty in either black or white serge.

WALNUT CREAMS

Take one pound of shelled walnuts, the white of one egg, one pound of icing sugar, and a tablespoonful of water. Add the water to the white of egg. Stir in sufficient sugar to make a very stiff paste, and flavor with a few drops of vanilla. Mould into round balls the size of a small marble. Divide the kernels of the nuts into two, and, when you have formed the balls, press half a nut on each side. Leave them several hours in a cool place to harden.

WORLD WITHOUT WOMEN

What a Dreary Place It Would be Says the Bachelor

What would the world be like if there were no women in it?

If the world's population were cut down by half, by the immediate abolition of women, it is certain that civilisation would develop on somewhat different lines from those it is travelling along at present. In fact, a very few years would show all sorts of curious consequences.

Daring women who have penetrated to the outskirts of civilisation, to places where the face of a white woman is scarcely ever seen, are often amused by the curious effect they have on their hosts. Faces unwashed for weeks retire bashfully for a while, to return several shades lighter in color. Beards which have sprouted almost unnoticed are guiltily shaved. Straggly, matted hair is cropped to a decent shortness.

It is a curious fact that men living in the wilds of the earth never realise how far they have slipped from the decent, cleanly ways of civilisation till the presence of a woman reminds them of the fact.

That relapse would imperceptibly take place all over the civilised earth. We should not notice it, but the instincts of personal cleanliness and neatness would steadily disappear. Psychologists declare that, however ingrained they seem, these instincts are in men entirely artificial habits. In women they are more of a true instinct—women, being the physically weaker sex, having had to do less of the rough work of the world. Set a woman for a few years on a desert island, and she will devise some sort of hairpin, and do her hair daily. A masculine Robinson Crusoe will return a figure to amuse the most unkempt of tramps.

In fact, in a civilisation without women, the world of men would cease to think itself in need of a daily toilet.

Another big change would be in manners. Speech would be less polite and more brutal. The lubricating oil of courtesy would be removed from daily life, and the world would be a much worse place for the weak than it is now. It is the civilising effect of woman that has shown the other sex that brutality is a matter for contempt, not for pride.

The world would go to the strong hand again. The civilisation of science and invention and manufacture would advance as rapidly as ever, but the fined side of it would steadily decay. So it is not only to sew its buttons on and wash its face that the world needs a woman; it needs her to shake a reproving finger when the savage peeps out.

THE ENGAGED GIRL

Thinks she has accomplished her life-work.

Starts a collection of handkerchiefs and doyleys.

Spends seven-eighths of her time in the shops.

Looks down with pity upon heart-free companions.

Begins to tell her mother how a house should be run.

Is the sweetest personification of egotism imaginable.

Thinks all her old admirers are dying of broken hearts.

Becomes absent-minded and leaves her left hand ungloved.

Promises every girl that she'll be one of the bridesmaids.

Imports for the quarter, exclusive of coin and bullion, totalled $152,975,545, as against $117,149,627, and exports $76,266,776, as against $54,624,400 for the first quarter of 1911.

NEW YORK LADY CURED BY RESTORATONE TABLETS.

Was so weak, fainting was a common occurrence.

407 West 19th Street,
New York City.

"For years I suffered from inward trouble until I became a nervous wreck. I grew thin and pale and as my appetite and sleep became very poor I became much weaker and fainting was a common occurrence. After giving up all hope I was impressed with the great praise given RESTORATONE TABLETS and decided to try a box. I have never regretted it, for I positively felt better after taking these tablets only one week. At the end of two months I felt as if a miracle had taken place for all my troubles had disappeared and I was enjoying good health. I cannot say too much in praise of RESTORATONE TABLETS. Should any girl or woman in ill health wish to write to me they are at liberty to do so." G. Copeland.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS IN SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

SEPT. 8, 1912.

(Copyright, 1911, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D. D.)

The Mission of the Twelve. Matt. ix:35—x:15; x:40—xi:1.

Golden Text—He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me. Matt. x:40.

1.—Verse 35—If Jesus were to come to the world again to preach under present day conditions would he confine himself to pastorate or would he travel about preaching, as he did before? Why?

2.—Jesus' mission and that of his apostles was to heal alike the bodies and souls of men. Why should that not also be the mission of all Christian workers to-day?

3.—Verse 36—What measure of importance must we give to "compassion," or heartfelt pity, for the unsaved masses in order to bringing about their salvation?

4.—Verses 37-38—What is the evidence to-day that "the harvest truly is plenteous" and that "the laborers are few?"

5.—In what way can you demonstrate that prayer will increase the number of missionaries and hasten the salvation of the world?

6.—What can the churches and we as individuals do more than we are doing to bring about the salvation of sinners?

7.—x:1—Did Jesus give the same power in those days to all his disciples as he did to the twelve?

8.—What is the limit of the power which Christ gives to-day to ministers and other active Christians?

9.—What evidence can you give, if any, that there are those to-day which have the power to cure disease without medicine?

10.—What evidence can you give that all Christians have the power and do cast out unclean spirits?

11.—Verses 2-4—Can you repeat from memory the names of the twelve apostles?

12.—Who became the outstanding members of the apostolic company?

13.—Verses 5-6—Why were the twelve forbidden to work among the Gentiles and to confine themselves to the house of Israel?

14.—Apart from other reasons, what wise diplomacy was there in getting the Jews to accept Christ before preaching him to the Gentiles?

15.—Verses 7-8—What is the best news the world has ever heard?

16.—What has the preaching of the gospel accomplished for the world? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

17.—Apart from the miraculous curing of the sick, the deaf, the dumb, the blind and the insane, what has Christianity done and what is it still doing for these unfortunates?

18.—Verses 9-10—Would Jesus have given them the same instructions, to take no money with them to pay their expenses, if he had sent them to a Gentile nation?

19.—Verses 11-15—Why does the obligation still rest upon us to liberally support the gospel with our means?

20.—Verses 40-xi:1—What sure rewards come to us through receiving the messengers of Christ?

GROUSE SHOOTING

A Sport of Rare Interest in Southern Vancouver Island

Blue grouse shooting is full of surprises. The country hunted over may be at once easy to traverse, or hard and even dangerous to negotiate; the shooting may be the reverse of difficult in some places and under some circumstances, and at at other times may present startling contrasts calling for all of a crack shot's experience and skill. And it is this infinite variety which lends such a peculiar fascination to the pursuit of the birds.

All over the southern portion of Vancouver Island the blue grouse are to be found, and in September the broods are seen through the lowlands and along the roads, almost as tame as branyard fowl. As the season advances they begin to edge a little further up the foothills and evince a trifle more suspicion of the approach of men or dogs. As in the later months, they will still take to a tree at times, staring stupidly at intruders and offering tempting marks to the pothunter. One of the uncertainties of this kind of sport is this same propensity to "tree" on the part of the birds. Your dogs may be fairly slobbering with excitement at a particularly "birdy" stretch of country, and you may be dreaming of doubles, left-quarters and straightaways, and all the while no birds are getting up. As a matter of fact, they may be safely perched some hundreds of feet above in the tops of cloud-kissing Douglas firs, where you cannot possibly see them. The scent may be two minutes old, and fresh on the noses of the mystified dogs. The prospects may be simply great. And yet—often and often, you draw a blank in ideal covers and are compelled to acknowledge yourself beaten after having nearly twisted your head off peering into the surrounding firs and delivering yourself of your private opinion of such "low-down," though high-roosting birds.

Travelling in the blue grouse country means mountain-climbing quite a good bit of the time. Not merely up steep foothills, but cliff-climbing. Sometimes dangerous, sometimes not. But always the need of sound lungs and the sturdiest of underpinning. No man with poor legs can hope to do much in the blue grouse shooting ordinarily. He may occasionally have the good fortune to run into a covey of birds on the lower levels, but generally speaking, he must do the "Excelsior" act to reach the choice spots and keep on climbing. The character of the country varieties from almost bare rock benches and ledges to steep slopes lined with fallen logs and grown up with ferns, "sallal" or bullpines of the sapling order, and all this ripped in every direction with deep or shallow gulches, holes, gullies and dry waterways. There are thickets which you have to literally bore your way through, too.

Of course, in these thickets you are likely to flush ruffed grouse (called here the willow grouse) and you will be told that no blue grouse will take cover there. But just to lend a spice of contradiction to this theory you sometimes do find the blue grouse there, even when you imagine the dog is standing on point where the ruffed grouse would most likely be hiding. These are exceptions to the rule, but they occur.

Blue grouse will vary from eight to twenty-five birds in a covey; usually from six to twelve or fifteen birds. They lie well to a good dog, but will sometimes skulk about and require some "roading" before they are found. Some shots afford ridiculously easy marks, and yet their lumbering rise and awkward first flight sometimes puzzle the novice at this sort of shooting. The clean, crisp flight of the ruffed grouse or quail is easier to some men than the more labored and irregular flight of the blue grouse. Their flight varies, too, and some birds show a surprising agility in darting over rocky ledges and putting trees behind them and the line of discharge.—Saturday Sunset.

Saves one ton in seven

Figure up your annual coal bill, divide it by seven, and you have the amount the Hecla Furnace will save you every year. ¶ The steel-ribbed fire-pot does it. Adding steel ribs to the fire-pot increases its radiating surface three times more than is possible by any other method. The steel-ribbed fire-pot heats the air quicker. It sends the heat through the registers instead of up the chimney. ¶ Examine the Hecla. Compare it with other Furnaces. ¶ You will find every feature that makes for convenience and ease of operation. But the Hecla is the only one that has the Steel-ribbed Fire-pot—the fire-pot which saves thousands of users one ton of coal in seven.

HECLA FURNACE
No Gas or Dust

Section of fire-pot showing ribs of steel plate which save 1 ton in 7.

Burns wood as well as coal.

And this furnace cannot possibly leak gas or dust. The joints, usually bolted or cemented, are fused in the Hecla in a perfectly tight joint. Time and service cannot loosen the Fused Joint. The fusing welds the Hecla Radiator into one piece.

Our Booklet "Comfort & Health" should be in the hands of everyone who has a heating problem to solve. It will be sent free of charge.

THE HOCK SHOP SIGN.

The gilded balls, the sign of pawnbrokers, are the pills on the shield of the Medici family. Its founder, Cosmo, named after St. Casmo, the patron of physicians, joined the guild of the doctors (Medici,) as every Florentine enrolled himself in one of these charitable societies. The medical family became great money lenders and their shield with the "balls" or "pills" was placed over the door of their agents.—New York Press.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Vol. 46 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1912. No. 109

To Whom It May Concern

The teachers at Ann Street School are especially anxious that all the boys and girls who are going to attend will be present the first day.

As this is a new School District we cannot organize properly until we get a list of the names of the pupils and the class to which each belong.

The parents will kindly attend to this matter by having their children present on Monday morning, 16th.

Man Uses Carving Knife on Woman

IRWIN, Pa., Sept. 7.—"Your cooking ain't as good as in Margel's boarding house in Hemlock Row, and I guess we'll go back." This remark was directed to Mrs. Joseph Lawrence in her home in North Irwin by John Michwovic, one of the three boarders, seated with her husband at the dinner table.

A fight between Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence on one side and Michowic, John Paul and Brody Beach on the other followed. Beach, it is alleged, picked up a carving knife. Mrs. Lawrence fell unconscious with three knife wounds in the breast, and the men, thinking her dead, fled.

Later they were captured and held for court. The woman is in a serious condition.

Purchase a Claim of 105 Millions

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—It is announced that an American syndicate, with headquarters here, has purchased the long standing Manning and MacIntosh claim against the Government of Mexico, and will press a demand for payment. The claim, with interest, now amounts to $105,190,000.

The Manning and MacIntosh claim was originally British. It was the subject of diplomatic negotiations between the Mexican Government and the Government of Great Britain in the reign of Queen Victoria, and the British Government made a naval demonstration off Vera Cruz in 1863 to support a demand for its liquidation. The President of Mexico appointed a commission, which after seven years rendered a report in favor of Manning and MacIntosh.

Former Vocalist's Wild Career

PETERBOROUGH, Sept. 9.—"The remains of an ill-spent life," declared Agnes Gibson, reminisently as she waited the arrival of the cab that was to convey her to the County gaol. Stage struck at the age of 13, a short but successful career before the footlights, a dizzy whirl at the apex of the downward grade, and a probable prima donna was lost to the teatrical world. That in brief is but a fleeting glance into the life of the sixty-eight year old woman, who in an unwavering voice, denounced herself as a human derelict to Chief of Police Thompson, at the Police Station, yesterday, where she had been incarcerated during the day as a result of her intoxicated condition.

Just before leaving the station, the unfortunate woman begged for a pinch of snuff, "Do you use snuff?" interrogated a Constable. "Yes!" replied Agnes Gibson, "that's one of my propensities. I possess a germ of every vice," she added, and the faint resemblence of a smile that partly lit up her face for a brief moment, was quickly superseded by a paroxysm of grief. "Oh! it's horrible to look at," she exclaimed at the same time throwing herself against the steel bars of the cell, that had but a short time before shut her out from the outside world.

"Are you going to send me away in the patrol?" she inquired, at the same time casting a furtive glance at the chief, then as if some dreadful apparition had risen up before her, again burst forth with the Shakesperian quotation of "Oh, why would I live." With a fervent "God bless you all" she was led away to the waiting cab that stood without.

Agnes Gibson, who was arrested, while in a helpless condition, was remanded to the County Gaol, where she will remain until arrangements for her deportation have been decided upon.

BELLEVILLE NOW HAS A "GREAT WHITE WAY"

The citizen who, emerging from one of Belleville's dimly-lighted side streets, either east or west of the river, passes on to and follows Bridge Street, might well imagine, upon reaching the two blocks between Front and Church Streets, that he had stumbled upon one of the "white ways" of the great cities, so brilliant are the lights which line the street. The Trenton Electric and Water Company have for some time had a number of beautiful lamps to the east of Pinnacle Street, and now the city Gas Department have entered into competition with a number of brilliant incandescent (Humphrey Invertible) gas globes to the westward of Pinnacle Street, also on Bridge Street, which are a great credit to the Gas Department.

Both of these displays have been greatly admired, and the question as to which is superior is being debated by citizens.

Ottawa Man Tries Suicide

Frank Hensel Fished Out of a Detroit Fountain by Police.

DETROIT, Sept. 8.—Determined to end his life by drowning, Frank Hensel of Ottawa, Ont., jumped into a fountain on Washington boulevard, opposite the Hotel Cadillac, yesterday, in the presence of numerous guests of the hotel and pedestrians on Michigan Avenue. Hensel held his head under water several times, until those watching him thought he would surely drown, and finally the police were notified. The patrol wagon was sent to the fountain and the officers attempted to rescue Hensel.

Every time an officer started after him, Hensel waded over to the other side and put his head under water. Every method known to the resourceful police officers was tried, but in vain. Finally the officers sent the patrol waggon back to the police barn to get a long pike pole, with which they had no trouble in fishing Hensel out of the fountain He was locked up at the Central Station on a charge of disturbing the peace, but was later transferred to St. Mary's Hospital, as the police surgeon decided that he is mentally unbalanced. Hensel refused to give any information about himself, other than to admit that he hailed from Ottawa. He is forty years old and well-dressed.

Man Was Drowned With Hands Tied

LINDSAY, Sept. 8.—The body of William Morrison, of this town, was found this afternoon in the River Scugog near the Grand Trunk Railway iron bridge. Morrison was a clerk in A. L. Campbell's grocery, had been granted a two weeks' vacation, and should have resumed duty some days ago. When found his hands were tied, but everything points to suicide. He was 20 years of age. Dr. Blanchard, coroner, after careful enquiry, considered an inquest unnecessary. The dead man is survived by two sisters and a widowed mother.

Enormous Traffic in The Sault Canals

SAULT STE. MARIE, Sept. 8—For the third time this season all previous records for one month's traffic through the canals at Sault Ste. Marie have been broken. The volume of freight carried through the waterways in August was 10,852,825 short tons. It is also the third month this season that freight traffic through the canals has exceeded 10,000,000 tons, a mark never attained in any previous season.

The record established in August compares with 10,781,159 tons in July, 19,747,159 tons in June, 8,548,812 tons in August, 1910. The vast increase for the month is almost wholly due to the great gain in volume of eastbound freight, although the westbound movement of traffic shows a slight increase over the amount handled in the same month of the two preceding years.

His Name is in His Eyes

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 7.—Physicians at the Jefferson Medical College are attempting to explain the phenomena of two initials constantly mirrored in the retina of the eyes of John Dugan, two years old, of this city. The initials, each a quarter of an inch, are those of the name decided upon by the boys' parents before he was born. That name was John Dugan, the one the child now bears.

In the middle of his right eye, as if embedded in the iris by the hand of a fantastical master surgeon, is a reflection of "J" in quarter-inch type. In the left eye is similarly the other initial, "D."

When the baby was born the initials were plainly visible in his eyes. John Dugan is now more than two years old and his initials are still there.

The child's eyesight is perfect and his health robust. His mind and conduct are normal.

Colborne Man Killed on Railway

A very sad accident, which proved fatal, occurred at Colborne station on Monday evening about 11 o'clock. It appears that George Matthews, son of Mr. Frank Matthews, of Lakeport, was jumping from a train when he stumbled, fell and rolled until his legs were across the track, and both feet, just above the ankles, were cut off. He was taken to the Cobourg Hospital, accompanied by Dr. Brown of Colborne, and with Drs. Ivey and Ferris he was treated and made as comfortable as possible. But the shock was so great that after lingering until Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock death ended his sufferings.

Deceased was about 23 years old, and was a cooper by trade, and was only married last July to a Miss Jessie Duff.

Supposed Dead Man Has Come to Life

ALBANY, Sept. 7.—"Please scratch my name off the death list," was the gist of a communication received today by Dr. Eugene H. Porter, state commissioner of health, from John M. Auringer, of Detroit, Mich.

According to the state health department records the body of a man drowned in the Erie canal at De Witt, in May, 1911, was identified as Auringer by his daughter and two brothers.

Auringer had disappeared from his home in Detroit shortly before the drowned body was discovered.

The writer made no explanation of his disappearance but stated that he convinced his relatives that he was "very much alive."

Changes in the British Admiralty

LONDON, Sept. 8.—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in continuance of his plans for the reform of the navy, to-day announces further administrative changes. The main feature is the allotment to each Lord of the Admiralty of specific duties which are precisely defined and which correspond to the qualifications of the respective Lords. These are: First Sea Lord and Admiral of the Fleet, Vice-Admiral Sir Francis Bridgeman-Bridgeman; Second Sea Lord, Vice-Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg; Third Sea Lord, Rear-Admiral Charles John Briggs; Fourth Sea Lord Captain William C. Pakenham, and Civil Lord, George Lambert, M. P.

Several lower deck reforms, mainly in the direction of the lightening of punishments, are announced.

The whole reorganization aims, like Mr. Churchill's other reforms, at running the navy on business lines.

THIS COW SWALLOWS DYNAMITE, THEN DIES

Loaded With Explosive Bossie Succumbs to Severe Attack of Indigestion

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 7.—A cow of broad grastronomic tastes owned by Archie Crumrine found eight sticks of dynamite in her pasture, contemplatively swallowed them and then regretted it.

Crumrine discovered Bossie desperately ill and had decided to shoot her to end her misery, when he noticed the dynamite was missing. He guessed the truth and changed his mind about shooting the cow.

Instead he cautiously led her to a distant field, tethered her and ran At a safe distance he stood guard and awaited developments. Bossie did not explode, but in two hours she died as a result of her dietary experiment.

Strong Indications of Brutal Murder

OSHAWA Sept. 8.—The top portion of the skull of Mrs. John Bateman the aged woman who was found dead in her burning home on Thursday morning will likely be put in as an exhibit at the inquest to be held by Coroner D. S. Hoig here on Thursday evening.

As the authorities proceed with the investigation into the suspicious case, indications point more and more strongly to murder of a most horrible and brutal type.

John Bateman, husband of the dead woman, who is held in the local jail on a charge of doing grievous bodily harm to his wife, maintains an attitude of stolid unconcern.

Blows of Axe Are Evident

That Mrs. Bateman was killed by repeated blows on the head with an axe, it is claimed, can be established beyond question, distinct marks of axe wounds are said to have shown on the woman's head. On the right side a deep slash was inflicted; in the top of the skull it is said a long gaping hole will be shown corresponding in shape to the blade of an axe, and the whole back of the head was smashed like an egg shell.

Braved Revolvers to Get Housebreakers

MONTREAL, Sept. 7.—In a running fight with robbers in Jurors Street last night, Lieut. Savard, of the Central Police Station, narrowly escaped being shot. The thieves were armed with revolvers, and as soon as they discovered that they were being pursued by the police they took to their heels and carried on a running battle, firing back at the policemen.

Lieut. Savard, who was closely followed by Sergeant Gagnon and two or three police officers, never lost sight of the men, in spite of the fact that the street was filled with people, who joined in the exciting chase. Just as the prisoners were about to enter a dark alley, they were captured by the officers and taken to the police headquarters.

They turned out to be members of a notorious gang that have been operating in Montreal during the past week. Their pals, who were arrested yesterday were John Murphy, alias John Morin; John Fitzgerald, alias Charlie Curlier.

The men captured last night turned out to be Arthur Asking, alias Arthur Esking, and Walter Burke. They were trying to dispose of top coats, boots and shoes and hats when the police were notified. It only took the officers a few minutes to arrive on the spot, when the battle commenced.

After the prisoners had been locked in the cells the officials of the Freedman Company Limited, St. Helen St., were notified that the police headquarters had been filled with ready-to-wear clothing. The officials of the firm hurried to the station and identified thirty-two coats. The booty included two sets of double harness, boots and shoes, hats and caps, and gents' furishings of every description.

Burke is charged with being a "dope fiend" and having cocaine in his possession, and being implicated in the robbery of the harness. Asking, alias Esking is charged with house-breaking and robbery. The police claim that the prisoners are active members of an organized gang of crooks, and they declare they are well known in police circles. The proprietors of the stores that have been entered and robbed have been notified to call at the city hall for the purpose of identifying the goods.

TWENTY WANT DIVORCES

OTTAWA, Sept. 6.—Applications for divorce so far at next session of parliament indicate that Toronto will again hold the record for matrimonial discords. Twenty new applications have already been received and out of that number eleven are from the Queen City. Of the remainder one each is from Hamilton, Trenton, Oakville and Napanee. No other Ontario cities or towns are represented.

PARADE OF BLIND.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—Trafalgar Square has never seen a stranger demonstration than that which took place to-day, when a procession of the blind marched thither to ventilate their grievances. Many escorts who could see accompanied and steered the sightless ones, who walked with their arms linked.

The speakers, who included two blind men, urged the Government to establish technical schools and national workshops for capable blind persons, and to grant pensions to incapable ones.

Mercantile Cruisers To Link the Empire

LONDON, Sept. 8.—In view of the steady rise in shipping shares and fresh projects for linking up the Empire by means of subsidized merchantmen, convertible into cruisers in time of war, it is interesting to note that two shipping companies, the Allan Line and C. P. R., are introducing changes in the design of their new ships, which will be placed in commission early next year, wires the Liverpool correspondent of the C. A. P. Four new Atlantic and Pacific liners will possess wholly new features. They will have what is known as the cruiser stern, which has hitherto been peculiar to warships. One of these vessels, the Empress of Russia has already been launched, and the other three will be ready for service in May next. The C. P. R. is also credited with a scheme for the construction of a fleet of liners capable of doing twenty four knots and covering the distance between Liverpool and Halifax in less than four and a half days.

In shipping circles it is understood that the equipment of these liners was one of the subjects discussed by Premier Borden and the Canadian Ministers while in London.

LAURIER OPENS TOUR

Liberal Leader Addresses Followers at Marieville.

He Says He Will Stand on the Merits of His Naval Scheme, But Hopes His Tongue Will Wither in His Mouth Before He Stirs Up Race Prejudice in Order to Gain His Point.

Montreal, Sept. 9.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier opened his Quebec campaign at Marieville Saturday afternoon, speaking to an audience of several thousand people from many parts of the County of Rouville.

The veteran Liberal chief touched on the marriage issue, the navy and other matters that divide the people, but his chief weapon was sarcasm, holding up his Nationalist-Conservative opponents to ridicule.

He was ready to spit on his hands and start over, and was prouder of his defeat than his adversaries had cause to be over their victory. The eyes of the people had been opened since they had seen the idols set up on September 21 last so rudely shattered. "Laurier is out of power, and you have Monk and Nantel," said Sir Wilfrid, while the crowd roared. "They said they'd restore the separate schools or smash everything the moment they came to speak, but all they could smash was their own province. Monk announced that he was riveted to his job and that the school question was settled by Laurier."

Would the result have been the same if Monk had talked that way before the election? asked Sir Wilfrid, who then took up the Lancaster marriage bill. He was not anxious to stir up a delicate question. Sir Allan Aylesworth had given the opinon that the question was for the provinces to deal with, and the Privy Council had agreed with him.

Regarding the navy, the Liberal chief said if he had listened to the voice of security he would not have touched it, but he would not have done his duty. Quebec did not see that a navy was necessary, but this country did not consist of Quebec alone. Did anyone say that the sea coasts of Canada were not to be protected? The navy question would remain with us, and he was too old to begin playing the demagogue now.

Continuing, Sir Wilfrid said:

"In a few years the naval question will agitate us no more than the question of who built the pyramids. We have been obliged to embark on a naval policy forced by our national development and by an obligation as a British nation. It is easy to talk of disemboweled babies and to sow terror among the people, but I disdain such methods. Let us talk with calm and with dignity. Nationalists declared that we must have no navy, Imperialists that we must have a purely Imperial one. Between the two we steered our course, a genuine Canadian and British one. We were beaten and the responsibility lies on other shoulders. We were defeated, but the question remains. Whatever is the policy of Mr. Borden I shall never raise my voice to start the war of prejudice, the hatred of the race. May my tongue wither in my mouth before I inaugurate the war of races in this country so blessed of heaven. No faltering, no exaggeration, no defiance, if we are true to our doctrine of old the country will prosper and our party triumph."

In terms of the utmost delicacy, the speaker referred to the reception being held in honor of the return of the Premier, and declared that, if he were connected with the municipal administration of Montreal or Quebec he would consider it a privilege to associate himself with those thus honoring the Right Hon. R. L. Borden. Though at the proper time and place he would fight the leader of the Government, he considered it his duty to give the latter all the respect which his position as Premier and the duly elected representative of a constitutional authority demanded.

The Liberals, said he, were never so united—in fact, they considered it an honor to have fallen in defence of the principles of which they had been the advocates prior to the setback of last September.

Died of Injuries.

Toronto, Sept. 9.—John Merrick, aged 55, of Uxbridge, died in the Westen Hospital at 5.30 yesterday afternoon, as a result of injuries received when he fell off a C.P.R. train at Gravenhurst on August 28.

Merrick was bound for the west to live with his son. As the train was passing through Gravenhurst, he fell off the rear end and sustained a fracture of the head, along with other injuries.

Motor Car Skidded.

Gloversville, N.Y., Sept. 9.—While driving a car a mile east of Fonda Saturday morning, and in attempting to make a reverse curve at high speed, W. W. Gale of New Haven, Conn., was instantly killed and his wife perhaps fatally injured, when the car struck a fence.

You are right, Alonzo. It is perfectly proper for a young man to wear a business suit when he calls on a girl—that is, if he means business.

Fatal Contact with Hanging Live Wire

LINDSAY, Sept. 8.—A distressing accident ccurred here on Friday evening just north of the town at the point at Distillery Creek where the Georgian Bay and Seaboard Rail way crosses the Grand Trunk line, when Robert Desmond, a young Englishman, was electrocuted by coming in contact with a hanging wire from the Light, Heat & Power Company's poles. The unfortunate man, in company with his brother and two other young men, were on their way to Lindsay from near Cambray, where they were employed by the Toronto Construction Company. They were walking along the Georgian Bay and Seaboard lines and when reaching the point where the G.T.P. runs underneath the quartette left the Seaboard route to take the G. T. R. track to town. While going down the embankment young Desmond's forehead touched a hanging live wire on the Light Heat & Power Company's poles. He uttered a scream and his associates thinking it was a joke did not at first pay any attention. However, they presently found that he was unconscious. Lindsay doctors were immediately sent for, but when they arrived the young man was dead.

Dr. Blanchard and the county constable took charge of the body and an investigation will be held.

GRAND TRUNK SYSTEM NEWS ITEMS

The contractors who will erect the new Grand Trunk Pacific hotel in Edmonton have arrived upon the scene of action with a considerable quantity of material and will start work immediately.

Mr. John Egger, the well known trapper and homesteader, who has just made the journey from Tete Jaune Cache to Fort George, the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific, in a dugout, reports that there are 25 moose to the square mile throughout the entire Fraser River valley. Along the river the banks show innumerable runways which the deer use to get to water. Fort George, Mr. Egger states, is a rapidly growing town with every prospect of becoming the centre of its district. There is a population of 500 or 600 people there at the present time and more are coming in rapidly.

During the month of July last six stations were completed on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific west of Winnipeg and work well advanced on seven others. In the first class are Mile Post 11, Alberta Coal Ranch, Resplendent, Dinant, Alpland, Trochu, and Yellow-head, while Miniota, Three Hills, Mile Post 34, Mile Post 25 and Mile Post 17, all on the Alberta Coal Branch, as well as Edwin and Riceton come under the second category.

What probably establishes a new record for real estate sales has just been made with the conclusion of the auction of Provincial Government lots in the Grand Trunk Pacific's Pacific terminus, Prince Rupert. During the first 45 minutes over $500,000 in sales was recorded. The total amount realized on 282 lots was just $1,191,860; the highest price obtained being $58,000 and the lowest $505. The auction was conducted on behalf of the Government by Mr. C. D. Rand of Vancouver, and an immense crowd was in Prince Rupert for the event.

Sir George Doughty of Grimsby, England, head of a new British fishing industry in Canada, is at present in Prince Rupert and states that in the near future his company would establish a great fishing centre on the Pacific coast. A large part of this development is being advanced on Queen Charlotte Islands and as time passes we will establish other locations for our business in the vicinity of Prince Rupert."

It is understood that when this Canadian project is fully developed the concern will launch out upon a similar scale in South Africa, Australia and Siberia, when it will be the biggest industry of its kind in the world. To Earl Grey, who is interested in it, is said to belong the credit of having suggested the establishment of a fishing industry in British Columbia.

You may run a railroad to water, but you can't be sure the stocks will pay dividends.

In the Evening

AFTER RARE ANIMALS

Two Naturalists Explored the Wilds of British Columbia and Alberta

Frederick K. Vreeland of Mountclair, N. J., and William P. Patterson of Milburn, N. J., visited the extreme northern parts of Alberta and British Columbia in the interests of the Smithsonian Institute of Washington, D.C. Their purpose was to determine the northern limit of the habitat of the Big Horn sheep of the rocky mountains; to ascertain if in the northern part of British Columbia the Big Horn and the Stone sheep occupied the same territory; and to capture specimens of both varieties, as also of white goat, mountain caribou, and brown bear. The two naturalists explored the mountain wilds on both sides of the Peace River, shooting such specimens as they desired and photographing the country. They got many photographs of wild life in its native haunts. The Canadian law which forbids the exportation of mountain sheep and goats and caribou was withdrawn at the request of the Smithsonian Institute. Mr. Vreeland hunted mountain sheep and goats in the Canadian Rockies several years ago and one of the finest specimens of the mountain goat to be found in America now adorns the walls of the Mountclair Athletic Club.

AN EXCELLENT COMEDY

Presented at the Grand On Monday.

The Kingston Whig of Tuesday last says:—

"Francis Wilson's great play, "The Bachelor's Baby," presented by the Colonial Theatre Co., Ltd., was the offering at the Grand on Labor Day matinee and night and it delighted two large audiences. Etienne Girardot, the original in Charley's Aunt," the man who made this ever popular play famous, has the leading role, that of "Tom" Beach, who has a terrible dislike for children, and he is surrounded by an exceptionally strong copany. The play is brimful of good, clean comedy, and at the same time tells a very interesting story—that of a man who looks upon children as a great nuisance, but who is eventually won over as a great friend of the little folks through love.

It is a play that strikes the heart of everyone in the audience. It is the kind that appeals to every theatregoer and goes to show the truth of the old saying that 'love will find a way,' and it did find a way for Tom Beach, when he was made guardian of his brothes's child. The story is capitally told in three acts.

Hugh Wynne, another English comedian, filled the part of the butler in splendid style. Another English actress, Helen E. Davidge, the granddaughter of the Davidge who was a prominent actor at the Drury Lane Theatre in London, Eng., played the role of the bachelor's aunt. She has usually had comic roles, but showed versatility by stepping into an emotional part which she filled splendidly. Baby Wilson in the part of the child was as cute and natural as could be. She has a lengthy speaking part, and excelled herself. Dorothy Turner, a Canadian girl, was charming in the role of "Winnifred West." All the other parts were capa y taken.

Although the Kingston engagement was the opening one of the season for the company, the play was given with a polished finish. Special mention is due the stage settings. The play is beautifully staged in fine taste, the furniture and all the equipment being carried by the company, not one piece of it being supplied by the local house. The entire outfit is new and with such a popular play, and a strong cast, the manager, F. H. Stevenson, should be assured of great success during the season.

Griffin's opera house, Wednesday, Sept. 11th. Prices 25c., 35c., 50c. 75c. and $1.00 Plan at Doyle's.

Outlook Better Now.

Winnipeg, Sept. 9.—The prospects for harvesting this week seem to be excellent. There have been local storms, one of which hit Manitoba on Saturday night but on Sunday the weather proved to be of a fine drying character and helped along the optimism.

Flax will be a late feature in the harvest in Manitoba but given dry weather, the grain crop will be good.

Saskatchewan also reports quick drying after the rains and the binders ready for business and harvest hands are ready and crops heavy.

REV. J. R. SERSON

KINGSTON, September, 7.—Rev. J. R. Serson, M. A., retired Rector of Gananoque, died on Saturday morning. Rev. Mr. Serson was a graduate of Trinity University, Toronto. He was at Thamesville for several years when the late Archbishop Lewis made him Rector of Gananoque. He had to retire this year on account of serious illness. He suffered dreadfully with cancer. Everything was done that could be done to help him. He was a devoted churchman and was faithful in the discharge of his duties. He married Miss McDonald who survives him. His widow and small children have the sympathy of the community. The funeral of Mrs. Short took place this afternoon from St. George's Cathedral Mrs. Shortt was the widow of a Clergyman. Dean Bidwell assisted by Canon Loucks, Rural Dean Dobbs and Rev. J. O. Crisp conducted the service.

The Culebra Cut Blocks Digging

In the great Culebra cut of the Panama Canal, the greatest engineering task ever undertaken, nine miles long and 587 feet deep, it is found that the rock is of a nature that after exposure to the air it crumbles into dust and worse than that, the sides of the hill are on the slide into the cut.

In August Blackwood's Magazine, Charles Paxton Markham has written a descriptive article on the Panama Canal, which sounds a warning note.

According to Mr. Markham the whole of the canal calls for the excavation of 182 millions of cubic yards, of which 52 millions still remain in the big cut, against which the whole force is concentrated, and in this connection, that is, the Culebra cut, he says: "With a depth of cutting so vast it will be readily understood that difficulties should be experienced with the slopes. The deeper the cutting, the more accentuated does this become, because great slips are continually pouring down into the bottom, and the ground is developing deep cracks a mile away, showing that the whole of the hills are on the slide. How deep these cracks may go, or how far back, is a matter of conjecture, but all are terribly afraid of the serious nature of the trouble that lies at this point. Steam shovels are now taking the top off the hills so as to relieve the pressure as far as possible in the bottom, but so far with little or no effect. There are soft layers of clay which allow the rock to slide. There are also one or two huge faults which break up and disintegrate the measures. Time will prove the truth or falsehood of the numerous theories abroad, but for many years it is extremely doubtful if the canal can be kept open without constant dredging and expense. And it is very probable that the cutting will be nearly five miles across at the top before the sides cease to run in, if they ever do, for the rock in the bottom cut of all turns to mud in a short time when in contact with water and the wash of the propellers will suck this mud away.."

If the above quotation says anything it says the sides of the cut will slide, and are sliding. It suggests that the sides may come in in a rush that is, the whole mountain may come after the manner of slides which are described as follows:—

"The slides take place without any warning, and after a train of wagons, shovels, etc. are swept down the cutting, but so far few lives have been actually lost though many narrow escapes have been experienced."

Free Ontarios

A few days ago The Intelligencer gratuitously gave publicity to a circular issued by the owners of The Ontario, offering that journal free to those who would permit it to come within the precincts of their family circle. For this act of charity on our part we are treated to a specimen of Billingsgate fishwoman slang.

Here is a specimen of the reply of the highly educated slinger of words into unmeaning and senseless sentences: The Intelligencer is denounced as "EAGLE EYED, SLEUTH-LIKE AND VERSATILE WITH BLOOD-CURDLING FEATURES," and "HAIR-RAISING PERFORMANCES OF THE NEST OF TRAITORS."

Great Scott, gentle reader, what do you think of that? The Intelligencer still lives and will appear regularly every afternoon at four o'clock, Sundays and holidays excepted.

How truly Shakespeare wrote when he penned the lines:—

"Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind
As man's ingratitude."

A Severe Arraignment

After some thirty years of agitation on the question of constructing a railway from the North West to Hudson's Bay, and the selection of a terminus on that Bay, the Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, being a practical man, not a theorist, has solved the question by selectiong Port Nelson Harbor as the northern terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway. This selection is in the immediate interest of Ontario, giving, as it does, this province access to that part through the five mile grant secured in the settlement of the extended boundaries of the different provinces.

Now that the question of route and northern terminus is settled it is of interest to know where it begins and where it ends.

The Hudson Bay Railroad is 418 miles long and starts from the crossing of the Saskatchewan River at the Pas Mission. The great bridge across the river is under construction. A branch of the Canadian Northern Railway now runs from Prince Albert northerly for 100 miles to the Mission, almost on the 54th parallel. It is intended that the Hudson Bay road shall run from the Pas northeasterly to the Bay.

To Port Nelson the distance is 418 miles, and the engineers favored it as the terminus. They reported that the distance was shorter than to Fort Churchill by 80 miles; that the natural difficulties of the route were less serious; that construction would be less costly; that a better country would be traversed and a better harbor secured.

It is contended by the engineers that the Port Nelson route gives gradients of 21 feet in the mile both northward and southward. The cost is etimated at $17,000,000 to Nelson. There must be added from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000 for harbor works, for the exploration, lighting, and buoying of Hudson Bay and for other necessary assistance to navigation. Probably the cost of the whole enterprise will not fall below $30,000,000.

It is also pointed out that the distance from the wheat fields to Hudson Bay is practically the same as to Fort William, at the head of Lake Superior, as the ocean voyage from the bay practically equals that from the St. Lawrence. Under favorable conditions, therefore, the economic saving should be equivalent to the cost of transportation from Fort William to Montreal.

It will be necessary to establish elevators at the Hudson Bay terminus, and to secure a fleet of steamships.

Now the important question is that of navigating the ice-bound waters of the straits and the bay.

Mr. A. P. Low, commanding the Government steamer Arctic after investigations in 1903-4 wrote:—

> "The period of safe navigation for ordinary iron ships through Hudson Strait and across Hudson Bay to Churchill may be taken to extend from July 20 to November 1. This period might be extended without much risk by a week in the beginning of the season, and perhaps by two weeks at the close."

The advantage of this route to the English markets for the products of the West will depend in a great measure upon the success of navigating these waters. It must be borne in mind that the Western wheat crop is ready for shipment early in September. Hudson Bay navigation closes one month later. But it is estimated that during the month 65,000,000 bushels of grain may be carried to the seaboard. With the necessary storage facilities shipments may continue until interior elevators are emptied. Moreover a well established contention is that storage of wheat in high latitudes improves its quality. It is conceivable that shipments of cattle would go northward. There should be a return trade in goods from Europe. There should be a trade in coal between the mines of Nova Scotia and the northern prairies.

It is to be hoped that the sanguine hopes and prognostications of many may be realized and that the expenditure of some $30,000,000 on the railway and harbor may prove a profitable investment.

The Court of Review sits in two divisions this month for the first time. Contrary to general expectation, the case of Hebert v. He would be still more grateful if the four or five rolls of wall paper taken from the south side of the house were returned, for the reason that unless this is done he will have to send to the factory for it, as the supply in Belleville is exhausted. Better do this than have the policeman go for it.

Kingston is evidently determined to pave some of its streets, and Belleville may gather some useful experience from the results in the Limestone City. The Standard states that at a meeting of the Board of Works recently the tender of the Asphalt Paving Company for asphalt blocks at $2.94 a square yard was accepted provided that the company would do the work this year and furnish the required guarantee and bonds. This the company is apparently willing to do. The streets to be paved are Clarence Street, from King to Bagot Street; Brock Street from Wellington to Bagot Street; Wellington Street from Clarence to Brock Street, and Bagot Street from Clarence to Princess Street. If the company accepts the contract they have about 10 weeks in which to lay the pavements before

DIVINE REWARDS ARE ETERNAL

Parable of the Sheep and Goats Clearly Explained —God's Message to Man.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 8.—Pastor Russell's text here to-day was, "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."—Matthew xxv, 46. He said:

We have been in all sorts of confusion respecting the future, because we have not studied the Bible's testimony critically. For thirteen centuries the Bible was almost unknown. The bishops of the Church were erroneously supposed to be successors of the Apostles and to speak with the same Divine inspiration and authority. Printing was not yet invented and education was confined to a wealthy few. No wonder the inspired Message was lost in a mass of human tradition, much of which was devilish nonsense! We have been gradually progressing from darkness to light, though fettered by hobgoblin figures and each other's threats and perversions of the Divine Message. It is safe to say that the Bible is being more critically studied to-day by earnest Christians of all denominations than it ever was before. The result of this study, and the advantages of our time are manifesting themselves. Divine harmonies are filling heads and hearts once distracted by clashing creeds. Take our text as an illustration.

Once blindly we read this Parable of the Sheep and Goats and applied it to rewards and punishments as a result of things done in the present Age. Now we see that its proper application belongs altogether to the next Age of Messiah's Kingdom. It distinctly states this. It is introduced thus: "When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the Throne of His glory; and before Him shall be gathered all nations, and He shall separate them one from another as the shepherd divideth the sheep from the goats."

The Church is not included in this parable at all. It relates, as we see, to the world—"all nations." Other Scriptures show us that when the nations shall thus undergo their trial for life or death everlasting the Church will be glorified. As the Bride of Christ she shall sit with Him in His Throne and be associated in His work of judging the world. Note how clearly St. Paul expresses this, saying "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?" (I. Corinthians vi, 2.) Thus it is the world's Judgment Day that he elsewhere mentions, saying, "God hath appointed a Day (future—a thousand-year Day—the Day of Christ), in the which He will judge the world in righteousness by that Man whom He hath ordained."—Acts xvii, 31.

A right understanding of the doctrine of Election helps us gradually to a proper view of the Divine Program. The Church is being selected out of the world according to faithfulness and character-development, in preparation for great service for the non-elect. The Messianic Kingdom, with Christ and the Church in control as the Royal Priesthood, is appointed for the very purpose of blessing the non-elect world—"all nations." For a thousand years the work of bringing all to a knowledge of the Truth will progress. To this end Satan will be bound at the very beginning of the thousand years and the light of the knowledge of the glory of God will fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep.

With all thus brought to a clear comprehension of righteousness each will be on trial, and will either come into harmony with the Kingdom or remain an alien and lover of sin. All the latter are in the parable classed as goats—wayward one—and will thus place themselves at the left hand of the King—in His disfavor. On the contrary, all who learn the ways of the Lord and come into accord therewith, are symbolically styled "sheep" in the parable, and by their conduct will gradually take their places at the King's right hand, or place of favor.

The Parable shows the conclusion of the world's Judgment. All will then have taken their places, either as sheep or as goats—either in the King's favor or in His disfavor. The sheep class will then hear His "Well done," "Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world"—from the time the world was established.—Matthew xxv, 21, 23, 34.

The world was made for mankind. Adam being its representative was the King of earth. He lost his dominion when he lost his relationship to his Creator and lost his right to eternal life by his disobedience. The sheep class will represent all of Adam's race brought back to perfection by the processes of Restitution during Messiah's reign. (Acts iii, 19-21.) To them will come the dominion which Adam lost and which Jesus redeemed at Calvary and which He will give to the worthy ones at the conclusion of His thousand-year reign. Next, the fate of the goat class is stated—not in literal language, but symbolically. Indeed, the Prophet and the Apostle declared of Jesus that "He opened His mouth in parables," and that "without a parable spake He not unto the people." In other words, everything that Jesus said to the people in general was figurative, in order that only those of right condition of heart might be able to understand Him.

The message of the great King to the goat class will be, "Depart from Me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the Devil and his angels." (Matthew xxv, 41.) We might as well insist that the parable applies to literal goats as to claim that this penalty is literal fire. All who have studied the subject will freely admit that fire throughout the Bible is used figuratively to represent destruction. Adamic death, the sentence upon all of the race, because God from the beginning purposed the setting aside of that sentence through the redemptive work of Jesus; hence Adamic death is not destruction, but in the Bible is styled, symbolically, "falling asleep," and resurrection is styled "awakening from sleep."

But when picturing the Second Death, the Bible uses strong terms, representing destruction in the fullest and most absolute sense. Mark the words used: "Perish," "Second Death," "Everlasting Destruction." We even overlooked the plain explanation which Jesus gave us when He said, "the lake of fire, which is the Second Death." (Revelation xx, 14.) St. Peter, summing up the fate of the incorrigibly wicked, says that they shall be destroyed like natural brute beasts. (II. Peter ii, 12.) Only a bugaboo of eternal torment, hundreds of years old, could have so alarmed us that we failed to note these matters long ago.

Meanwhile, alas, while many of the learned have abandoned the doctrine of eternal torment, they have practically abandoned everything else in the Bible, because they supposed the Bible to teach this inconsistency. Let us not follow them into "Higher Criticism," infidelity and total rejection of the inspiration of God's Word, but let us compare Scripture with Scripture and use our God-given reason within the boundaries of God's Message. So doing we are seeing more and more the glorious perfection of our Father's character and of His inspired Word.

Some shallow thinkers have been thrown off the track of religious investigation, reasoning that if there is a heaven, there must of necessity be a hell of torment. But the contrast which the Bible establishes in respect to the sinner and the saint is life and death—and not heaven and hell. As a matter of fact the Bible nowhere promises heaven to any except the Church of the First-borns, who are now being called out of the world for association with Messiah in His Kingdom. The world of mankind never lost heaven and is nowhere promised heaven.

Adam's loss was an earthly Eden, a human perfection. Jesus declares that He "came to seek and to save that which was lost." The work of His Kingdom for a thousand years will be the bringing of earth to a Paradise condition. And He will restore all the willing and obedient of mankind to all that was lost, bringing them back again to the image and likeness of God in the flesh. Adam possessed these qualities when he was declared by his Creator "very good," and was given the dominon of earth.

When Adam was placed on trial in Eden he was endowed with perfection of life and organism as a man. God said not one word to him about heaven or hell, but did set before him life and death. If he would be obdient he should be privileged to maintain his life and all his perfections and blessings everlastingly. If he would rebel against his Creator's laws and be disobedient thereto he should die—be cut off from life. He was disobedient, and was expelled from Eden into the accursed, or unfit earth, where he died a slow death, battling with thorns and thistles. This has been the fate of his entire race—death—mental, moral and physical decay to completion.

Addressing the people of old through the Prophet God declares, "I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing—choose life that ye may live." (Deuteronomy xxx, 19.) The hope before the Israelites was of a resurrection—a "better resurrection"—to the faithful. (Hebrews xi, 35.) Not a word was said to them in all the four thousand years down to Jesus' day respectiong eternal torment, or any hope of life in any condition except in harmony with God.

When telling the object of Jesus' coming into the world, and describing man's redemption from the penalty of death, we read, "God so loved the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life." (John iii, 16.) What right had we or anybody to twist the word perish, which means destruction, to make it mean everlasting life in torture? Such perversions and wrestings of the Scriptures have brought great discredit upon our God and great confusion into the minds of His people. We should note with emphasis the contrast so forcefully stated in this most precious text—"not perish, but have everlasting life." Certainly whoever gets the everlasting life will not perish; whoever does not get it will perish. How plain God's Word!

Notice again the various terms used in respect to the Saviour and His work. The word Saviour signifies Life-Giver. We would have seen the beauty of this if we had not been befogged as respects the penalty—death. Whoever sees that "the wages of sin is death" must perforce see that the great need of the world is a Life-Giver—to rescue them from the death penalty by a resurrection. Again, our Lord represents Himself as the Great Physician who is able not only to rescue from the tomb, but to heal all diseases, all the imperfections which come to mankind as incidentals of the death penalty.

Hear again Jesus' words, "He that hath the Son hath life; he that hath not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God (as expressed in the death penalty abideth on him"—to him it becomes the Second Death. This explains also the meaning of Jesus' words, "Ye will not come unto Me that ye may have life." And again, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." What can be plainer than that "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord?"—Romans vi, 23.

We are asked, Does not the word everlasting, as applied to the goat class, signify as long a period as the same word applied to the sheep class? We reply, Most assuredly so. The punishment of sin is to be everlasting, and the reward of righteousness is to be everlasting. There is no question on this point. The question is, What is the punishment for sin? The thoughtless at once will say, Fire, torment, smoke, blazes, devils with horns and tails and pitchforks, a la Dante's Inferno.

But we ask for a Scriptural answer. What does the Bible say is the punishment for sin? Nothing like Dante's answer is to be found in the Bible, however much we might imagine that it was printed in every page and that we have read it scores of times. The

NEW PITCHING RECORD

Wolfgang Permits No Batsman to Reach First Base In Ten Innings.

LYNN, Mass., Sept. 7.—For ten innings Meldon Wolfgang of Lowell held Lynn to no hits and no runs without a man reaching first base in a New England League game here to-day. This is believed to be a new record for organized baseball under the National Commission.

The records show four no hit, no run games for ten innings, but Wolfgang's feat of allowing no man to reach first base in ten innings is said to be a record. In the eleventh inning Logan of Lynn, the first man up, singled over second base, but Wolfgang again tightened up, and not another hit was made by Lynn until Orcutt got a lucky single in the twelfth inning. Lowell won, 1 to 0.

Waller, for Lynn, gave four bases on balls and allowed only five hits, striking out ten batsmen. Wolfgang struck out five and gave no passes. Lynn had only one man left on bases, while Lowell had four.

Wolgang played with Albany, N. Y., three years ago, when he was bought by the Boston Nationals, and then sold to Lowell, where he helped win the New England League pennant last year. At the end of the season he was sold to the St. Louis Americans, who turned him back to Lowell in the Spring.

Kid McCoy Saved Little Girl's Life

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—When Eva Neville's father tried to reward a well set up young man last evening for saving his daughter's life at Brighton Beach, the rescuer smiled and said:—"Put up your check book. It wasn't anything anyhow.'

The little girl flung her arms about his neck and kissed him, and then he sifted into the crowd, but not before a policeman recognized him as "Kid McCoy," the former pugilist, lately returned from abroad.

THE LEAFS AT HOME

TORONTO, Sept. 7.—The Leafs arrived from Montreal this morning to finish the season. They will play all of this week and next at the Island Stadium. The visiting teams will be Montreal, Buffalo and Rochester. It is hoped to put the brakes on the present slump immediately and make the home series a pennant-winner from the start. Two weeks at home against the Royals, Bisons and Hustlers will provide fighting baseball for the fans. It is not improbable that the final series of the year, that with Rochester on September 19, 20 and 21, will decide the championship. In the meantime the present champions are on the road meeting Montreal and Buffalo before coming to Toronto. The slump of the Kelleys has made the race close again, and renewed the interest in both Toronto and Rochester.

KILLED HIS TORMENTOR

References to His Deformity Drove Hunchback to Commit Murder

Incensed at references to his hump a hunchback named Dauny, who worked on a farm at Boiemont, in the Seine-et-Oise, France, killed a fellow laborer named Perthuis and threw his body into a ditch.

Dauny was very sensitive on the point of his affliction, and any reference to it was always sufficient to anger him. After work was finished one evening he and Perthuis had drinks together. While carousing the latter made some joking reference to his companion's hump.

Dauny got angry, but matters were smoothed over. More drinks were consumed, and the two left the wineshop together. On the road home the quarrel broke out afresh. Dauny became frenzied and smashed Perthuis' head in with a hedge stake. Then he stripped the body, dragged it a third of a mile to a ditch near the farmhouse, and threw it in.

Next morning Dauny told the farmer he had seen a man's feet protruding above the water in the ditch. The farmer and some of his men investigated and found Perthuis' body.

When the hunchback was questioned he admitted that it was he who had killed his companion. After he had told his story Dauny tried to run away, but he was overtaken and arrested.

A CURIOUS OLD CUSTOM REVIVED IN ENGLAND

The revival of the quaint ceremony of awarding the famous Dunmow flitch after an interval of five years has infused a new interest into the ancient custom.

The proceeding were observed with the eyes of all England looking on, on bank holiday, August 5.

"What ever married couple will go to the priory and, kneeling on two sharp stones, will swear that they have not quarrelled nor repented of their marriage within a year and a day after its celebration, shall receive a flitch of bacon."

Whether it was a little joke on the part of Sir Reginald Fitzwalter, Lord of the Manor of Little Dunmow, the ancient Essex village, or whether he really wished to reward true matrimonial happiness with this unique prize, is not quite clear; but the story goes that these were the conditions he laid down in 1244 for the awarding of the Dunmow flitch.

Another story is to the effect that it was the monks of the Priory, which was founded in 1104—the remains of which are still to be seen at Dunmow—who, being bachelors, and wishing to show their scepticism as to happiness and marriage being compatible, instituted the custom in order to prove that in bachelorhood lies the true secret of happiness.

If the latter story is true, then the monks were certainly able to laugh at the married people of Dunmow; for it was not until 200 years after the custom had been instituted that the prize was won. Again from 1445 to 1751 only five presentations took place, and the flitch was not again claimed until 1855. From 1860 to 1877 there were four awards, three in 1891, two in 1903, and two more in 1907—the last occasion on which the ceremony was observed. From which it would seem that the majority are like the coster-girl who was watching the ceremony of awarding the flitch five years ago, and who, on being asked if she would like to win the prize, remarked: "Not me. Silly, I calls it. Gi'e me a bloomin' good rah to a bit o' bacon!"

Instead of kneeling on two sharp stones and swearing as to the happiness of their married life, candidates for the Dunmow flitch now have to prove their case in a mock trial, with a jury composed of six of the prettiest maidens of Dunmow dressed all in white frocks, and six bachelors dressed all in their best. Practically any married couple who can show that they have lived together for a year and a day without the slighest approach to a quarrel are awarded a flitch of bacon; but candidates for the prize have to undergo a humorous cross-examination by the local wits, attired in wig and gown, who play the parts of counsel for the claimants and for the defendant—the flitch.

Two sides of bacon, decorated with gay-ribbons hang on tent-poles on either side of the platform, while the whole ceremony is presided over by a judge in red robes. On the last occasion a flitch was won by a clergyman and his wife, whose life, according to counsel for claimants, was "A long life of perennial fireproof joy." But the counsel for the bacon endeavored to bring up circumstances and recollections which would prove that the claimants did not always possess an unruffled temper. It appeared that they had moved many times to another parish. "Did not even a moving joy ruffle you?" asked the consel. "No", promptly replied the clergyman; "I left all moving to my wife," and the latter, under cross-examination, explained that her husband 'was a tidy man in the house, and was not naughty when he hit the wrong nail with the hammer".

The awarding of the Dunmow flitch is certainly one of the most interesting examples of an ancient custom being carried on at the present time. The reason why no awards of the flitch were made during the latter part of the eighteenth century and the first half of the nineteenth was that the Lord of the Manor caused the ceremony to be discontinued; but, thanks to the efforts of Mr. Harrison Ainsworth, the famous novelist, who interested himself in the matter, a revival of the romatic old custom took place, and on one occasion Mr. Ainsworth himself officiated as judge.

The records of Dunmow contain some amusing instances of early claims for the flitch. In 1751 John Shakeshaft and his wife, of Weathersfield, Essex, were chaired round the town by the enthusiastic populace marshalled by the steward and other officers of the manor. The flitch was borne before them, and Shakeshaft improved the occasion by selling slices of bacon to the 5000 spectators.

Alas! it has to be recorded that there were dishonest folk even in the old days, who would swear to anything for a flitch of bacon, for it is related how Aubrey D. Falstaff bribed two of his father's companions to swear falsely on his behalf, whereby he gained the flitch but as soon as he got possession of it he fell into a dispute with his wife as to how the bacon should be dressed, and the judges thereupon took it away from him.

On another occasion a certain Mrs. Stephen Freckle brought her husband along with her, extolled his virtues and added that he had a similar story to tell; but Stephen, like George Washington, could never tell a lie, and shook his head; whereupon his wife gave him a box on the ears, and again the bacon was hung up.

TRIUMPHAL PROGRESS

Premier Borden Gets Splendid Reception at Montreal.

His Journey From Quebec to the Commercial Metropolis Has Been a Wonderful Display of Enthusiasm —Thousands In Montreal Turn Out to Witness the Civic Welcome to Mr. Borden.

Montreal, Sept. 9.—Few more enthusiastic welcomes have been accorded to any Canadian Prime Minister than those which have marked the progress of the Right Hon. Robert Laird Borden since he landed at Quebec on Friday last, until his reception in Montreal Saturday night.

No more ideal conditions could have prevailed than those of Saturday night—the threatening weather of the day clearing at sundown. From start to finish the event was a success.

The spirit of the thousands who lined the wharf and the long route seemed one of sincerity and the tribute paid was appreciated by Premier Borden, who, in his brief addresses at the landing stage and at the reception in the Windsor Hotel, expressed his pleasure at being home again. The keynote of both his utterances in reply to addresses from the mayor, was a continuance of the entent cordiale which exists between the two nations and between the two great races of this country.

So large was the crowd at the informal reception in the hotel that the original intention of having the Premier speak from one of the windows to the dense crowd which thronged Dominion Square was abandoned as the time in which he and Mrs. Borden had to catch the train for Ottawa was run close.

After the mayor's address of welcome at the pier, Premier Borden took the position vacated by His Worship Mayor Lavallee and read a brief reply in French.

Speaking in reply to the welcome in English, Premier Borden said:

"Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen: I cannot tell you how deeply I am moved by the splendid welcome home to this grand old city of Montreal. On behalf of my colleagues, my wife and myself I sincerely thank you from the bottom of my heart.

"Mr. Mayor, you have spoken in gracious and eloquent terms of my deliberations with statesmen in other lands and I appreciate most warmly what you have said respecting the splendid reception I received, not only in the British Isles, but also in the beautiful land of France. There could have been no warmer welcome in either France or the country which was the home of my ancestors. Long may that entente cordiale continue. It was the co-operation of the two great races of pioneers that made this nation great, so will that co-operation continue in a greater measure and heartiness in all the glorious years to come and ensure the peace among the nations of the world.

"This country is a great heritage handed down to us by our forefathers—the pioneers of a hundred years ago. It is our duty to develop it and transmit it unimpaired to our children. The right of self-government we are sure will never be impaired. But with our great heritage we have, too, our great responsibilities. We must be assured that those responsibilities will be taken by the people of the country so that our place among the nations of the world—take its position in the eyes of the world, which its natural resources entitle it to. The memory of your welcome to me will never be forgotten."

Ottawa Is Ready.

Ottawa, Sept. 9.—The Right Hon. R. L. Borden, Prime Minister of Canada, arrived in Ottawa yesterday morning, having come through from Montreal immedately after the demonstration in his honor on Saturday night. The Premier's coming was known to few and at an hour that prevented many persons from meeting him. That honor will be atoned for to-day when the official civic welcome will afford the citizens of this city an opportunity of greeting the Premier.

According to French statistics, the wealth of Europe—real and personal property—is estimated at 1,175 milliards of francs, and the amount of capital in circulation is given as 260 milliards of francs. If we take a milliard as being equal to a thousand millions, the 1,175 milliards would represent $235,000,000,000. The Service on Board

It does not begin and end with the first-class, nor even with the second. On board both the R. M. S. Royal Edward and R. M. S. Royal George to England, the same generous and satisfying measure of ample comfort and thoughtful, courteous and ungrudging attention is extended to each passenger, to the end that a reputation for doing more than is expected shall mark the Royal Line.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The shipment of apples from Nova Scotia to England begins in earnest this week.

Frank D. Sedden, 26 years old, of Buffalo, broke his neck diving into 3 1-2 feet of water.

John Russell, a pioneer in the east end of Toronto, the oldest brickmaker in that city, and father of Joseph Russell, ex-M.P., died yesterday.

The British Government has asked for tenders for 200,000 tons of oil fuel for the navy, and it is supposed that one of the new battleships will burn only oil.

A statement has been issued denouncing as absolutely unfounded various newspaper reports that a peace agreement had been reached between Italy and Turkey.

Walter F. Moore, 18 years of age, an Englishman employed as a deckhand on the steamer Paipoongie, was drowned yesterday at Port Colborne, Ont., while bathing.

The Pope received in audience yesterday hundreds of French workmen under the leadership of Leo Harmel, who for 25 years has conducted these pilgrimages to Rome.

One girl was killed and three others seriously hurt near Camden, N.J., when an automobile skidded on the road and dashed into a group of girls who were standing in the highway.

An aeroplane got out of hand yesterday at an aviation meet at Gray, France, and swept to the ground, crushing down a score of spectators, four of whom were killed outright.

The oldest vice-consul in the service of the French Government passed away at Three Rivers Saturday afternoon in the person of George Baker. He has been forty years in the work.

Brakeman Is Killed.

Owen Sound, Sept. 9.—Robert McEwen, brakeman, an old employe of the Grand Trunk, was almost instantly killed at the Grand Trunk yards Saturday at noon when he was thrown beneath a moving car and had a leg severed.

The train crew were making a running switch and McEwen ran down to throw over the lever of the switch. As he threw his weight against the bar his hands slipped and he reeled over toward the track and, being thrown against the oncoming car, was hurled to the track lengthwise. The heavy express car passed over one leg and crushed part of the body terribly. Life was extinct in a few minutes.

McEwen was about fifty-five years of age and had been railroading for thirty years, principally with the Grand Trunk. His home was in Stratford, where his widow and two sons and two daughters, all grown up, survive him.

To Answer Charges.

Montreal, Sept. 9.—Brother Theodore of the Christian Brothers, Quebec, is in Montreal to-day to answer certain charges alleged to have been made against him by members of the French section of the order at the Mont La Salle, Mother House at Maisonneuve.

Some time ago the story was circulated that grave accusations were likely to be made against a Christian Brother on a charge of having instituted an attempt to set fire to the Mother House of the order in Montreal. Rev. Brother Theodore's name was mentioned in connection with the scandal, and it is to thresh the matter out that he is now in the city.

Tactics Begin In England.

London, Sept. 9.—The most interesting army manoeuvres ever held in England, which it was feared the inundation of the country by rains might prevent, begin to-day and continue until Sept. 20. The repulse of a German invasion as conjectured will furnish the general scheme for the operations, since the manoeuvres area adjoins the eastern coast line. Inspired articles in the newspapers, however, deprecate such a theory.

The area covered will be Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, Hertford, Huntington, Bedford and Cambridge, although the first week's operations will be confined to Newport and Cambridge.

Father Turgeon Dead.

Quebec, Sept. 9.—News was received here Saturday of the death of the Rev. Father A. D. Turgeon, a well-known member of the Jesuit Order, and, up to last year, superior of the society in Quebec. The deceased had held many important positions, including the rectorship of St. Mary's, Montreal.

He was born 66 years ago and had been a member of the order for 48 years. Father Turgeon had been in failing health for some time, his death taking place in Charlottetown, P.E.I., Saturday morning at 11 o'clock. His funeral will take place in Quebec on Tuesday.

Six Killed In Race.

Newark, N.J., Sept. 9.—Motorcycle Champion Hasha of Fort Worth, Texas, and five others lost their lives as a result of a peculiar accident last night. Hasha and Johnny Albright, a Denver motor cyclist, who was riding third n the race. The other four dead were boys and young men among the spectators.

Five thousand spectators were witnessing the finish of a four-mile free-for-all race, when the daring Texas rider, doing 92 miles an hour, took his fateful plunge.

Found Body Above Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 9.—The body of an unidentified man was found floating in the river above the falls yesterday. It had been in the water one week and was that of a man of about thirty years of age, dressed as a workman in blue trousers, blue shirt, black tie, jumper coat and shoes size nine There was nothing to identify the body

Two Dead In Railway Wreck.

Bennington, Vt., Sept. 8.—Two persons were killed, another probably fatally injured and nearly a score lesser seriously hurt last night when a Troy, N.Y., bound passenger train on the Rutland Railroad collided head on with a heavy milk train a mile outside the Bennington Station.

SHAUGHNESSY SPEAKS.

C. P. R. President Discusses the Stock Issue.

Winnipeg, Sept. 9.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, arrived in the city by special train last night on his annual inspection tour of the system. He is accompanied by three directors of the company—R. B. Angus, Sir Edmund Osler, and W. D. Matthews, and by Ferdinand F. Begg, a London financier, now of Montreal, but formerly well-known in Winnipeg, and R. Osler of Osler & Nanton.

Interviewed later, Sir Thomas made a statement of the Canadian Pacific policy with regard to the new stock issue, the issue of stock below the market quotations, freight rates jurisdiction and other matters of much interest concerning the C.P.R.

Of the proposed new stock issue he intimated that it was made necessary by the increasing scope of the company's undertakings, and was in no way affected by the fact that large dividends have been paid. These, he said, were in a great extent, revenues from land sales, quite apart from the earnings of the railway.

The "ten per cent. clause," he described as a dead letter, saying that for years the company had earned more than ten per cent. on its capital investment.

Fruit Growers Pleased.

St. Catharines, Sept. 9.—Warm maturing weather the past week has worked wonders to the fruit crop through the Niagara district. Fruit, which before had been at a standstill as regards ripening, has now ripened so rapidly that growers have had to work from dawn till evening. Extra hands have been taken on in nearly all large peach orchards in order that ripe fruit may not spoil.

The fine weather has been general throughout the peninsula all week, this section escaping storms which struck Toronto Thursday and Friday evening. Continuous rain prior to this week has had a beneficial effect on the peaches, which are much larger than last year. Although slightly watery they have a better flavor. Frank Gallinger picked, packed and shipped 1,000 baskets in one day last week. Similar work has been done on many other large farms throughout the fruit belt.

Found Drowned In River.

Lindsay, Sept. 9.—Yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock the body of William Morrison, aged 20, of this town, was found in the River Sougog, near the G. T. R. iron bridge. Morrison was a clerk in A. L. Campbell's grocery store, and had been granted a two weeks' vacation, and should have returned to duty some days ago. When found his hands were tied, which gave rise to suspicions of foul play, but otherwise indications pointed to suicide.

Dr. Blanchard, coroner, after careful enquiry, considered an inquest unnecessary.

Morrison is survived by two sisters and a widowed mother.

Bennett Being Harbored.

Brantford, Sept. 9.—That Jack Bennett, wanted on the charge of murder at Middleport, is on the Six Nation reserve and is being protected by friends was the information received by a posse of police from this city who made a special effort to capture the Indian Sunday mornng. A dozen suspected houses were searched but no trace of Bennett was found. It is believed his capture will be effected this week, however, the offers of a provincial reward having given a further impetus to the chase.

Bennett was seen by reserve residents on several occasions recently but disappeared when officers penetrated the reserve.

Conferring on Trade.

Ottawa, Sept. 9.—The first conference between Sir George Reid, the Australian trade commissioner, and Hon. George E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, relative to better trade relations between the Dominion and the Commonwealth, is being held here to-day.

The conference will be continued throughout the week, and while it is not considered as likely that anything definite will be reached, it is thought that some basis of agreement will be decided upon, the details of which will be worked out later.

To Move Pope's Body.

Rome, Sept. 9.—The Pope has determined that the body of Pope Leo XIII., which is still provisionally buried in St. Peter's, shall be removed within the year to a tomb in Lateran basilica, where the principal functions for the forthcoming Constentino celebrations are to be held. Hence secret negotiations have been begun by the Pope's major domo with the Italian police for the necessary arrangements for the removal of the body.

The removal will take place quietly and possibly unexpectedly in the early morning.

Lost Their Valuables.

Brantford, Sept. 9.—Wagner and Miller, members of the Brantford ball club, mourn the loss of gold watches, Wagner also losing $50 in cash as a result of the club's visit to Hamilton on Friday last.

The watches and money were deposited with the clerk at the New American Hotel and during the players' absence strangers called and stated they had been sent by the players to secure their property.

The clerk handed it out to them and the theft was discovered an hour later.

Three Men May Be Lost.

Gimli, Sept. 9.—The gasoline boat with three men which left this place Friday morning to go north and bring back a party who were duck shooting, was seen about 10 o'clock Friday at Arnes, about two miles from the beach and seemed to be drifting back. As the lake was very rough and a high wind blowing, great fears are entertained that they are lost. Arrangements are being made for a tug at Winnipeg Beach to go in search of the party.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 7.—The market opened at ⅛d to ¼d decline, being influenced by the weakness in Winnipeg, and forecast of larger world's shipments. Following the opening, there was further pressure, with an additional decline of ⅛d on the cool weather in the United Kingdom and weakness in Buenos Ayres. Toward the close the market recovered part of the decline, with some covering, and an improved demand for American parcels and a better spot trade. At the close the market was steady, ⅛d to ¼d lower than yesterday. Corn opened unchanged and held steady during the session. The pressure of Plate offers, small enquiry for forward shipment, was offset here by the strong Argentine freight situation and the decreasing local stocks here.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—Wheat today barely escaped going into the 80's. December delivery sold as low as 90c to 90⅛c, the third day in succession that the low price record for the season has been broken. The market gave way beneath the shadow of the on-coming crop, and closed weak ¼c to ½c under last night. Corn finished ⅛c to ⅝c up oats unchanged to ⅛c higher and provisions varying from 12½c decline to 7½c advance.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 7.—There was an increased demand from foreign buyers for new crop Manitoba spring wheat, but as cables were weaker at a further decline of ½d to 3d per quarter, the prices bid in most cases were out of line and little business was done. The demand for oats is still good and as the prices bid show exporters good profits considerable business is doing. The stock of oats in store shows an increase of 150,000 bushels as compared with last week, but this is accounted for by the fact that a lot of American oats are coming forward here for export account. The local market is strong with a good demand for carlots. Flour is steady, with a fair demand for small lots. Millfeed active and firm.

The demand for butter is good and the tone strong. Receipts for week were 13,861 packages, as against 16,819 a year ago Cheese is quieter, but firm. Receipts for the week were 74,433 boxes, against 63,9[illegible] a year ago. Eggs active. Receipts for the week 4782 cases, against 4479 a year ago.

Rules Too Severe.

Washington, Sept. 9.—Representatives of many steamship companies are here to protest to a conference of U. S. inspectors against the blanket regulations for life-saving equipment, promulgated as one of the results of the Titanic disaster. The companies operating upon inland lakes and over ocean routes close to shores contend that such stringent regulations as apply to ocean-going ships should not be applied to them.

U. S. Troops Go to Border.

Beverley, Mass., Sept. 9.—President Taft Saturday afternoon authorized Major-General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the U. S. army, by telephone to despatch at once two more regiments of cavalry to the Mexican border. No authorization was given by the President to have the troops cross the border.

The President regards the situation as grave.

Penalty For Evading Customs.

The million mark, which looked so easy of accomplishment at the outset, was not reached.

Shot by Masked Men.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 9.—Held up and shot through the neck by a masked man as he walked through the park on the American side late Saturday night with Jenny McLaughlin, a waitress in a local hotel, Harold Wallace, aged 18, is in the hospital to-day. The police on both sides are searching for the assailants.

When the young couple passed a clump of bushes, two men with handkerchiefs over their faces as masks, ordered them to hold up their hands. Young Wallace struck one masked man square in the face in spite of two revolvers pointed at him. The second hold-up man fired and Wallace dropped to the ground with a bullet in his neck. Both assailants escaped.

When fortune smiles on you don't wait for a formal introduction.

COLLARS PICKED UP.

A parcel containing a number of men's collars is at the police station, having been picked up on the street by one of the officers.

DOG BYLAW.

A large number of summonses have been issued against citizens who have neglected to register their canines.

WAS FINED $10.

Magistrate Masson this morning had one case to deal with. John Duffy, on a charge of being drunk and disorderly, was convicted and a fine of $10 was registered against him. The fine was paid.

DISTURBERS HAD LEFT.

At a late hour on Saturday night the police answered a call to the corner of Charlotte and Wellington Sts., it being reported that two men were in that vicinity and their actions seemed suspicious. The officer responding to the call made every effort to locate the men, but they had evidently left the neighborhood.

MADE NIGHT HIDEOUS.

At one o'clock this morning a man named John Duffy was making night hideous by yelling and using profane language on Front Street, near the city hall. An officer of the law apprehended Duffy and placed him in the "cooler." He was considerably under the influence of liquor at the time.

DRUNK GETS 30 DAYS.

Patrick Palmer, a resident of Sidney Township, will spend the next 30 days in jail unless some friends come to his rescue and pay a fine amounting to $15.50. When the circus visited Belleville in June Palmer was arrested for drunkenness and a fine of $3 was imposed. He was given a week to pay, but did not do so. On Saturday Patrick was again arrested for being drunk and he was fined $10 and $2.50 costs, and the old fine was also added. Not having this amount with him Palmer was sent up for 30 days.

MAN INJURED WHILE PLAYING POKER GAME

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 7.—Ralph Denison, a raveling salesman of Chicago, is suffering at the general hospital with a cracked skull. He played poker in a six-handed game last night and drew "the cream of hands."

When "called" he laid his cards down. Just then the ceiling gave way the biggest chunk landing on Dennison's head. He is wondering what become of his "four buttons and a rattler," and who confiscated the stakes.

ARMY STORIES.

General Miles told army stories at a dinner one evening. "There is a lot of humor, real humor, to be found on battlefields," he said. "I remember the case of a retreat which was really a routout. In this retreat the commanding general, as he galloped along like the wind, turned to an aide, who was urging his horse to the limit, and asked: "What brave troops bring up the rear?" The aide, without the slightest hesitation replied: "Those who have the worst horses, sir."

PREDICTS A BLOCKADE

E. J. Chamberlin Expects Worst Tie-Up on Record.

President of the Grand Trunk Railway Thinks the Railways Are In a Position to Handle the Grain, But the Steamship Facilities Are Not Equal to the Task—Crop Will Be Big, He Says.

Toronto, Sept. 9.—E. J. Chamberlin of Montreal, president of the Grand Trunk Railway, and a party of G.T.R. officials, which included Alfred W. Smithers, president of the Grand Trunk Board in London, England, and the assistant secretary of the board, H. Deer, arrived in Toronto shortly after 5 a'clock yesterday.

Mr. Chamberlin is returning to Montreal after a month of traveling in Western Canada. Interviewed upon his arrival at the King Edward he predicted a more serious grain blockade this year than has ever occurred before, but pointed out that it is the facilities for removing the grain from the terminals and not the railways that are at fault.

"I do not hesitate to says," Mr. Chamberlin observed, "that the three railways are in a position, as far as rolling stock is concerned, to move all the grain they will be asked to handle, but it cannot be removed from the terminal points. There is now at Montreal, as is well known, a considerable quantity of last year's grain awaiting removal, and our company has a great many loaded cars standing idle. The labor troubles in England have contributed towards the probable blockade by delaying steamship sailings, but in any case there are not enough steamships to take the grain away with proper despatch.

"As far as elevator accommodation is concerned, as far as it is not required for storage but only for transferring grain from the cars to the ships, everything will be all right. There is no doubt though that better facilities for getting grain out of the country or additional storage facilities are absolutely essential. Railroad cars are not intended for storage purposes but they are obliged to be used for that purpose now."

Mr. Chamberlin was impressed with the harvest prospects throughout the west. "All the country needs is a little clear, dry weather to allow harvest operations to proceed, giving the largest crop in the history of the country.

"At Fort William the Grand Trunk has largely increased its yard accommodation for handling grain and there is now trackage at Fort William for 2,000 cars. We expect the 2,500,000 bushel addition to the elevator to be ready to store grain this fall."

FORCES HIS WAY INTO JAIL TO SERVE TIME

Indian Under Sentence, Has Hard Time Gaining Admission to Institution In Oregon.

PORTLAND Ore., Sept. 6.—George K. Gray, a wealthy Klamath Indian, got into jail to-day to serve a sixty-day sentence only after a series of applications and arguments.

Gray was sentenced two months ago for having provided intoxicants with which his fellow tribesmen celebrated not wisely, but too well, a birth in the Gray family, and was granted a two month's suspension to harvest his crops.

The time having expired, he applied for admission to the jail Sunday and was refused. After three days of effort he finally got the needed papers and marched back to jail.

The Piano Everyone Can Play

IN hundreds of homes in city and country the piano remains unused because those in the family who were the pianists have left the old home. But if you are the owner of a

Heintzman & Co. Player-Piano

Made by "ye olde firme" of Heintzman & Co., Ltd., then you have a piano anyone can play. No previous knowledge of music is needed. Father or mother—anyone can play this instrument, and the world's choicest repertoire of music is at your command.

A Distinctive Feature

In no other player-piano is there the aluminum action, which makes this instrument proof against climate changes, something not possible in the ordinary wood action.

Another Advantage

Controlling of the air is the great consideration in all pneumatic player-pianos, and here again the advantage of aluminum is shown, preventing possibility of air leakage.

The Local Fair and Its Fine Attractions

Belleville fair will open tomorrow and continue on Wednesday. There is every prospect that with good weather the fair this year will be the best in the history of the Association. In all departments the number of entries are considerably in excess of former years, many new exhibitors having made entries. Tomorrow and Wednesday afternoon there will be speeding events which will no doubt prove attractive. In addition to the exhibits which are thoroughly scrutinized by many there will be special vaudeville attractions which promise to be of an educational and pleasing nature. There will be seen at the evening entertainment tomorrow night.

Among these are a midway, with many features of a novel character an animal show, a Ferris wheel, also performances on the platform, and music by the Oddfellows' Band. All departments of the fair will be open and the grounds will be much more brilliantly illuminated than before. A physicg procession will leave the market square at 7.30 p.m. and will traverse Front Street and thence to the grounds. Prizes will be awarded on the platform for the best get up. The exhibition will be of a character to suit all tastes and a record attendance is confidently expected.

Game Law Violators Heavily Fined

Capt. A. Hunter, Game and Fishery Inspector for this district, is certainly the right man in the right place and is always on the alert for those who defy the game laws.

On Saturday afternoon at Trenton two men named John McGowan and George Blakely were fined $10 each for illegal shooting of wild ducks. Their boats, guns, etc., were confiscated.

Seven other parties were summoned before the Captain for alleged illegal fishing of eels on the Trent Canal, but the cases were dismissed.

Gas Electric May be Used

It is altogether probable that the proposed trolley system of electric traction will be abandoned on the Toronto & Eastern Radial, at present under construction in favor of the modern gas-electric system on the car generates the electricity that supplies the motive power to the wheels.

The Toronto & Eastern is a Mackenzie-Mann concern and the exceptional success of the first car of this new type, which was tried out on the Toronto—Trenton line, and has been working all summer on the Lake St. John line of the C. N. Q. has caused much surprise in official qarters. In fact it is understood that so great was the success of the trial car that a number of others have been ordered by the company. It is also certain that a gas-electric car will be used this winter on the line of the Central Ontario between Picton and Trenton, for it has been shown that such services is far more economical than that given by the steam locomotive.

The only trouble with the new type of car is that it is somewhat deficient in tractive power, that is to say, while it can propel itself at a fast rate it lacks power to pull trailers or haul freight cars. If this difficulty is overcome it is the opinion of a number of engineers that the new car will revolutionize the present trolley system of radial lines. A gas-electric car is not much more expensive than an ordinary trolley, while, as it does away with overhead power lines, it reduces the cost of Trolley line construction by more than six thousand dollars a mile.—Sentinel Star.

INCREASING POPULATION AND WHAT IT MEANS.

"Canada's population is increasing swiftly," says Arthur I. Street, writing in September Canada Monthly, under the title of "How Many More?" "and with that increase will come a corresponding increase in business. For instance, nine and three-quarter millions more people mean a million and a half more dwellings, for one thing. A million and a half more places for people to live in—houses—things that require lumber and brick and mortar and nails; and plumbing, and workmen. Things in other words, that make business, make occupation for men's money and capacities, make buyers for your wares, consumers of your wheat, users of your ingenuity.

"We get this figure of one and a half millions as we did the others. We size up the places in the United States that look like the Provinces, but are older and fatter, and see how much they require for dwellings in proportion to the number of their people. Nebraska, for instance, has to have an average of one house for every five and a half persons, and Texas has to have one for every seven, and Colorado for every six. Evidently it takes just about that much roofing to keep the people of those sections of the United States in out of the wet and cold and to give them bed rooms, dining rooms, and places in which to do business. So, it ought to take about the same for us in Western Canada. Maybe a little more. And if it did take the same, here's the way things would make up:

New dwellings equired in Manitoba for increased population.	117,867
New dwellings required in Manita and Saskatchewan	928,503
New dwellings required in British Columbia	440,560
Total required in Western Canada	1,486,930

HORSE EPIDEMIC.

TOPEKA, Kansas, September, 7.—Because more than 4,000 horses have died in Western Kansas since a mysterious disease borke out, army veterinarians at Fort Riley have established a quarantine prohibiting the bringing of any horse on the military reservation. Fort Riley is wholly a cavalry and artillery post and there are more than 1,500 horses and mules there. The great mortality has created a serious situation in Western Kansas, hundreds of farmers being left without animals to do the necessary work. All crops are going unharvested and very little ploughing or planting of spring wheat is being done.

An Unfair Advantage.

Professor Brander Matthews at a literary dinner in New York said of a certain "best seller:" "The grammar is rather off. Its author lies open to the rebuke meted out to a Philadelphia author in the last century. This author had been slashed in a review, and he wrote to the reviewer and challenged him to a duel. But the critic wrote back: 'I have read your letter. It is as wretched as your book. You have called me out. Very well; I choose grammar. You are a dead man.'"—Argonaut.

WOMAN'S TRIALS.

The burdens a woman has to carry through life are many but they can be lightened if she will turn to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. A soothing and strengthening nervine—subduing nervous excitability, prostration, hysteria, hot-flashes and the many symptoms which may be caused by distressing ills peculiar to women. For those "dragging-down" pains or distress and for the derangements and irregularities the "Favorite Prescription" has had many thousands of testimonials from people living in every part of America. Another important thing to every woman is that this medicine is made from efficient medicinal roots, without the use of alcohol, narcotics, or any injurious agents. MRS. MORRELL.

"I can cheerfully recommend your remedies, especially your 'Favorite Prescription,' for all female disorders," writes MRS. M. M. MORRELL, of Bluff City, Tenn., Route 2. "During the past seven years I suffered from pains in the back and ovaries. Tried many remedies but found only transient relief until I was persuaded by a friend to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After giving this remedy a fair trial. I found that it would do just what it is recommended to do. I used in all seven bottles. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Pierce's remedies for all female derangements."

SHALL I WIN HER?

THE STORY OF A WANDERER

By JAMES GRANT

Author of "The Romance of War," "Under the Red Dragon," "Fairer than A Fairy," etc.

At last the uproarious and savage sounds died away, the Caffres departed, all save twenty, who were posted in and about the kraal as a guard, under Vonga, the father of the slain Pitoi, an old and savage chief; and after a time we were left alone—Mariqua and I.

And now came the most troublesome part of the task my evil fate had assigned me—to play the part of lover in earnest, when I was yearning only to escape and be at liberty in the wild forest or on the distant mountains, open and free—to be with one I might never see again.

Under the effects of all I had undergone I felt my brain reeling yet a cool and delicious breeze laden with the rich perfume of the orange and citron groves without came through the half-opened windows of the room, which was the best in the kraal, and had actually Venetian blinds. The walls were covered with French paper representing Hindoo girls brilliantly attired, Bayaderes, and girls dancing; and to my disordered mind the room became at times as if peopled by phantoms.

Seated a little way apart from me, Mariqua was eyeing me by the light of an old lamp, that streamed and spluttered in the currents of the night wind.

"You are thinking more of a horse and arms than of me!" said she, with tender reproach.

"Why do you think so?" I asked, feeing the necessity for saying something.

"Because I see it in your face. Your spirit is elsewhere."

"I must have a very tell tale face Mariqua."

"Oh why is this? Would you really leave me?"

I made no reply, for I was unwilling that she should think so.

"Oh, do not leave your poor Griqua girl! She will destroy herself if you do. I am yours—yours. Do with me as you please, even to taking my life; but do not leave me."

And now she clung to me passionately.

Tears choked her utterance. She hal torn off and cast aside, as if weary and petulant, the brilliant flowers and ornaments with which the women of the tribe had decorated her; and her long dark hair, which looked almost blue when the lamp light struck it fell in dishevelled masses over her polished but olive tinted shoulders. The poor girl looked beautiful in her grief and love and I must own that for a time she fairly vanquished me, though never for a moment shaking the yearning desire to be gone—to place miles between herself and me.

My position was full of growing danger. In one of her nature, the love and grief of Mariqua might easily turn to rage and hate.

I drained a cup of wine which she gave me, and then the room seemed to swim round me, the wall to vibrate, and all the dancers, Hindoos, Bayaderes, Alme, and Bacchantes whirl in mazes about us.

"Promise that you will never leave nor seek to return to your own people, or if you do that you will take me with you." Strange entreaties thought I, for a girl to make on what she deemed to be her wedding day. "Tell me that you love me—love me ever and always. But you are silent you sigh and look away," she continued, after a pause, while her eyes began to glow, and drawing back, with her hands on my shoulders, she seemed to look into my sad soul.

"Mariqua, why ask all this of me—just now especially?' I murmured not very well knowing what to say, while seating her beside me on the couch, I endeavored to calm her, and to soothe her fears for the time.

"I ask you a question and you reply by asking another," she said in a low sad voice, as she rested her head on my shoulder, and I was left thus, with the graceful Griqua girl, my savage bride, clinging to me, imploring me not to leave her, beseeching me never to leave her, in her soft and most musical, yet at times deep and guttural language for that she loved me, and me only.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

While I was a prisoner, and in ignorance of all that passed beyond the sequestered mountain kraal in which the artful Sandilli kept me, neither his people nor our troops had been idle. John Bull's money was not being spent in vain.

A standing camp had been formed by the general at a place named Reit Fontein, from whence patrols and escorts went out daily. Some of these were under Douglas, Bonteine, Graves, and other special friends, who were not without hope of finding or succoring me; while light infantry drill, cooking indifferent rations, and patching tattered uniforms, occupied the spare hours of those who remained behind.

To one of those patrol parties, composed of the Fingo Levy, were Clarice Haywood and her sister delivered by an escort of Fingo prisoners, liberated for that purpose by Sandilli; and the unexpected arrival of the ladies at the standing camp caused a very general feeling of rejoicing among the troops; but the mystery attending my residence or detention was increased by the hand I had in procuring their liberty, and caused a constant speculation among the 74th, in whose memory the fate of their bandmaster, Hartung, and of several others, who had unhappily fallen alive into the hands of the Caffres, was yet fresh.

The discovery of the charred remains of the unfortunate Dr. Bruine Kasteel, by a patrol under Sergeant Robert Burns, of the 74th put an end to all conjecture for a time as they were supposed to be mine, for my forage cap was found on the ground close by; and Douglas with great delicacy and tact, continued for a time at least, to keep all knowledge of this terrible suspicion from Clarice and her sister, who, attended by a party of armed volunteers, Boers, and Fingoes, set out for the village where Major Carysfort was still hovering between life and death.

General Somerset soon gave old Sandilli plenty of work, and hence I was spared the infliction of his presence. With a detachment of the 74th Highlanders, and another of the Cape Corps, Somerset scoured all the district of Hell Port and the Zum Bergen Mountains, which lie between the province now bearing his own name, and that of Uitenhagen; and on the 30th of August, about the very time Sandilli left me in the Gulu Valley, he attacked the Caffres on the bank of the New Year River, where they had a strong position in a difficult and rugged kloof, and then he dispersed them with great slaughter, capturing one hundred and sixty horses and cattle.

Two days afterwards, the 2nd, or Queen's Regiment, which had just arrived in the colony, and been marched to the front, had a smart brush with his people elsewhere, and routed them with considerable loss; but in the wild bush, near the Fish River, a party of the 2nd was completely cut off. The captain fell mortally wounded, while fify-seven of his men were killed or maimed.

The 74th attacked Macomo on the heights of Kromme.

Mounted on a beautiful white charger, at the head of three hundred picked Caffre horsemen, who seemed as a body guard to accompany him everywhere, this daring chief made himself conspicuous over all the field, and with hos own hand dismounted Colonel Fordyce, of the Highlanders, by shooting his horse under him; but the heights were carried at the point of the bayonet after a terrible hand to hand conflict, in which the supple and well greased Caffre had, in too many instances, an advantage over the belted and heavily-accoutred soldier of the line. "Our gallant fellows fought most bravely," wrote an officer. "One man with an assegai deeply buried between his shoulders singled out its owner, and shot him dead, while the weapon was nearly protruding through his chest! 'One grenadier killed four Caffres with his own hand.'"

The storming of the Water Kloof by five or six battalions of the line caused a considerable panic among the Caffre leaders, and by order of Sandilli I was conveyed, with Mariqua, far away from the Gulu Valley, to a place many miles—some two hundred or so—northward—a change of locality that added to my anxiety for the future, as it greatly increased the difficulty of escape

Vonga and his twenty horseman took possession of the only house that survived in what was once a peaceful and flourishing Moravian missionary station, the name of which I never learned. The others had evidently been but recently destroyed by fire, after being, no doubt, completely pillaged, and the flights of vultures hovering over particular places in an adjacent cane-brake seemed to indicate that in those spots lay the bodies of the dead unburied.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT

Bible is most explicit. It declares, "The wages of sin is death"; "All the wicked will God destroy"; "The soul that sinneth, it shall die"; "punished with everlasting destruction." These abundant and redundant Scriptural testimonies on the subject should settle the matter of future punishment to every reasonable mind—especially when there is not a Scripture to the contrary, either in the Old or in the New Testament.

I do indeed remember certain of the Lord's parables which, taken literally, might mean the literal cutting off of a hand or foot, the literal plucking out of the eye, the biting worms possessed of immortality, and literal blazes unquenchable. These we have already discussed and may yet again refer to, but not now. We content ourselves with the generally accepted and reasonable proposition that parables are never to be accepted as teaching doctrines, but at very most as illustrating them.

The Bible contains not a single suggession of eternal torture as a penalty for sin. It tells of no place beyond the bounds of time and space where Dante's poem will find its fulfilment. It does tell of a God of infinite Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power, whose decree is that eventually there will not be one inharmonious note throughout the Universe to mar the glorious harmony and perfection; that every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God; that there shall be no more dying, crying, sighing; that God's will shall be done on earth even as it is done in heaven; that eventually, "Every creature in heaven and in earth and under the earth shall be heard saying. "Praise, glory, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne and unto the Lamb forever."

Let us look still more deeply into our text. Let us note this word punishment in the Greek. It is kolasin. Its usage in the Greek classics signifies, to prune, to cut off. A secondary meaning of the word is, to restrain. Death is a most effectual restraint. The punishment which God has provided for sinners is that they shall be cut off from life, cut off from all the blessed privileges which God provided, not for them, not for rebels, but for sons in fellowship with Himself.

The punishment against Father Adam was cutting off from Eden and its blessings, from being the king of earth, from fellowship with His Creator, from being the son of God, from enjoying everlasting life. All this cutting off was included in his death sentence. Jesus came that Adam and his race might not everlastingly perish—that they might be rescued from the power of the grave by a resurrection of the dead, that all might thus through Him come to a full opportunity for life everlasting. Nevertheless the Divine Law still stands. The wages of sin is death. Therefore, whoever shall receive the grace of God in vain, whoever shall sin wilfully, intentionally, after full enlightenment, shall again be cut off—this time to perish, because "Christ dieth no more"—no more shall death have dominion over Him. The opportunity which His Kingdom shall grant for every creature, for every member of Adam's race, to return to Divine fellowship and everlasting life, will be so complete as to need no repetition. Those who die the Second Death will be without a remedy, will perish in everlasting destruction.

Occasionally a man's excuse for spending the evenings downtown is that he is married to the wrong woman.

You know the story the comb tells. It's a very discouraging story, too.

Day by day, a few more strands are added, of hair that is turning grey, losing its vitality, its strength and its health.

Grey hair is as unbecoming as old age. Natural pride should have its own say. You wish to look young and it is your DUTY to appear so. You can't even LOOK young if the silver threads begin to show.

BELLEVILLE'S BIG FAIR IS NOW IN FULL SWING

Entries Far in Excess of Any Previous Year—Splendid Display of Horses, Live Stock of all Kinds and Poultry—Many Attractions for Sight-Seers—A Varied and Extensive Programme of Amusements—Large Attendance of Visitors.

A visit to the Belleville driving park this morning where Belleville's fair opened today and will continue tomorrow, showed an animated scene Exhibitors were busy arranging the various exhibits and officials were kept busy answering enquiries and assisting in the proper classification of the articles to be shown. That the fair will be a success is assured if the weather man will curtail the downpour of rain. A heavy shower at an early hour this morning made the grounds rather damp, but Old Sol later on came out in all of its glory and heat, drying up the ground to a considerable extent.

The exhibits in the various classes this year are far in excess of previous years and the management have spared no pains to secure special attractions for the aged as well as the young who may attend.

In the main building the display made by the merchants is limited but the interior of the buildings has been utilized for other exhibits, namely flowers, fruit and grain in addition to the fancy work.

The display of horses, cattle sheep and swine is exceptionally large The following are the principal exhibitors in these classes.

Horses

The display of poultry is the best ever seen here, the fowls being placed in the building formerly used for the display of grain and fruit.

The Agricultural Department has consented to furnish a first class man for a Bee Demonstration. Mr. McIntosh of Stirling will be present and conduct a Box Packing Demonstration. In addition to the above there will be held a Live Stock Judging Competition under the supervision of Mr. McIntosh.

The speeding events as usual will prove attractive.

The special attractions are far in excess of any previous year and will prove most interesting to the spectators.

At one o'clock this afternoon the gates were opened and many attended.

This evening the grounds will be opened and a special and attractive programme will be given. The grounds will be well lighted. Music for the spectators will be furnished by the I. O. O. F. Band.

G. T. R. Conductors Heavily Fined

Special

TORONTO, Sept. 10.—Fines of $100 with the option of six months' hard labor, were the sentences imposed by Judge Winchester this morning on the Grand Trunk conductors charged with "knocking down" fares to passengers. They were J. J. MacDonald, Lorne Palmer, John Williams and William Wylie.

Crown Attorney Greer explained that the charges against the men were not theft, but of breach of the Secret Commission Act, which makes it illegal for employes to receive money for neglecting their duty for their employers. The maximum penalty is two years' imprisonment or $2,500 fine upon indictment or six months' imprisonment or $100 fine on summary convictions. These were the first convictions under the new act.

The men, who all pleaded guilty had been in the practice of allowing passengers to ride without tickets from Toronto to Hamiton and Fort Erie, for sums varying from $1.00 to $1.50.

Modern Bluebeard Killed Seven Wives

LONDON, Sept. 9.—A score of Scotland Yard detectives are piecing together new facts coming to light revealing the life of a modern Bluebeard whose last act was to blow out his brains after saturating with petroleum and setting on fire the "blue room" in which lay the bodies of one of his wives vealing the life of a modern Bluebeard whose last act was to blow out his brains, after saturating with petroleum and setting on fire the "blue room" in which lay bodies of one of his wives and three of his children, all murdered by him.

Sorely wounded—now dying in hospital—his last surviving wife staggered, bleeding from many cuts, clad only in her night attire, into the street.

She escaped through a window, climbing down a drain pipe into an alley. It was the escape of this victim which caused "Bluebeard" to commit suicide.

The real name of the perpetrator of this chain of crimes is not yet ascertained. He posed at times as "Capt. Stirling" and called himself an American. In Eastbourne, where the murders were committed, he was known as Robert Charles Mackie. In Clapham he was Capt. Robert Hicks Murray.

Detectives have secured conclusive proof that at least seven wives died from the hand of this man. Two sisters and their three children were involved in the final tragedy.

Many Problems are Awaiting Cabinet

OTTAWA, September 9.—After the tumult and demonstration incidental to the return of the Premier terminates, the Cabinet Council without delay, will get down to the accumulation of work which awaits its attention.

One of the first duties will be a survey of the situation to determine what date is preferable for the assembly of Parliament. Then a great budget of legislation for presentation to it must be prepared. Opinion seems somewhat divided as to whether the House will meet in November, or early in January. The question has not yet been considered.

Of outstanding importance is the naval question, and the policy to be determined in connection with it. The Prime Minister has made it clear that no decision has yet been arrived at, and that none will be until additional information from the British Admiralty is forthcoming. There need be no surprise therefore, if an adjournment is not made till Parliament assembles.

The question of what, if anything is to be done with the tariff, the Redistribution Bill, Revision of the Bank Act, questions of general policy; the Canadian Pacific Stock increase, and a lot of legislation not yet definitely determined, will require, in addition to the naval issue, the attention of the Ministry. All these things, in the opinion of many, operate against an early session.

Then there are seven vacancies in the Senate to be filled, and by-elections in MacDonald and Richelieu to be arranged for. Possibly an extra Civil Service commissioner will be appointed, and the future of the Public Service Commission determined.

Everything, consequently, points to the Cabinet having an exceedingly busy autumn.

No Cases for the High Court Here

Monday next the 16th instant is the date set for the fall sittings of the High Court of Justice, presided over by Hon. Chief Justice Meredith, but there will be no court. We understand that those who were summoned as jurors have been notified that their services will not be required. There are some jury cases which should have been tried at this court, but owing to the fact that the court followed so closely the holiday season there has not been time to prepare them and enter them in time according to law. Up to the present time there are no criminal cases up on the docket. Mr. Wm. Carnew of this city was selected as Crown prosecutor for the court.

Yukon to Get Cheaper Orders

Special

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—The Finance Department has effected an important improvement in the conditions under which business is transacted between the Yukon and the other parts of Canada and the United States. By an arrangement dating back to January, 1, 1905 the cost of money orders issued at post offices in the Yukon payable in Canada and the United States was double that charged elsewhere in Canada.

The Post office and Finance Departments have recently been looking into the matter and have rearranged the agreement with the Bank of Commerce so that the business is done on the same basis as that which prevails in other parts of the country no special remuneration being charged. Thus the cost of these transactions has been halved.

The U. S. Leaders And Reciprocity

Those Canadians who are still calling for free trade with the United States seem to forget that there is no apparent desire for it at present on the other side of the border. President Taft and Mr. Roosevelt now will have none of it, and Mr. Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic choice for the presidency says it is impossible and that what he and his followers believe in is relative freedom in trade. Speaking at the workingmen's dinner in New York on Wednesday night he discussed the tariff question, saying in part:—

"I hear a great deal said nowadays about the danger of free trade. There are circumstances in this country which render it absolutely impossible in our time, I dare say, that we should have free trade. We have so divided the sphere of taxation both by principle and by practice, between the federal and the state governments, that direct taxation is almost exclusively reserved for the state governments and indirect taxation is the chief resource of the federal Government; and the indirect taxes, which we would not pay if we were paying them, are chiefly paid at the custom houses."

Mr. Wilson as an example referred to the citizens returning from Europe and their attitude towards the customs. "They kick like steers," he said, "against the payment of the duties, because they are then and there consciously and visibly paying them out of their own pockets." The customs taxes are paid and few citizens realize they are paying them. The situation in Canada is much the same as in the United States. Money is necessary to run the country and the most satisfactory way of obtaining it is by means of the customs. With reasonable protection industries flourish and give employment and money remains at home that would otherwise go outside. The indirect taxes are hardly noticed by the payers of them. Direct taxation such as, for instance, on incomes, would seem a greater burden than the customs, to the ordinary man. And the taxes would be harder to collect.—Montreal Gazette.

Infantile Paralysis Is Killing Many

The Disease Rampant in Buffalo and Los Angeles—Is Still Spreading.

Special

BUFFALO, Sept. 10.—Latest reports on the infantile paralysis situation show that there have been a total of 220 cases since the epidemic started a few months ago. Twenty-six deaths have resulted and 60 per cent. of the survivors are permanently crippled. Four new cases were reported to the Health Department today.

In the August number of the Public Health Report, printed by the United States Government, it is shown that other cities have been troubled more or less by this disease, but Buffalo and Los Angeles Cal., lead all in number of cases and fatal results. From June 8 to August 17 226 cases of the disease were reported in Los Angeles, and 43 deaths resulted. In Los Angeles day and night guards have been established to enforce the quarantine.

Hindus to Fight Victoria's Mayor

Special

VICTORIA, Sept. 10.—A mass meeting of Hindus, held here today, unanimously decided to take legal proceedings to refute statements of Mayor Beckwith of Victoria.

Mayor Beckwith, in an interview in the East, said the Hindus were a source of trouble, immoral and quarrelsome.

ANOTHER OIL BOAT

New Vessel Nearing Completion in the Old Country

With a full cargo of port and sherry wine the new oil-propelled vessel, Fodonian, at present in course of completion in the Old Country, will pass up to Toronto early next month. The new ship which is the property of the Merchants' Mutual Line, will, it is expected, be something of a revelation in the marine line.

Driven by an 1,100 h. p. oil engine, it is calculated that she will be capable of attaining a speed of upwards of 12 miles an hour, whereas the only other oil burning vessel on the lakes, the Toiler, also the property of the Mutual line, can only make some six miles per hour. The new vessel is full canal size, 233 feet, with a beam of 14 feet.

Hon J. W. Sifton Critically Ill.

LIGHTNING STRUCK WOMAN WHO MAY NOT RECOVER

Dwelling at Ross' Corners Considerably Damaged—Mrs. James Smith Prostrated and Partly Stripped by Bolt—She May Recover—Not Much Damage in Town.

Belleville and its vicinity and particularly Ross' Corners in Thurlow, about four miles north of the city appears to be a favorite battle ground for the warring elements. It will be remembered that during a thunder storm on the 2nd instant Mr. Egbert Brown's barn at Ross' Corners was struck and burned by lightning, and this morning Mr. James Smith's dwelling there was struck by an electric bolt and badly damaged and his wife was very seriously injured.

During the severe electric storm which passed over this vicinity about 7.15 a.m. Mrs. Smith was standing on the verandah at her house when a bolt struck the premises and also struck her. The electric fluid struck her on the right side just below the arm, tearing her clothing, and it also tore the shoe off from her right foot, throwing the shoe some distance from where she was standing. The lady while not burned was rendered unconscious and remained in that condition for some time. A physician from Foxboro was summoned to attend her. It is anticipated that the unfortunate woman will recover from the shock she sustained.

The lightning did considerable damage to the building. A clock hanging upon the side of a wall was completely ridded of its works and every pane of glass was broken out of a window. The building was not however set on fire. Mrs. Smith is a woman about 45 years of age.

In the City

During the thunder storm which passed over this city at an early hour this morning a bolt of lightning struck a summer kitchen in the rear part of Mr Clem Bell's residence on South John Street. A few boards were torn off the side of the building and the cornice damaged. Fortunately none of the inmates of the house were injured, but naturally were terribly frightened. At an outside corner of the kitchen a large rooster was perched upon a small tree when the bolt struck with the result that the fowl was killed. A coal oil stove was upset by the shock, but it was upset by the shock, but it was not lit at the time.

Mr. T. J. Wills while shaving during the storm was thrown from his feet, but fortunately was not seriously hurt.

PROVINCE OF ALBERTA HAS A MODEL LAW FOR CHILDREN

EDMONTON, Alta., Sept. 9.—Alberta the youngest province in Canada, is the first to comply with the conditions of the dominion act respecting juvenile delinquents which will come into operation as soon as possible after the order in council and the certificates of the provincial attorney-general are entered at Ottawa.

Authorities on the subject of child-training, including Judge Lindsay of Denver, Judge Mack of Chicago and Judge Adams of Cleveland, declare this will complete the best series of acts for the rescue and protection of children in force anywhere on the American continent.

The act which was introduced into the Dominion parliament through the efforts of W. L. Scott, a barrister at Ottawa, and assented to in July, 1908, extends the principles that have been applied to the delinquent and neglected child in Alberta since the adoption of the children's protection act, passed by the provincial legislature.

The preamble of the dominion act fully sets fourth the spirit of remedial legislation in the interest of children, as follows:

"It is inexpedient that youthful offenders should be classed or dealt with as ordinary criminals, the welfare of the community demanding that they should, on the contrary be guarded against association with crime and criminals and should be subjected to such care, treatment and control as will tend to check their evil tendencies and to strengthen their better instincts."

Disassociating the child ofender from all criminal taint is the primary idea throughout the act. The term "child" applies to a boy or girl apparently or actually under the age of 16 years. This designation permits those who have authority to enforce the act to use their own discretion in regard to a child which the parents might maintain has reached its sixteenth year, but which may previously be in need of such protection as the law gives, though it applies chiefly to children whose exact age cannot be determined.

The act provides for dealing with offending children summarily in courts where the proceedings are private. It is unlawful for any newspaper to publish the name of the child or parent or guardian without special leave. Courts shall not be held where adult offenders are being tried and the child awaiting trial must not be placed in a jail or other place where adults are or may be imprisoned.

The children's court may be divested of the customary majesty and rigid formality, which usually attend the administration of justice in the tribunals of record. A provision of the act dealing with this point, says: "The proceedings may, in the discretion of the judge, be as informal as the circumstances will permit." "The testimony of a child may be received, though not given an oath, but such evidence, uncorroborated, is not sufficient to convict a person."

Several means are provided under the act for the child proved to be a juvenile delinquent, but the action taken must in every case be that which the court believes is for the child's own good and the best interests of the community. The offender may be fined, or placed under probation either in its own home or with a suitable family, or committed to the charge of any duly organized children's aid society or the superintendent of neglected and dependent children.

It is also provided that a child over the age of 12 years may be committed to an industrial school but it shall not be lawful to commit a child under 12 years, "unless and until," to quote from the act, "an attempt has been made to reform such child in its own home," or in the ways named in the foregoing paragraph.

Another section provides that the expense of maintaining a child in the industrial school may be collected from the parent or guardian, in the event that they are able to pay. The idea is to prevent anyone from swearing his charge is intractable in the hope that the child will be sent to an institution to be fed, clothed and educated at the expense of the province. The penalty for an adult, who, either wilfully or through neglect, contributes to a child's delinquency, is as high as $500 and a year in prison.

The judge of a juvenile court is given the powers of two Justices of the Peace or of a Stipendiary Magistarte. The position is an honorary one and the selection will take into consideration the special qualifications of the person to be appointed for dealing with children. Probation officers have the same power as constables. The present system will be enlarged and improved, volunteer and paid probation officers being used more extensively than previously.

Arrangements are being made with two Protestants and Catholic institutions to care for delinquents, while as heretofore boy offenders will be sent to the industrial training school at Portage La Prairie, Man., with which the province has an agreement to handle its juvenile charges requiring reformation.

Arrested on His Way from Altar

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—One hour after he was married last night, Willie Romain, of 529 William Street, was torn from his weeping bride, and locked up in the cells at Central station.

Few romances in this city have been so brief or ended so tragically. Only a few short weeks ago young Romain met Miss Therese Maringot for the first time. Eighteen years of age and distractingly pretty, the girl captured him at their first meeting.

He requested permission to call on her and made several visits to her mother's home at 126 St. Martin street. Friendship soon ripenend into love and the young man asked Therese to marry him. Although young Romain has a good position in a leather establishment Mrs. Maringot objected to his marriage to her daughter.

So the couple decided to elope. The girl is alleged to have eluded her mother's vigilance and escaped form the parental roof. She was met outside of her home by young Romain.

Together they hurried last night to St. Joseph's Church on Richmond street, where they were quietly married. Only a few friends were present to witness the ceremony.

Romain had prepared a little surprise for his wife. Without saying anything about it he had furnished up a tasteful little flat out in Maisonneuve. There he intended to bring his youthful bride.

Before he had gone any great distance from the church, however, Detectives Lebouef and O'Donnell of Chief Carpenter's staff told him he was under arrest. Despite the tearful protests of the newly-made bride her husband was locked up in the cells at the Central Station.

The charge made against Romain is that of stealing $60 worth of furniture from Mrs Alfred Maringot mother of his bride and also his mother-in-law. When he appeared before Judge Lafontaine in the Arraingment Court to-day Romain indignantly denied the charge, which he asserted was absurd.

He was remanded until Thursday. As quickly as possible Romain secured bail and hurried to his wife's side.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Etienne Girardot, famed for his creation in "Charley's Aunt," and other London and New York successes, is the leading figure in the production of "The Bachelor's Baby," Francis Wilson's big New York comedy success, which will hold forth at the local playhouse shortly.

Baby Wilson, the little five year old Miss, to whom is entrusted the child part, in "The Bachelor's Baby" it is said is one of the cutest brightest youngsters now behind the footlights. This little one we are told entwines herself around the hearts of her beholders in so loving a manner it will be years 'ere the memory of her portrayal will be effaced.

JOHN HYAMS AND LEILA McINTYRE IN A DELIGHTFUL MUSICAL PLAY.

The manager of the opera house announces on Tuesday September 17th the appearance of John Hyams and Leila McIntyre in Jos. M. Gaites big musical production "The Girl of My Dreams". Mr. Hyams is an excellent actor and a graceful dancer. Miss McIntyre has always been regarded as one of the cleverest comediennes, but until Mr. Gaites provided them with this vehicle, they have never played characters so suited to their peculiar talents. As Lucy Medders, a little Quakeress on her first visit to the city, Leila McIntyre presents a character at once amusing and altogether human, while John Hymans' Bachelor Boy, who is willing to "quit and be good" appeals and delights.

The humor is extremely pleasing and entertaining, and the music is not only high class but exceedingly catchy and melodious.

Besides the principals, Mr. Gaites promises a chorus of young women who have never yet had to ask the services of a beauty doctor. They are not only pretty, but can sing well, and this is most essential, as the music of "The Girl of My Dreams" is said to be one of its most attractive features. There are several big song hits including "The Girl who Wouldn't Spoon," "Love Letters," "O—o—h" (Maybe It's a Robber) and "Dr. Tinkle Tinker."

This production comes direct from The Princess Theatre, Toronto, and His Majesty's Theatre, Montreal. They carry two 60 feet baggage cars and a special coach.

DAVID BISPHAM.

No man in America has achieved a greater reputation in the world of music, nor done more for the use of English on both the operatic and concert stage than David Bispham and the announcement that he will sing in Belleville on Monday, Sept. 16th is of interest to everyone, musical and otherwise.

A great singer and a great actor, a Bispham concert program is entirely unique and apart from all others. In his hands each song becomes a romance, a drama or a comedy according to the intent of the poet and the composer, both sides of the composition receiving equal attention and study. Mr. Bispham will be assisted here by Harry M. Gilbert, the composer pianist.

A Beautiful Local Scenic Production

One of the most beautiful scenes in the vicinity of Belleville has recently been placed upon canvas by a noted scenic artist, who has been sojourning in our town for a short time. It represents a pretty garden in the foreground, which, while of itself attractive, the spectator becomes entranced with the magnificent perspective as he looks up the Bay about five o'clock in the afternoon. The view is almost beyond description, in that the sun's rays, striking a shower cloud, spread a golden halo over the silvery surface, rendering the effect most beautiful. The coloring of the subject is exquisitely graded, suggesting the touch of an experienced hand, and giving a pleasing, finished appearance. The picture was hung in the gymnasium of the local Y.M.C.A. to dry, where its beauty so attracted the Secretary, Mr. J. L. Hess, that he immediately arranged for its purchase. It will serve as a background for the stage, where patrons of the frequent entertainments may view it at leisure. Its initial presentation to the public will be at the first of the Star Course series, which is scheduled for Oct. 18th. Secretary Hess is to be congratulated upon securing so creditable a production.

Beautiful Display of Fine Furs

Our representative had the pleasure of inspecting the beautiful display of furs for the coming season, at the old reliable firm of S. A. Hyman & Co. HAPPY THOUGHT

PERFECT BISCUIT BAKING NEED NOT BE DIFFICULT

It all depends on the heat your oven gives.

Ranges with slow ovens are all right for some kinds of biscuits. But an oven that is chronically slow simply ruins others, and it is useless for many purposes.

Other stoves bake beautifully on one side and not on the other. So you can never depend on them.

"Happy Thought" Ranges are perfect bakers.

If you want a slow oven, a slow fire will produce the desired result. If you want a very hot, quick oven, just build up the fire and keep it going strong for a little while.

This feature saves you money in two ways:

It saves fuel by making it unnecessary to use too much, and by giving you the full heat value of every ounce of fuel.

It saves the food material by ensuring just the right result, no matter what part of the oven you use.

More than a Quarter Million Canadian women use the "Happy Thought" every day.

A Severe Arraignment

Pending the announcement of the policy of the Borden Government on the naval defence question, it is fitting to consider the situation as it at present exists. The Winnipeg Telegram thus forcibly and in plain terms, reviews it:—

> "Sir Wilfrid's observation that, 'in England you can think of armaments and war; in Canada we think of canals, railways and public works.' Why, it may be asked, does Canada think of canals and railways and public works and not of armaments and war? Simply for the reason that since Canada was Canada the Mother Country has been doing all the thinking, and, incidentally, all the paying for war and armaments, while Canada has had to think of nothing but canals and railways and public works. Will Sir Wilfrid mention another country under the sun that has been so blessed by Providence that it has been able to devote its whole thought, energies and resources to canals, railways and public works, while a powerful protector, without exacting or receiving anything in return, has spared it the necessity of considering ways and means of defence? There never has and never will be, outside the British Empire, a country guarded as Canada has been guarded, a country permitted to develop from infancy to nationhood without so much as a casual concern for the protection of her citizens at home and abroad, or for the protection of her commerce on the high seas."

Our contemporary's remarks are severe, but that they are fully warranted cannot be denied. The country looks with hope and confidence to Mr. Borden's Administration for a policy which will be fully adequate to all requirements.

The Prices of Meat

So extraordinarily high have the prices of meat become that it is not a matter for wonder that the City Council of Toronto have petitioned the Government for an investigation by a Royal Commission to be appointed for that purpose.

The cold storage companies and the epicurean tastes of the people of the United States evidently have a good deal to answer for in regard to the high cost of living. On Friday, August 24, prime sirloin of beef sold in London for 19 1-2 cents per pound and in New York for 28 cents per pound. Just at present meat prices are higher in the United States and also in Canada than ever before, while the identical cuts that bring such high prices on this continent are sold in London for less. This despite the water haul of 3,000 miles, and two rail hauls, first from Chicago to the Atlantic seaboard, and from Liverpool to London.

The U. S. beef trust, of course, denies having anything to do with boosting prices, but these facts remain:—

A certain proportion of the beef sold in London is American beef. The beef sold there at prices so much lower than the New York prices is, some of it, American beef. There is the mystery. How does it happen that beef is carried across the ocean from the United States to England and sold in London at much lower prices than those charged in New York, if the New York prices are not extortionate?

And to some extent the same thing appears to apply to Canada. If prime sirloin beef can be purchased in England for 19 1-2 cents, how is it that it costs at least 22 cents here, where the beast from which the sirloin is taken was purchased. The fact that in London American meat comes into competition with meat from Argentina, Ireland, and the continent does not explain the mystery; for if competition were to force down prices below the margin of profit, Canadian meat would disappear from the London market.

So far as one can get light on this mysterious difference in prices, the reason is two-fold. The beef trust has a great deal to do with keeping prices up in the United States, and the British market has the advantage of being afforded a ready market for the disposal of the cheaper portions of a beef carcase. In the United States and Canada these are said by butchers to be a drug on the market; they have to dispose of them at prices far less than are obtained by the English retailers, with the consequent result that in this country for the sirloins a higher price has to be exacted in order to make up a profit on the whole carcase.

It is to be hoped that the Government will respond favorably to the prayer of the Toronto petition—a petition in which every municipality in Ontario would do well to join—and appoint a Royal Commission to examine into a state of affairs as to which there is a universal protest in the country.

CURRENT COMMENT.

From the fact that four New York policemen saved 62 persons from burning tenements, it appears that officers in the metropolis can do something besides collect graft.

A Berlin, Ont., clergyman has written the city council there urging that children should not be allowed to run the streets at night. Conditions are much the same in Berlin as elsewhere. It is safe to say that every city nightly presents the spectacle of children of comparatively tender years, parading the streets unattended, until such hours as it may suit them to retire. There appears to be something radically wrong with the influence and attractiveness of home life, when the young people invariably seek the street to spend the evenings.

Germany is building a fleet which menaces our existence as a free nation within the Empire. It may be said that she is not building that fleet as a menace to the Empire. Why, then, is she building it? It is the second strongest fleet in the world to-day, and could, in sporting terms, lick any other off the sea in a very few rounds. As long as Germany proceeds to build and increase her fleet, so long will there be imminent danger of war with the British Empire. It is doubtless a nuisance, but it cannot be helped. It i much better to face facts and earn the respect of Germany than to hide our heads in the sand and scream that all is well because a few well-meaning people believe there is no German peril.—Vancouver Province.

TRANSFORMATION EFFECTED IN THE LAST DECADE

System of Training in British Navy Has Been Recast and a New Navy Brought Into Existence—"Win or Sink' Spirit Animates Service—Writer in London Daily Mail Describes Life in the "King's Navee."

In the last decade the Royal Navy has undergone a vertiable transformation, writes H. W. Wilson in the London Daily Mail.

Since the day when 16 years ago, I first accompanied one of her late Majesty's ships to sea, a new navy has come into existence. The system of training has been recast. The science of gunnery has been revolutionized. The ships themselves have been profoundly modified in every detail. New weapons have appeared in the submarine and the waterplane and the dirigible. The action of the admiralty in granting certain special correspondents the privilege of spending a week with the fleet on the eve of the manouvers and seeing the daily life of the warship in harbor, has given a unique opportunity of examining the qualities of this new navy, which has grown up silently in the last decade.

Under the quickening force of foreign competition the new navy has gained immeasurably in efficiency The splendid traditions of the past have been adapted to the novel conditions of the present with admirable skill, so far as concerns the executive officers who are the combatant branch the men who officer this department of our fleet today. Now as in the past, they are the very salt of the nation—keen, alert, high-spirited and light hearted. Their professional competence is certainly greater than in the past; their interest in their work more absorbing. It is no longer bad form to "talk shop." Fine though the old naval officer was, the modern naval officer still better. He has moved with the times and is the most efficient organism that our country produces.

"Win or Sink"

From admiral to midshipman, one spirit animates the service—the determination to "win or sink" and to spare no effort to win. Naval officers have always been a race apart. From the hour when they go on board as midshipmen, they are inured to responsibility, and the control of men They learn to remain calm in danger and to take swift and fearless decisions. The sea sets upon their wind tanned faces a peculiar stamp of its own, an indelible imprint of command. None can come into contact with the service without realizing that its discipline has an annobling effect, that by some subtle process it imparts courage and loyalty and patience, and the qualities which inspire and move men. Nor on the social side are the virtues of its training less marked. The geniality of the naval officer is a commonplace. His hospitality is unbounded. The stranger is welcomed with open arms to the heart of the great family, rued the patriarhal fashion by two kindly despots the captain of the ship and its commander, whose ordinances none must disobey.

It was my good fortune to be the guest las week of the officers of the Neptune, the splendid Dreadnought which carries the flag of Admiral Sir George Callaghan, the commander in chief of our home fleet. He has under his charge the very spear head of the navy, the finest and largest force which we maintain concentrated at sea, and for whom so much depends may be of interest to some readers, Sir George is an officer of vast experience in the handling of large fleets. He has accomplished six years of continuous work in the most important commands at sea. He is a thinker as well as a man of action; a tactician and strategist who is trusted to enthusiasm of his subordinates. He possesses in a supreme degree that quality of calm which a Japanese critic declared during the war with Russia to be the choicest endowment of a great leader. To aid him in his stupendous task he has a superb staff of young and capable officers who are in touch with every development of naval war.

Beneath the outward light heartedness of the naval officer is the toughness of fibre of the fighting man. An anecdote may well serve to illustrate his temper of steel.

There was a gun accident at Spithead and several men were killed.

The gunnery lieutenant in charge is believed to have said: "How provoking! I suppose we had better go back into harbor and get a new gun. We can drop these fellows at Haslar on the way."

A strange story perhaps, and grim to civilian ears, but one which foreshadows the spirit that will be shown when the Dreadnoughts, spouting flame from their giant guns and running blood from their scuppers, close in the last deadly embrace with the enemy. These officers and men will not flinch in the supreme trial for which their whole life is one continual preparation. We may trust them; we may trust them absolutely They will be as good as their word and "win or sink."

The Weakest Spot.

There are spots on the sun and there are defects in the navy. The navy scheme of training cadets has been quietly discarded in the case of marine officers, and it will probably have to be discarded in the case of engineers, as it gives no promise of producing the specialists required below the armed deck. The engineer branch is the weakest point of the modern navy, but already the danger is being recognized. A second point as to which there has been severe criticism is the quality of the gunnery. Here it must be said that it our ships are being outdistanced by the American and German navies, which many naval officers deny, the blame rests with the authorities for the wholly inadequate allowance of practice ammunition. It is a defect that can be and should be instantly remedied. But the country may rest assured that among all naval officers, from the commander in chief downwards to the humblest midshipman lives a passionate desire to improve the shooting and a complete recognition of the commanding importance of accurate gunnery in war.

The difficulties to be overcome now that shooting has been carried to such a fine art of science, are infinitely great. A very small period of time is allowed, whether in the gunlayers' test or in the sterner trial of battle practice. The gunnery lieutenant who is responsible for the shooting to obtain the best results must be a person an Archimedes and a Pestalozzi, combined in one. He must be a capable organizer and a fine leader, a scientist of no mean calibre, and able to teach and explain. The number of such admirable Crichtons in any navy will be limited and the larger our fleet grows the harder it is to find enough of them. A certain number of those lieutenants who specialize in the gunnery branch discover sooner or later that they have mistaken their vocation. It takes time to eliminate the failures and some consideration must be shown to men who have made great sacrifices in the service.

For the sacrifices are great and they grow greater with advancing years. It was Collingwood who said of the naval officer in war: "What a life of privation is ours; what an abandoment of everything to our professional duty, and how little do the people of England know the sacrifices we make for them." And though in peace the strain is less than in war; though the discomforts of life afloat have been mitigated by modern invention, the existence of a naval officer is monotonous and exacting. He has unquestioningly to obey he has to forego home life; he has to live on meagre pay—which has not been raised in the case of lieutenants for nearly a generation. He cannot marry young without private means. And as a recent article in The Army and Navy Gazette has shown, only one in every three lieutenants can ever hope for promotion.

If he supports his situation without murmuring it is because of his patriotism and intense devotion to the service. Judged by the officers it turns out, the navy is the incomparable school.

DAIRY FARMING

Those Who Attend the Cows Should "Keep Cool"

No branch of agriculture requires the operator to "keep cool" more than dairy farming. No hot-headed individual should be allowed to attend the cows. The attendants, to get the largest possible flow, must "keep cool"—that is, must never lose their heads, use loud talk, or be rough. The milk must be kept at a low temperature to be wholesome. Cream must be kept cool. To do this, ice or very cold water is necessary. Butter or cheese—in fact, all dairy products—must be kept away from the heat. "Keep cool" is always seasonable in dairy work. From the stable to the consumer, everything in connection with the dairy business gives best results when it is kept scrupulously clean and at a low temperature.

A CUBAN JOKE.

"We have our own ideas of everything down in our island," says Armando Marsans, the Cuban outfielder, "and, most especially, we have our own ideas of humor. Some of the jokes we play might not be popular in this contry and some of your American jokes might not be well received in Cuba. Only a week before I came up for the 1912 season, one of our hotels was so crowded that people were sleeping on cots in the hall. Some of us found a Spaniard so sleeping, picked up his cot, and carried it all the way to the Hotel Inglaterra, where we set it down on the sidewalk, the Spaniard never waking up at all. In the morning, a great crowd came to laugh at the Spaniard, and the Spaniard, when he woke up, was very peevish. That was a good joke in Cuba.

"But one of these Cuban jokes, I must say, changed my baseball destiny. I would have been a pitcher—possibly a Mathewson or Brown—but for this bit of humor—who can tell? Anyhow, this was how it happened. When I first broke into baseball, I was a pitcher, and to my natural glee and satisfaction, I seemed to be a whale of a pitcher at that. In the first real game I pitched, I shut out a strong team with three hits and struck out 11 men. Rafael Almeida, who is now a big league infielder, was my catcher, and we had great day drams of fame and fortune as a winning battery.

"That night, having nothing else to do, I got a friend to call Almeida by phone and tell him that a so-lovely Senorita wished to see him, and would he please come to the corner of Malecon—our finest boulevard—wearing a red rose, so she would know him? And when Almeida and his red rose came to the Malecon, half Havana was there to give him, as you Americans say the horse-laugh—the equine ha ha. Almeida said it was one joke, but I have since suspected that he was secretly annoyed. Anyway, three days later Almeida and myself were engaged as a battery, at great expense, by the most prominent club in the island, and all Cuba came to see us in our opening game.

"I faced the first batsman and I threw one. Bam! It was hit for three bases. This is but luck, said I, and threw another. Blamn! It was hit for two bases. Soon I will stop this batting streak, said I, and put lots of steam into the next one. Wang! It was a home run. Why prolong so sad a story? In five innings they made 16 hits, and I decide that I am not fitted to be a pitcher. So I resign from the work of pitching and become an outfielder. And Senors, ever and often I wonder how came it that I was hit so hard, but I never knew—until one day Almeida tells it to me. He had told every batter, as he stood behind them at the plate, exactly what I was to throw, and of course all my curves were at their mercy.

" 'You play good joke on me,' said Rafael Almeida. 'So I play good joke on you. Was it not exquisite in its humor? Sixteen hits—oh, such an evening of comedy, my dear Marsans!'

"And I pursue Rafael Almeida with a large bat and great ferocity but soon my wrath subside, for it is too late, and I am no more a pitcher. But what think you, Senors, of our Cuban humor, and of this Almeida's idea of jesting?"

TITUS "A "COME-BACK"

Doubt as to whether Constance S. Titus, twice champion single-sculler of the United States, will try to "come back" after an absence of six years from the rowing world has been settled by the announcement of Captain Pacini, of the Nonpareil Rowing Club, that Titus will compete in the National Regatta in Peoria, Illinois. Titus intended early in the season to row in several races to determine whether his oldtime skill and speed remained. His failure to do so led to the conclusion that he would not return to the sport.

ILL-FATED PRINCE COUSIN OF KING

Duke of Cumberland And His House Still Claim Throne of Little German Kingdom

Prince George William of Cumberland who was killed in an automobile accident at Nackel, Germany, was the eldest son of Ernest Augustus, Duke of Cumberland and Teviotdale in the peerage of Great Britain, Earl of Armagh in the peerage of Ireland, the Duke of Brunswick-Luneburg, and of Princess Thyra, third daughter of the late King Christian IX. of Denmark. The Prince, who was 32 years old, was a cousin of King George V.

He did not enjoy robust health, and had on that account spent several winters in Egypt. He represented his father at the funeral of King Edward VII. and the Coronation of King George V.

The Prince was, of course, the heir after his father, to the throne of Hanover, the little kingdom which his grandfather, the late King George of Hanover, lost by his adherence to the side of Austria in the war of 1866. The present Duke of Cumberland, father of the Prince, was then Crown Prince of Hanover. He took part in the armed resistance to Prussia, and after the disaster of Langensalza he and the blind Sovereign, his father, retired to Austria.

Bismarck incorporated Hanover into Prussia, and the property of the Hanoverian Royal Family was estreated. The Prussian Government made many efforts to come to an amicable arrangement with King George and the Duke, but always on condition of their surrendering their claims to the throne of Hanover. To these conditions neither the King nor his son would consent. The King died in 1878, and the Duke of Cumberland formally reasserted his regal claims. His son, the late Prince George, adopted the same attitude.

The German Emperor alone among the Sovereigns of Europe was not officially apprised of the fatal accident to the Prince, the Duke still regarding that Monarch as the usurper of his throne and the enemy of his House. The Kaiser decided that no Hohenzollern prince shall be allowed to attend the funeral, either personally or as his representative.

The new heir, Prince Ernst August is now an officer in a Bavarian regiment, and has more than once been brought into personal contact with the Emperor, who has gone out of his way to show him attentions. It is believed that he will, when the time comes, reconcile himself to the idea of the loss of the kingdom. In that case nothing will stand in the way of his succession to the Duchy of Brunswick, which is being withheld from his House till it finally renounces its claims to Hanover. He is twenty-five.

The Duke of Cumberland and his sister, Pawel von Rammingen, are the only surviving great-grandchildren in the Royal male line of King George III. of Great Britain.

Old at Forty-five

"He's an old man, sir; forty-five years of age," said a constable at Belfast Police Court, referring to a defendant charged with drunkenness.

An Uncut Cake

An uncut wedding cake, nine years old, was one of the exhibits in a breach of promise case in New York, in which the plaintiff was sixty and the defendant eighty-three years old.

It takes a smart man to look wise when he isn't.

BANQUET TO PREMIER

Rt. Hon. Mr. Borden Gets Splendid Ovation at Capital.

Five Thousand Are Present at Demonstration at the Chateau Laurier and the Greatest Enthusiasm Prevails—Pays Tribute to the Liberals and to the French-Canadian People—Civic Reception Given.

Ottawa, Sept. 10.—Hon. R. L. Borden was accorded an enthusiastic demonstration at a banquet at the Chateau Laurier here last night. Although given by the Conservative Association, the gathering could scarcely be termed a party one, many prominent Liberals being present. These included Senator W. C. Edwards, a lifelong Liberal. The great dining hall of the Chateau Laurier was packed, upwards of five thousand present.

Mr. Borden delivered a speech of great eloquence and power, and one that will rank with his greatest efforts in the past. While he did not touch directly on what the naval policy of the Government might be, he declared in ringing tones that he believed that Canadians were alive to their responsibilities and that the Dominion would do her duty as one of the great sisterhood of nations beneath the British flag.

He paid tribute to the Liberals of Canada. "It is a foolish man indeed," he said, "who labors under the delusion that the Liberal party is not loyal to the best of the British Empire, and in the way they deem wisest and best are working for its uplift and advancement." The Premier then told of his reception in England and France. As to the naval policy he had nothing further to say than was given out in an official statement given out by him before leaving England:

Passing on to speak of the naval and defence situation, the Premier said: "We should be in a position to defend ourselves. The British race, whether in the distant islands across the seas or here in the Dominions, are prepared to do their duty and defend their trust." Mr. Borden spoke of the Canadians of French extraction, "whose forefathers had first brought Christianity and civilization to our shore." The "entent cordiale" was a fitting forerunner of that great entente cordiale, which exists here between the two great and historic people here in Canada—"That great feeling of good-will which I pray God shall ever exist."

Hon. George E. Foster, Hon. L. P. Pelletier and Hon. Dr. Roche delivered speeches, and the gathering broke up at midnight with the singing of the National Anthem.

The civic reception to the Premier was another noteworthy demonstration.

The City Council having proceeded in carriages to the Premier's residence on Wurtemberg street, accompanied him to the City Hall through streets gaily decorated.

At the City Hall, which even before the arrival of the Premier, was packed to overflowing, Mayor Hopewell read the address of welcome and Mrs. Borden was presented with a magnificent bouquet.

The civic address expressed confidence that Mr. Borden would steadfastly pursue a "Canada for Canadians" policy and continue as far as possible the policy of making that trade flow east and west.

In his reply, the Premier said:

"I would like to say to any Canadians who think the people of Great Bitain less virile and enterprising or less capable of defending the heritage handed down to them, that I found no evidence of such spirit or disposition wherever I went. I came back persuaded more than ever before that there are opportunities more abundant than any place else in the world."

Premier Borden's first day "at home" was a notable one in every respect. Following the reception at the City Hall at noon, he drove to the Exhibition grounds, and formally declared the Dominion Fair open. Afterwards he made a short address at the directors' luncheon, at which Sir Wilfrid Laurier was also in attendance, and then adjourning to the lawn in front of the directors' building, had his photograph taken in company with Sir Wilfrid, the two statesmen standing on either side of President Bates of the Exhibition Association, and in the centre of a group of Cabinet Ministers, members of Parliament and prominent citizens.

At the directors' luncheon, Sir Wilfrid Laurier took occasion to welcome the Premier home in a happy manner.

"I avail myself with very great pleasure of the opportunity given me," said Sir Wilfrid on being asked to respond to a toast, "because it gives me an opportunity to tender the welcome of His Majesty's loyal opposition to the Prime Minister on his return from England. The Prime Minister and myself do not always see eye to eye, but I trust that the differences in the future will not be so great as in the past. I am glad the Prime Minister is back in such good condition, as he seems to be in, and so ably fit for battle. He seems to have survived the dangers of London hospitality and the lesser dangers of the suffragists' encroachments."

Origin of Postage Stamps.

Postage stamps first came into use in Great Britain about the year 1839-40. The adhesive stamp such as we know today was made experimentally by James Chalmers in his printing office at Dundee, Scotland, in August, 1834. The idea gained favor at once, and in 1837 the commissioners of the post-office authorized their general employment. From Great Britain the invention spread over the continent and the world.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

LABOR MEN MEET.

Guelph Is Scene of Annual Gathering of Dominion Trades Congress.

Guelph, Sept. 10.—There was no session of the Dominion Trades Congress yesterday afternoon, but instead the delegates accepted the hospitality of the reception committee of the local Trades and Labor Council and paid a visit to the provincial prison farm. Officials of the C.P.R. supplied a special train free of charge for the purpose, and nearly every delegate took advantage of the trip.

They left the depot in the city at 2.15 and were let off at the crossing on the prison grounds. They were met by Mr. Armstrong, who conducted the party to the various points of interest around the farm.

The majority of the visitors had heard about the place, and were very anxious to learn all they could about it, how it was conducted and under what conditions the men worked. They were amazed at the manner in which the prisoners were treated, and it was the general opinion that no better means of treatment could be devised.

The afternoon was very hot and it was an interesting spectacle to see the delegates walking around the farm with their coats on their arms.

Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, and Keir Hardie, British M.P., accompanied the party and were delighted at what they saw. After a trip around among the buildings and the various works under way, the train returned to the city at 4 o'clock.

TO CALL SENATE.

Taft May Have Special Session to Consider Mexico.

Washington, Sept. 10.—It is generally believed in official circles here that Congress will be convened in extra session on Oct. 7, to deal with the situation in Mexico. President Taft has already notified the Mexican Government that he will send troops across the border unless American citizens in Mexico are better protected in the future, and Congress will be asked to stand by the administration.

All army officers have been ordered to rejoin their regiments and a number of coasting vessels have been secured for the transport service. The situation is regarded as critical.

U. S. Officers to Scene of Battle.

Marfa, Texas, Sept. 10.—Ajinaga, Mexico, opposite Presidio, Texas, is being attacked from two sides by 400 Mexican rebels. The battle commenced at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. A bullet from the Mexican side struck an American at Presidio, piercing his hip. A party of U. S. officers left Marfa for the scene of the engagement early last night. Marfa is fifty miles from the border.

Governor Wilson on Tariff.

New York, Sept. 10.—Governor Wilson made two tariff speeches yesterday afternoon, one at the tariff exhibit, and the other at an open air meeting in Union Square. At the tariff exhibit, Governor Wilson said:

"We are preventing the prosperity of the United States, for you will observe that articles of American manufacture are sold much cheaper in other countries than we can buy them, which shows that America already is able to compete with foreign markets, at the same time taxing ourselves."

To his auditors in Union Square, Governor Wilson said:

"I would hesitate to advocate radical reductions in our tariff schedules if I thought it would interfere with the prosperity of the average American, but I believe it will double and treble our prosperity."

Governor Wilson declared that in the main protected industries paid less wages than unprotected industries.

He pointed to an advance of from 30 to 40 per cent. in the price of meat within the past ten years, while during the same period the price of meat in London had stood absolutely still.

A Bid For Trade.

London, Sept. 10.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Dr Stresmag, one of the managers of the powerful Hansa League of German Merchants and Manufacturers, will leave for America to-day to attend the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce at Boston and afterwards will proceed to Toronto, where he will address a meeting of Canadian and German business men.

The meeting is called for the purpose of organizing a German-Canadian Commercial League, which will maintain an active organization in both Canada and Germany, and will aim at the systematic development of trade between the two.

Toronto Man Fined at Border.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 10.—H. Lauine of Maria street, Toronto, was fined $50 by Magistrate Fraser for making false representations to immigration authorities.

Accompanied by Morris Rubenstein, who had a passport belonging to Jacob Robsky, Toronto, and Mrs. Rubenstein, whom Lauine claimed to be his wife. Lauine was arrested. He told the court the woman was his sister and that he was bringing her to Canada to nurse his better-half, who was ill.

The Rubensteins were deported.

Mrs. Bateman Killed by Hatchet.

Oshawa, Sept. 10.—The inquest into the death of old Mrs. John Bateman, which was to have been resumed yesterday, has been postponed until Thursday evening, when the top portion of the skull of the unfortunate woman may be exhibited to the jury.

The autopsy indicated that death was probably due to blows from a hatchet or axe, the whole back of the head being crushed in.

Fell 18 Inches and Died.

Orangeville, Sept. 10.—That James Dale, Caledon farmer, found dead in the barn of the Alexandra Hotel, was killed by a fall from a chair on Tuesday night, Sept. 3, was the verdict returned by Coroner Hendry's jury last night. Although he fell only about 18 inches, the manner in which he pitched forward caused his neck to be broken.

Wheat Nearly All Cut.

Winnipeg, Sept. 10.—With the weather settled down to what promises to be a fine spell, harvesting is now progressing rapidly. General reports indicate better harvesting conditions than have existed so far, and with a moon last night prospects for a settled spell of fair weather are good. Apparently finding its level after variations of the last few days, the barometer remained steady Sunday and yesterday.

Reports received from all over the three prairie provinces indicate that harvesting is general, except in a few isolated cases on low-lying lands, where it will be a couple of days before a resumption will be made. There is no doubt that farmers have made far better progress than appeared possible under trying circumstances. Many districts report wheat all cut and quite half the oat crop is safe. Short straw has contributed much to speedy harvesting and has also reduced to a minimum the labor shortage which still exists. Threshing from the stook is badly handicapped by the soft ground after repeated rains.

Peculiar Death of Workman.

Toronto, Sept. 10.—William Crandall, a rivet holder, while at work on a new building which is in the process of construction at 188 West King street, had a tiny steel flake from the rivet he was holding fly into his neck. He died in less than two minutes from strangulation. When the splinter lodged in his neck he was seen to throw up his hands and exclaim that something had hit him. All the time he was fighting for breath. The body was removed to the morgue and an inquest will be opened. Crandall was 20 years of age and boarded on John street.

Murder and Suicide.

Ottawa, Sept. 10.—After refusing for the second time inside of twelve hours to tell Arthur Dupuis that she liked him, Mary Rose Fontaine was murdered by her rejected lover shortly after eight o'clock yesterday morning.

The tragedy occurred a short distance from the village of St. Joseph d'Orleans, eight miles from this city, in the County of Russell, and the murderer after committing his crime turned the double-barrelled Winchester rifle upon himself and committed suicide.

Mountain Tunnel of Eight Miles.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 10.—It is understood in well-informed railway circles here that the vast improvements in building the double track of the C.P.R. between Calgary and Vancouver, to be carried out during the next four years, will include the driving of a double trac ktunnel a little over eight miles long through the summit of the Selkirks, in order to eliminate the steep grades over the Rogers pass, the scene of many dangerous snowslides.

Death List Is Now Seven.

Newark, N.J., Sept. 10.—The death list resulting from the accident at the motordrome Sunday, when Eddie Hasha crashed into the grand stand on his machine during a motor-cycle race, was increased to seven yesterday by the death of E. Barnett, whose skull was fractured.

Three other victims, two of them boys under fourteen years of age, are not expected to survive. The coroner has decided an inquest unnecessary.

Coal 8,000,000 Tons Short.

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—Officials of the big coal companies say that many of the miners who stopped work on April 1 have not returned to their places, and that because of lack of labor anthracite production will fall short about five million tons.

This, together with the shortage caused by the two and a half months' cessation of work, brings the year's shortage to eight million tons.

THE WORLD'S WORK DEPENDS ON THE WORLD'S DIGESTION

From the captain of industry to the hod carrier—from milady in the auto to the woman with the scrubbing brush—the accomplishments of every one of us depend absolutely on the accomplishments of our stomachs. Backed by a good digestion, a man can give the best that is in him. When his stomach fails, he becomes a weakling.

To this loss of power no one need submit. Right habits of eating, drinking, sleeping and exercise, aided by Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, will restore and maintain the full efficiency of the human mind and body.

Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets contain the active principles needed for the digestion of every kind of food. They go to the assistance of the weakened stomach, and enable the sufferer, right from the start, to assimilate and get the benefit of the food eaten. With this assistance, the digestive organs regain their tone, and soon the use of the tablets is no longer necessary.

If your stomach is not working properly, try Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, 50c. at your druggist's. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 145

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—Government estimates regarding wheat corresponded almost exactly with figures computed in advance here today by private crop experts. The showing was a bearish one, and resulted in a fresh breaking of the low price record for the season. Prices at the close, tho steady, were ⅛c to ⅜c net lower. Latest trading left corn unchanged to ⅛c down, oats up a shade to ⅛c to ⅜c, and provisions varying from Saturday's level to 12½c decline.

The Liverpool market closed today ⅛d lower than Saturday on wheat and ⅛d higher on corn. Berlin wheat closed ½c higher, Budapest ⅜c higher, and Antwerp ⅜c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—There was a good demand from foreign buyers for new crop Manitoba spring wheat at a further reduction in prices of 3d to 6d per quarter, but on the further decline in Winnipeg exporters accepted bids for 400,000 bushels for October-November shipment. The demand for old crop wheat was also fair at a good premium over new. A good business continues to be done in oats over the cable, and the local market is strong. There is a good demand for ocean grain room, and rates are steadily advancing. Considerable business has already been done for shipment from St. John, N.B., this winter. The foreign demand for spring wheat flour is increasing, and a fair amount of business was done. The local market is steady. Millfeed is active and firm. Demand for butter good. Cheese active, but firm. Exports for the week were 64,695 boxes, against 68,816 last year. Eggs active. Demand for provisions fair.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 7 were 1300 cattle, 4600 sheep and lambs, 2409 hogs and 400 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 700 cattle, 2100 sheep and lambs, 1460 hogs and 200 calves.

A firmer feeling prevailed in the market for cattle this morning owing to the smaller supplies offered than a week ago, and the scarcity of choice steers. Choice steers sold as high as $7, while full loads of good stock brought $6.50, and fair $5.50 per 100 pounds. The demand from canners for bulls and cows was good, of which the supply was fair, but owing to the keener competition prices for such ruled 25c per 100 higher.

The tone of the market for lambs was weaker and prices since this day week show a decline of 25c for Ontario stock and 25c to 50c for Quebec. A feature of this trade of late has been the demand from Ontario packers for supplies in this market, and some large lots were shipped to Toronto at the latter end of last week. At the above reduction there was a good demand, and the trade was active. Ontario lambs sold at from $6.25 to $7, and Quebec lambs at $5.25 to $5.75 per 100. In sheep, the feeling is steady, as supplies are just about equal to the requirements, and prices show no change. The demand for calves was good, owing to the small supply.

The market for live hogs was unchanged, notwithstanding the fact that prices were higher in Toronto. The supply is sufficient to fill requirements, and a steady trade is doing at $8.25 to $8.75 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars, for selected lots.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $7; do., medium, $5 to $6; do., common, $4 to $4.25; canners, $2.75 to $3; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5 to $5.25; do., medium, $3.75 to $4; do., bulls, $2.50 to $5; milkers, choice, each, $60 to $70; do., common and medium, each, $40 to $50; springers, $30 to $35.

MAINE TURNS BACK.

State Goes Republican Again by a Small Plurality.

Portland, Me., Sept. 10—Maine turned back to the Republican party in the state election yesterday, William T. Haines of Waterville being elected governor over Governor Frederick W. Plaisted, his Democratic opponent, who sought a second term, while the Republicans regained one of the two congressional districts lost to the Democrats two years ago. The new Legislature is expected to have a small Republican majority, although returns before midnight were not sufficient to show whether former Congressman Edwin C. Burleigh, Republican, or Senator Obadiah Gardner, Democrat, will be sent to the United States Senate for the term beginning next March.

Returns for governor from 550 out of 634 election districts gave Haines, Republican, 66,121; Plaisted, Democrat, 62,127.

The corresponding vote for 1910 was: Fernald, Republican, 60,556; Plaisted, Democrat, 67,501.

These returns show a Republican gain of 9 per cent. and a Democratic loss of 8 per cent. If the same percentage is maintained throughout the state, Haines' election is indicated by about 3,750 plurality, compared with 8,650 given Plaisted in 1910.

The Congressmen elected are: First district—Asher C. Hinds of Portland, Republican. Second district—D. J. McGillicuddy of Lewiston, Democrat. Third district—Forest Goodwin of Skowhegan, Republican. Fourth district—F. E. Guernsey of Dover, Republican. Hinds, McGillicuddy and Guernsey were re-elected.

RITCHIE COMPANY.

A rich display of the season's newest goods was made to-day by this firm who have been serving the people of this district continually for more than half a century. Mr. Reid, the managing director of the company, and Mr. Poste, the manager of the Carpet and House Furnishing section have recently returned from a visit to the leading manufacturing centres of Europe where they bought many of the beautiful goods displayed to-day.

The third floor was beautifully decorated with silk and velour draperies of which this department makes a specialty. Drapes of all kinds for doors or windows are made to order to suit any taste. There was also a magnificent showing of Templeton's noted rugs, and a most ingenious appliance has been imported from the United States for showing these. One hundred and thirty rugs are carried on this rack and can all be seen by a customer in a few minutes. The new rugs are very beautiful, many of these having been selected by Mr. Poste at the factories in England and Scotland. We also noticed a remarkably fine display of Eiderdown quilts imported from the largest factory for the manufacture of these in England.

Coming down one floor to the beautiful Millinery Parlors we were taken in hand by Miss Minore, the popular head of this department and shown the latest productions. We cannot attempt to describe the hats but will endeavor to give a few of the leading features. Large numbers of the hats are imported direct from the leading modistes abroad, and many are designed and produced in their own work rooms. Miss Thompson, the head trimmer, is considered one of the best in Canada.

Feathers in great variety will be a great feature of the season's millinery, including the large willowy ostrich plumes and aigrettes, and the beautiful Paradise and Ospreys, as well as wings, long quills, Pheasant and fancy feather effects in great variety. All black hats, and black and white in combination, will be very popular. The new shades are evique (on the purple tints) lime (on the amber shadings) while taupe, cerise, brown, blues, and the rose shadings will all be worn.

Many of the smaller shapes are quite high and some are trimmed very flat, while large hats with crowns of a medium oval will be much worn. The prevailing style of trimming on large hats is draped toward the back, and elongated shapes, very long behind, are quite correct. Hatters' plush, velvets, and silks all enter into the hats, and ribbons both plain and fancy are used in abundance. We saw some lovely fur hats and hats trimmed with fur, and others with beautiful flowers in the autumn tints. We saw a large variety of hats for misses and children and altogether the exhibit was worthy of any large store in Canada.

The Ladies' ready to wear department is well stocked with all that is new in Costumes, Cloaks, Coats, Skirts, Raincoats, Blouses, Corsets and Undergaraments. The winter coats are very comfortable looking, many of them being made from soft woven cloths.

The styles are long, reaching to the bottom of the dress. The suit coats are longer than formerly and the skirts somewhat fuller especially around the bottom, where more pleats are used. The manager informed us that business keeps steadily increasing in ready to wear garments, as they are being better made and more beautifully tailored each season.

Silks, we are informed, will be quite the fashion this season for all sorts of house and evening dresses, and we saw some remarkably beautiful patterns in rich heavy brocades suitable for evening wear and wedding dresses. Shot effects in silks are very popular, and in the new suitings, whipcords and coteles are the correct weaves.

Miss Peterson, who has made such a success of the dressmaking department, is again on duty and already has many orders booked ahead.

We must not fail to mention the exquisite laces and Lace Collars and Cuffs of which there was such a beautiful showing. These are made by hand by the Irish peasant women.

Also direct from Ireland has come the lovely linens, including such choice designs from The Old Bleach Linen Co., of Randalstown in damask cloths with napkins to match, towels, tea cloths, d'oylies, tray cloths, etc.

We took a walk through the Men's Outfitting Department, and all through the various departments one gathers both information and pleasure that well repays a visit and makes us still more proud of the oldest and largest Belleville store.

MISS CAMPBELL.

As usual, Miss Campbell's millinery parlors were the attraction for many of the fair sex, who, during the day, thronged the premises. This well known millinery establishment had a most beautiful and up to date display of ladies' head wear.

The hats this fall are exceptionally flat, but quite large. There is an unusually great variety of the silk fabrics used in this season's millinery. The trend of fashion is strongly towards corded silks, especially the whipcord and unout effects. A very fashionable and stylish hat is the Gaby Deslys, a new Gainsborough hat of black velvet with aigrette trimmings. The Marquis hat is a new shape of black velvet plush with velvet facing and touches of yellow velvet. The wide trim picturesque model is a headgear of exceptional design. The Gage hat, as usual, is very popular. The display of millinery by Miss Campbell is such that all cannot but be suited.

MISSES BULGER.

The Misses Bulger opened their new Millinery Parlors to-day with a charming display of all the latest novelties in the millinery trade. This is the season of becomingness. Styles are new and changed, but above all, becoming, and grace and beauty mark every design shown here. Cerise, taupe and burnt orange are among the leading shades, while black and white are also good. A very stylish hat is of black velvet faced with pink. Four-fold black maline is laid outside, falling over the brim, one large silk rose on left side. Another pretty draped hat of taupe and burnt orange has pointed loop on left side and large fancy wing in front. In hat shapes also there is a great variety both in material and design. All are smart and wearable. You will be more convinced than ever of this fact when you see the new season's millinery display shown by these young ladies.

McCRODAN & SILLS.

Winter has already commenced—the millinery trade and the spacious showroom of the Misses McCrodan & Sill was crowded with enthusiastic admirers of the various artistic models from Paris, London and New York, also beautiful designs from their own workroom. By the side of the small and medium-sized hat we see enormous flat shapes that shade the face—any number of variations in the nimiche, bell-shapes, berets and capelines, of soft felt. Velvet and plush predominate; there is a great deal of velour, frappe, hatters' plush, silk felt castor, which is a new kind of hairy felt. Many of the new models are either entirely black or black and white. There are also new shades of gray, brown and blue, for which there will be a great demand. Floral trimmings are used on the autumn hats—Callot roses of silk or velvet, chrysanthemums in rich dark shades and dainty flowers bordered with fur to produce a more wintry effect.

The most elegant of the new hats are adorned with sumptuous ospreys, self-colored and tinted ostrich feathers—also marabon is in great favor.

To meet the demands of school life ?

Study taxes the brain and nerves of the growing youngsters.

Certainly, that's natural and expected; and if fed right, they grow rosy in body and hearty in brain.

SHALL I WIN HER?

THE STORY OF A WANDERER

By JAMES GRANT

Author of "The Romance of War," "Under the Red Dragon," "Fairer than A Fairy," etc.

In the upper story he placed Mariqua and myself. The lower he appropriated to his men and their horses. I had not yet procured the long coveted arms, and even the assegai had been taken from me by Vonga; but I had, by a lucky chance, become the proprietor of a small hatchet, and a package containing forty rounds of rifle ammunition, with percussion caps, and these I secreted under an old Dutch cabinet which stood in a corner of my sleeping room.

I examined this new locality with a keen eye. Northward and eastward of the ruined station rose grand and towering cliffs of basaltic rock from whence sloped banks of the greenest and smoothest grass.

Southward and westward—the way I must pursue if I ever escaped—stretched a vast plain, dotted by groves of trees. The country for many miles around was unpleasantly open for a fugitive! but I soon became aware that, deeming me sufficiently secure by the great distance to which they had conveyed me, Vonga and his men relaxed much of their vigilance, and there seldom passed a night on which I could not have escaped with ease, but for want of a horse and arms.

Without the latter, wherewith to feed myself, and defend me against man and beast, in such a country I was helpless as a child.

On the morning after that wild orgie which I have striven to describe in the last chapter, I felt only mortification and compunction for the part I had been compelled to play and the way I had deceived Mariqua

I would have fled from her, and from myself; but I was a prisoner in the hands of the remorseless Vonga, and had to remain with her and my remorse, like an Ixion on his wheel.

"Oh, Clarice—Clarice Haywood!" I exclaimed, and strueck my hands together in passionate grief.

By the endearments I had been obliged to lavish on her, I had deluded the poor Griqua maid into trusting as well as loving me. Was I the pure and earnest lover the high bred English girls thought me—the preux chevalier that Douglas and Fanny deemed me?

It seemed to me that I was only protracting my life at the expense of my honor and so my mental misery increased as the weeks of October stole wearily away.

In the end, however, I began to have a brotherly feeling for my gentle savage—never a warmer one; yet she filled me with an undefinable fear, for I knew that if once abandoned, in her wild despair she would kill herself or me, or both, if she had an opportunity. I grew ennuyed and sick of her hourly presence, though she was thankful if I permitted her to kiss even my hand, which she used to do with a bearing of respect and love that mingled gracefully with pride.

In my moments of sadness and reflection, the poor girl would often ask me, tenderly and lovingly, in her strange, soft language—"Of what are you thinking?"

"Why do you ask?"

"You are so very sad and silent—well, of what?"

"Of you," I would reply, and then feel shame for the flattering falsehood that brought a flush of joy to her olive cheek, and a strange light in her soft and beautiful eyes.

I was not, however such a bad fellow as I then believed myself to be. Times there were when I thought of speaking of her religion—of endeavoring to teach her something of the Trinity, and of the God of the Christians; but how was I to plunge into the mystery of theological metaphysics? and how bring before an ignorant and unlettered girl such holy puzzles as those which bewilder and set by the ears the most learned in the land?

I shrunk from the task. Besides, was it not better to leave her in ignorance than by enlightening her seek to confound and disgrace myself?

Great terror I had of the return of Sandilli. I knew the odious and perilous tasks he would expect me to perform and so felt a growing anxiety for a speedy departure. Thus I panted with an emotion of clamorous alarm in my heart to be gone.

After the arrival of the 12th, or East Suffolk Regiment, from the Mauritius, and the victorious affair of the Water Kloof—though I knew nothing of it—mounted Caffres arrived frequently with messages from Sandilli to Vonga. Great events were evidently on the tapis, and the ferocious old savage who had me in custody now, viewed me with such peculiar aversion and malignity, that I felt certain our arms were proving successful, and knew that, but for the protection of Sandilli and the presence of Mariqua, he would soon have made short work of me.

One morning—oh, I shall never, never forget it!—about daybreak, a deserter from the Cape Mounted Rifle Regiment—Jan Cupido, one of the same rascals who assisted Mark Sharkeigh in the abduction of Clarice and her sister—arrived at the missionary station with a message for Vonga. Whence he had come, or whether about me, I know not; but his message, or tidings, whatever they were seemed to excite the greatest interest among the Caffre gaolers.

His horse he had left at the gate accoutred and bridled, with his double-barrelled regimental rifle hanging in its usual place by a bucket and sling to the right of the saddle. Here was a golden opportunity and not a moment to be lost.

I looked at Mariqua, she was sound asleep on a couch of skins. Her olive cheek was resting on her tapered olive arm—her long lashes seemed sealed over her eyes. Poor thing! she looked very innocent with a pet fawn antelope nestling beside her. Dark though she was, Mariqua was indeed beautiful, and some there are who might have loved her. I gave her a farewell glance; for an instant an emotion of compunction came over me. The next saw me securing my ammunition and the hatchet, with which I was resolved to cleave to the teeth the first Caffre who discovered or opposed me.

Opening the window softly I slipped outside and dropped lightly to the ground—a fall of only seven feet or so. A gap in the hedge of prickly pears and geraniums, forming the compound of the house favored my further exit and while I panted rather than breathed, I crept round to where the horse stood pawing the earth, impatient to be fed.

My blood seemed to boil and my veins to tingle, so great was my excitement as I seized the double bridle sprang upon his back, and though without spurs, urged the well trained animal to a furious gallop, I knew not, and cared not in what direction so that I placed a comfortable distance—some odds at least—between myself and the men of old Vonga.

But I had scarcely ridden two hundred yards before I heard a wild and wailing cry. It was the voice of Mariqua, and a pang shot through my heart as I recalled how often she had thraetened to destroy herself if she was ever abandoned by me; but her voice—if she raised it again—was drowned in the fiend-like yells of others, as the men of Vonga rushed like furies to their arms and horses.

At last I was armed, mounted, at liberty and free to make a struggle man to man for the life that heaven had given me.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The memory of Bruine Kasteel's fate, and a terror of being subjected to something similar, added wings to my flight and keenness to my despair at the thought of being retaken Compunction for leaving my mock wife I had now none. I rode on, on, blindly on, though the Cape Rifle horse was far from fresh; but to lighten the weight he carried, I cut off and threw away the valise of his late proprietor, taking care to drop it into a pool of water, lest it found it might serve to indicate my track.

This was perhaps a useless precaution, as the country was so open that for a time I was distinctly visible to those who were now leaving the Moravian station in hot haste, with horse and spear, ad musket to pursue me.

I rode on blindly, longing for shelter and the friendly obscurity of night; but the time as yet was only sunrise, and I had a long and too probably a perilous day before me. I had the start of my pursuers by a few miles, but their horses were fresh from the stall, while mine was weary, and I knew that the Caffres would follow any track or trail I left with deadly instinct and unwearying tenacity.

I reached the cover of a thick grove of trees—chestnuts and mimosas—and made the horse pursue for more than a mile the bed of a runnel that traversed the road, so that all trace of his hoofs—my trail—should be broken off. Unbitting him then, I knee-haltered him, relaxed the saddle girth, and slinging the rifle over my shoulder, clambered into a thick tree at some distance there to conceal myself in case of the thicket being, as I expected, surrounded and searched. In that case I had resolved to permit the horse to be taken without resistance, and would be only too happy if I escaped undiscovered on my perch.

High up among the branches I should be quite unseen, and from thence could see around me and below. The life I had led for some years past as a trader with the Caffres, and a complete knowledge of their character, made me leave no precaution untried to baffle them.

On examining the rifle, both barrels proved to be loaded and capped; thus, I had two shots more than my forty rounds which I now took from their paper wrappers and prepared for service. They were luckily Government ammunition, and suited exactly the regimental rifle of the sable Jan Cupido.

LACE AND FORGET-ME-NOTS

AN INSECT-PROOF PAINT

Get some boiled linseed oil, add gradually powdered charcoal, stirring all the time with a stick, until thicker than ordinary paint. Before using, thin out with turpentine. This is excellent for chicken-coops, frames, etc. Always paint the portions which rest on the ground, then they will last for years.

TRY THIS

Instead of washing your lamp chimney, rub it clean with tissuepaper. If stained or smoked, moisten the paper with paraffin. Polish with a soft, dry cloth. Treated in this way it is not so liable to break.

Old Colors of the Black Watch

To the strains of "Lochaber no more," a guard of honor marched up the nave of St. Giles' Cathedral, Edinburgh, with the old colors of the 2nd Batt. Black Watch (Royal Highlanders), and deposited them into the keeping of the cathedral authorities. These colors were brought back from India by the King, who had presented the battalion with new colors. It is 170 years since the Black Watch, the old 42nd first paraded in a field between Tay Bridge and Aberfeldy.

PRETTY LINEN FROCK

Nothing is in better taste for the summer resort than simple linen or gingham frocks made from the above model. Crystal buttons to match the dress are amongst fashion's best decrees.

Shirriff's True Vanilla

Imagine how much more delicious cakes taste when flavored with real vanilla extract. You can make certain of using real extract of finest Vanilla beans by buying Shirriff's True Vanilla.

Fatal Result of Boys' Carelessness

Young Man's Death Resulted from Boys Breaking Insulators on the Power Company's Poles.

There was a serious accident that occurred in the town of Lindsay that should be taken to heart by all parents and school teachers.

North of the town there is a crossing of the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railway Co's. tracks. Near this crossing the Light Heat & Power Co. of Lindsay have high tension wires. In grading the railroad, the railway companies have partially covered the poles, bringing the wires closer to the ground. Some careless boys threw stones at the insulators and broke some, the wire then sagged down to about five feet from the ground, but not far enough to warn the Power Co., that there was trouble on the lines. Two men were leaving the track at this point and not noticing the wire one man came in contact with it, being instantly electrocuted.

In this way the careless prank of some boys caused the death of a man. The Power Companies build their lines with all possible care and safeguard the pubic in every way, bu careless persons are continually breaking insulators and endangering the lives of the public and causing loss of time and money to manufacturing concerns.

Much good would result if parents and school teachers would impress on the boys the great danger and destrucion that is caused by breaking insulators. This is a criminal offence and punishable by a penitentiary sentence.

King is Best Royal Wing Shot in Europe

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The King is back at Balmoral after one of his popularity hunting trips to Lancashire. This is bad news for the Scottish wild birds, as the King is a dead shot. All the papers are full of accounts of his exploits on the grouse moors, and now it will be the turn of the partridges to die for the sake of their King.

The Royal party uses twenty-four retriever dogs, and is accompanied by fourteen beaters. Some days 300 brace of birds are killed. On August 18, when the King was shooting over the Duke of Devonshire's moor, 790 brace, or nearly two hundred birds to each gun, were killed.

The King is said to be still using a pair of guns given him as a wedding present nineteen years ago. He is a particularly cool shot, unlike his father, who, it is said, was rather nervous and generally fired too soon. Since the death of King Carlos of Portugal King George is regarded as the best royal wing shot in Europe.

Leader Laurier Toasted Premier

OTTAWA, September, 9.— Right Hon. Robert Laird Borden's first day "home" was a notable one in every respect. Following an enthusiastic civic reception at the City Hall at noon, when an address of welcome was tendered him on behalf of the citizens of the Capital, he drove to the exhibition grounds, and formally declared the Dominion Fair open. Afterwards he made a short address at the director's luncheon, at which Sir Wilfrid Laurier was also in attendance and then adjourning to the lawn in front of the directors' building had his photograph take in company with Sir Wilfrid, the two statesmen standing on either side of President Bate of the exhibition association and in the centre of a group of cabinet ministers, members of Parliament and prominent citizens. At the directors' luncheon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier took occasion to welcome the premier home in a happy manner.

"I avail myself with very great pleasure of the opportunity given me" said Sir Wilfrid on being asked to respond to a toast, "because it gives me an opportunity to tender the welcome of His Majesty's Opposition to the Prime Minister on his return from England. The Prime Minister and myself do not always see eye to eye, but I trust that the differences in the future will not be so great as in the past. I am glad the Prime Minister is back in such good condition, as he seems to be in, and so ably fit for battle. He seems to have survived the dangers of London hospitality and the lesser dangers of the suffragists' encroachments."

RAILWAY MAN'S HEAD WAS CRUSHED LIKE AN EGG SHELL

Frederick Staples, Assistant Yard Master, was Caught Between Two Cars this Morning—He was Engaged in Fixing a Coupling for a Disabled Car when it was Driven Against Another Car—His Death was Instantaneous.

At an early hour this morning another life was sacrificed at the Grand Trunk Railway yard here. The victim was Frederick Staples, a yard assistant, who resided on Canifton Road. It appears that there is a siding situated just outside of the city limits near the new round house which is designated as siding for disabled cars. It was upon this siding that Staples met his untimely death He had in his hands a chain with which he intended to fasten together two cars from which the couplings had been broken off. As he stepped between the cars an engine with some more cars came upon the siding and bumped into the cars where Staples was standing. The result was that the cars came together before Staples could get out of the way, although we are informed that he was advised not to go between the cars until the shunting was completed. The victim's head was caught between the two cars and crushed like an egg shell. Death was no doubt instantaneous. The remains were taken from between the cars and Dr. Farley, coroner, was notified of the accident. He had the body removed to Tickell's undertaking establishment and also ordered an inquest, this being necessary under the law.

Staples was 24 years of age and married. Surviving are a widow and two small children. The victim was a man who was much thought of by his fellow workmen and his unfortunate death is regretted by all who knew him.

Mrs. Staples has been remarkably unfortunate in her married life. Twice has she been married and in each instance her husband has been killed. Her first husband was killed by a falling tree. Staples yesterday had a presentiment that something was going to happen and was loth to go to work at night. During the day from some cause he was unable to take his accustomed sleep.

The Inquest

At 11 o'clock this morning the jury composed of Messrs. Walter Alford, foreman; W. H. Panter, Wm. Connolly, J. B. Harker, S. E. Haight, J. Fenn, C. Rathman, F. Drake and C. J. Wills met at Tickell's undertaking establishment and after being sworn in viewed the remains and also heard the evidence of Sergt. Naphin as to being instructed to procure a coroner's jury. The enquiry was then adjourned until Friday night when evidence will be submitted.

Mr. P. J. M. Anderson County Attorney represented the Crown and Mr. T. H. Coppin was present on behalf of the G. T. R.

Cable Rates Not Yet Arranged

Special

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—Hon. L. P. Pelletier does not intend to rest satisfied with the cable rate reductions so far obtained by him. "Let it be understood," he said to-day, "that Canada has not accepted these reductions as final. We may agree to them, but we will reserve the right to do as we think best after consultation with the sister dominions of Australia and New Zealand."

Discussing Sir J. Henneker Heaton's proposal for a two-cent-a-word rate throughout the world, Mr. Pelletier said: "It is too big a step and there is no use talking of it right away."

College War Cries Heard Long Ago

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—When the college men rush on the football field shouting their yell, is the battle cry of old. "Originally every European university had its corps of fighting men, just as the German universities now have their societies and student en corps, and they rushed to battle, shouting their war cry both to frighten the enemy and to encourage their own body.

The oldest battle cry known is that one mentioned in the book of Judges in the Bible, "Percy a Percy!" was the rallying cry at Otterbourne, and the cry of "A Warwick, a Warwick," decided the fate of Banbury field.

So many cries were invented by the different great British lords that in 1495 parliament passed a special law forbidding these cries, on the ground that they produced disorder, allowing but one battle cry, "St. George and the King!"

The cries "Croom-a-boo!" and "Butler-a-boo!" were specifically prohibited. "Abo!" was an Irish cry in very early times. "Laundarg Abo!" "The Bloody Hand!" "Strike for O'Neil!" were the battle cries of the wild followers of Shan O'Neil when he defied the forces of Elizabeth.

At the siege of Jaffa, in Palestine, the cry of Richard 1, was "Guyenn au Roi d'Angleterre!" "Dieu et mon Ire!" may have been used long before Richard 1, said "Not me, but God and our right have vanquished France."

It is held that the British national anthem is founded upon the watchword and contersign ordered through the royal navy by Henry VIII.'s lord admiral in 1545: "The watchword's in the night shall be thus—'God save King Henry'; the other shall answer, 'And long to reign over us'."

The Puritans went back to the Old Testament for their war cry, taking the cry of David, "To your tents, Oh Israel!" Cromwell's watchword was "The Lord of Hosts!"

The war cry of "Alban, Alban!" was used at the battle of the Standard, 1138, by the Celtic portion of the army of the King of Scotland.

At the battle of Hastings the Saxons first cried, "Holy Crosse, God Almighty!" The Normans cried "Notre Dame, Dieu av nous ade"—"Our Lady and God help us." During the fight the Saxons shouted, "Oucgt, oucgt!"—"out, out!"

Counterfeit Bills are Hand-Painted

Special

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 10.—The circulation of many hand-painted $10 United States notes in Chicago for several months resulted to-day in the arrest of Louis Gagmore, an artist. According to secret service operators, Gagmore confessed to painting the notes and passing them.

The counterfeit notes have found their way into many cities, and were not easy of detection because, it is said, of the deftness and talent of the artist.

The secret service officers say the counterfeit notes painted by Gagmore began to appear last January. Since then complaints have been coming in continually principally from saloonkeepers.

Gagmore confessed, it is said, that he began making the certificates in December, 1911, and had no idea how many he had passed.

Warning as to Buried Treasure

Referring to the £11,000,000 Jesuits' Buried Treasure, which was recently mentioned in bankruptcy proceedings and other rumored hoards, Colonel P. H. Fawcett, the well-known South American explorer, writes to the London press.

"As stories of treasure attract a good deal of attention and a great waste of money, it would be as well to warn would-be millionaires that the Jesuit treasure of Sacambaya, Bolivia, which has received such publicity lately, has been familiarly discussed in that country for a number of years, and that a great deal of good money has from time to time been in vain spent in looking for it, possibly owing to the fact that a Bolivian gentleman, some 30 or 40 years old, did unearth somewhere in the locality, and without any flourish of trumpets, a hoard of Jesuit gold worth about 11,000,000 Bolivian currency, or some £900,000, establishing his family in affluence and influence.

"The hoard actually represents just about what would have been obtained from 32 gold mines over a space of seven years—the reputed source of the Sacambaya treasure—as goldbearing reefs in this region produce from 1-2 oz. to 1 1-2 oz. per ton, and alluvial deposits about 9d. per cubic yard, and were worked very primitively.

"Another treasure which continues to attract attention is that of Cocos Island. In the national museum of Cosa Rica is a tree trunk brought from the island and deeply engraved with the inscription. 'The bird has flown.' There is, moreover, some ground for believing that one of the two treasures reputed to have been buried on this island was really secreted on another island which bore the same name.

"It is, of course, sad to destroy the romance of buried treasures, but it is an infinitely sadder thing to carry out a search, always difficult, only to find it has been anticipated. Cocos Island and Sacambaya treasures, if they ever existed, seem to fall in this category."

Infantile Paralysis Is in Toronto

There Have Been at Least Four Deaths, and Other Cases Are Reported.

Special

TORONTO, Sept. 11.—Besides the death from infantile paralysis which has been reported from Gledhill avenue in the outskirts of the city, there have been at least three other cases during the past month, one of them fatal. While these are the only cases reported to the Medical Health Department, there have undoubtedly been more than that in Toronto, as many medical men are not aware that infantile paralysis is, under the new Health Act, a disease which must be reported to the authorities.

As in other cities, the coming of infantile paralysis or anterior poliomyelitis has been followed by fatalities in Toronto, where death does not occur, the victims are sometimes left partially disabled.

A Laborer Hired Fifty-Nine Autos

Special

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 10.—Eleven hundred dollars, the savings of a dozen years, was spent Monday night, by Guiseppi Annello, a laborer, when his daughter, Mary, sixteen, became the bride of Vito Campanello, nineteen.

Fifty-nine motor cars hired by Annello whirled the wedding guests over the city's boulevards, and the festivities ended in an elaborate banquet and ball. Annello said he had been saving for the event ever since Mary was a wee child in Sicily.

Cardinal Patrick Rebukes a Lady

ROME, September 10.—The Cardinal Patriarch of Venice, acting on the Pope's orders, recently openly denounced the prevailing fashions in women's dress, especially tight skirts and transparent blouses, and threatened to expel from church all immodestly dressed women.

Yesterday while the Patriarch was administering confirmation in St. Mark's, he noticed a fashionably dressed lady in the congregation wearing an open-work blouse. The Cardinal interrupted the service and sent a prelate to warn the lady that he would not continue unless she left the church. The lady indignantly expostulated, and pointed out that there were several paintings adorning the church representing scantily dressed angels and martyrs, but the prelate, not convinced by this argument, insisted that the lady should hide the transparency of her dress with a scarf. This, she unwillingly did, ond the service was resumed.

Mexican Rebels Destroy Railways

TUSCON, Ariz., September 10.—Emilio Camapa to-day served notice on the Southern Pacific officials at Tucson that he would destroy the railroad system in Western Mexico if the company persisted in hauling Federals. He began at once by burning a passenger train captured Sunday at Villa Verde, on the branch line from Maco to Cananea, after allowing a coach of passengers to roll down hill into Maco. He is now engaged in hitching an engine to the telegraph poles and pulling them down.

Fighting Near Frontier.

MARFA, Texas, September 10.—Ojinaga, Mexico, opposite Presido, Texas, is being attacked from two sides by 400 Mexican rebels. The battle commenced at 3 o'clock this afternoon. A bullet from the Mexican side struck an American at Presido, piercing his hip. A party of United States officers left Marfa for the scene of the engagement early to-night. Marfa is fifty miles from the border.

General Sanchez is in command of the Federals defending Ojinaga.

RETURNS WITH FORTUNE

After Leaving Family Destitute for Ten Years.

HOUGHTON, Mich., September 10.—After an absence of ten years, during which time his wife and eight children were left to their own resources, Barney McEnany has returned to Hurontown, near here, bringing with him $100,000. In consequence the family is holding a joyous re-union. McEnany is doing everything possible to make up for the years of privation his family suffered. He became prosperous through a mining venture in Canada.

Sixteen years ago McEnany brought his family to Hurontown. He failed to prosper, however, and finally left. During all of his absence his family got no trace of him until a friend saw McEnany in Canada and informed his wife.

ARCHBISHOP McNEIL

Archbishop McNiel, the new Archbishop of Toronto, was born in Cape Breton on the 23rd of November, 1851. He was ordained priest on the 12th of April, 1879, and was consecrated Bishop on the 20th of October, 1895, at Antigonish, but for the Diocese of St. George's, Newfoundland. He was nominated Archbishop of Vancouver on the 14th of February, 1910. His education was received at the College of the Propaganda in Rome, where he took his doctorate. When he returned to Nova Scotia he was made professor and afterwards rector of the Novitiate of the College of Antigonish, where he did splendid work in education, until he was taken away to be made Bishop of Newfoundland. The Apostolic Prefecturate to which he was appointed in the Diocese of St. George's is one of the poorest and least organized of the eastern dioceses, and where he did wonderful work with the means at hand, so when the diocese was changed from Victoria to Vancouver, and a new Archbishop was looked for, the Holy See, looking about for a man outside of the holy orders of the Oblates, who had control of that country, selected Bishop McNeil. His appointment to the archepiscopal see of Toronto was therefore merely a transfer of diocese.

AGAINST "NE TEMERE"

Evangelical Alliance Preparing For Its Campaign.

Meeting Will Be Held This Month to Arrange for National Agitation For an Amendment to the British North America Act Empowering Canada's Parliament to Enact a Uniform Marriage Law.

Toronto, Sept. 11.—Arrangements are in progress for an early meeting of the Evangelical Alliance to prepare a plan on a Dominion scale for a campaign to secure an amendment to the British North America Act to give the Federal Parliament power to enact a Dominion marriage law.

Rev. E. D. Silcox secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, stated last night that the meeting would probably be held before the end of the present month.

It promises to be one of the most important and representative Protestant gatherings of the year.

The committee has a monster petition to the Dominion Parliament for a federal marriage law, prepared last spring, as a means of counteracting the ne temere decree. The spontaneous and earnest support of the committee's work in connection with the submission of that petition to the congregations all over Canada has given the Evangelical Alliance leaders confidence that the new battle to overcome the constitutional difficulty involved in the Privy Council's adverse judgment will be supplemented with equal vigor.

Rev. Dr. McKay, editor of The Canadian Baptist said: "The marriage question having been raised cannot be allowed to drop."

Women of Ulster Sign Covenant

BELFAST, Sept. 10.—The women of Ulster are to associate themselves with the covenant which is to be sworn to by the men on September 28. a special pledge has been framed whereby the women undertake to "stand by our men folk in carrying out the solemn league covenant pledging uncompromising opposition to the present conspiracy whereby it is proposed to drive Ulster out of its cherished place in the constitution of the United Kingdom."

The pledge concludes by declaring that "We have sure confidence that God will save Ireland from this calamity."

English Lady Takes Her Life

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Society is stirred by the death to-day, apparently by suicide, of Miss Ghita Stanhope, aged 31, daughter of Commander the Hon. Henry A. S. Stanhope, uncle of Lord Stanhope, while a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Moreton Frewen, at Brede Palace in Sussex.

Miss Stanhope was found in her bedroom with the top of her head blown off, while a gun from which the cartridge had been discharged lay beside her. The trigger of the gun was tied to the bedpost with a shoe lace.

No definite explanation is given as to the reason for Miss Stanhope's act, except that Mr. and Mrs. Frewen say she has been unnerved and acting strangely since her arrival at their house.

Car Overturned Woman was Killed

TILBURY, Ont., Sept. 10—The wife of N. H. Taylor, of Chicago, was fatally hurt when the automobile she was driving ran into a ten-foot ditch on the tenth concession line of Mersea, near the town of Wheatley, late yesterday. Information of the fatality only reached here to-day, Wheatley being seven miles distant from Tilbury.

It appears that Taylor, with his wife and two children, was making a motor tour through Ontario, on his way from Chicago to Buffalo, and that between Essex and Kingsville the party lost its bearings and turned out of the regular road into that of the tenth concession. This road ends abruptly in a pile of gravel near the Romney town line, and in endeavoring to avoid the obstacle, and at the same time turn the car sharply, Mrs. Taylor caused the machine to upset. She was pinned under the car by the steering wheel and was severely crushed. Her husband sustained fractures of one arm and three ribs, but the children were uninjured except for a few scratches.

A number of men who were working in the vicinity quickly righted the overturned car and removed Taylor and his wife to a nearby house, where medical aid was summoned. Mrs. Taylor died in a few hours, apparently from internal injuries. The body was shipped to Chicago to-day, the husband accompanying it, his injuries not being sufficiently serious to prevent his removal.

WANTS EARLY SESSION

Premier Borden Anxious to Get House to Work.

He Has Declined an Invitation to Go to Halifax Fair and Hazen Will Probably Postpone Western Trip But Delay in British Naval Program May Hold Back the Meeting of Parliament—Cabinet To-day.

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—With Premier Borden in harness again and most of the Cabinet Ministers back in the administrative chairs of their Departments, political events are already shaping into a more definite course.

Already it is apparent that Mr. Borden, while realizing the tremendous amount of work to be taken up in Cabinet Council, in the way of getting legislation ready, is, nevertheless, anxious that Parliament should meet as soon as possible. For this very reason, the Premier declined a pressing invitation to go to Halifax and open the exhibition there, extended him by a delegation from his native province, who came to Ottawa to attend the banquet given in his honor last night.

Hon. J. D. Hazen, who was to have gone to the Pacific coast to look into a long-standing fisheries dispute, will likely postpone the trip until a later and more favorable date, and the first meeting of a full Cabinet since early last spring will be held this afternoon. It is expected that at its close Mr. Borden will be able to give some information as to when he considered it possible for the House to meet.

It is not very probable that should the Government decide to bring down its permanent naval policy this session, it will meet the House without that policy being decided upon. Mr. Borden, however, has said that no definite conclusion can be reached before the arrival of full and final information "which is yet to be secured from the British Admiralty." Should the information in some conceivable manner be delayed, it would seem to follow that the meeting of Parliament must be delayed also, provided, of course, it is the intention to bring down a permanent policy this session.

Developments of the next few days are expected to clear matters considerably.

MADOC.

On Monday night about 9 o'clock, a fire broke out in the barn of Dr. Sutton, in the rear of his house. When first seen the fire was well advanced and the building was soon destroyed. Some buggies, harness, etc., with a large quantity of hay, went to feed the flames. The insurance on the building was $600; on contents $400., which is not enough to cover the loss.

This morning about six o'clock a severe thunder storm set in. During the progress of the storm the barn of Mr. John Stewart, outside the village, was struck and in a short time burned to the ground. Mr. Stewart and one of his horses were stunned, but soon recovered. The insurance on building and contents amounted to $900, which does not cover the loss. Mr. Stewart had arrangements made to start threshing this morning.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

TONIGHT

Bright lines, crisp comedy, terse epigram, love and hatred and pathos, each and all are component parts of "The Bachelor's Baby," in which Etienne Girardot and little five-year-old Baby Wilson, are to be the stellar attractions when that famous New York success will be presented here. Mr. Girardot, is of course favorably known through his work in "Charley's Aunt," and as a star in his own organization.

Scenic embellishments, said to be beautiful, stage settings of a lavish nature, and sartorial appointments that will appeal to refined and tasty people, are among the promises held forth as being part of the attraction when "The Bachelor's Baby" will be offered on the local boards. Etienne Girardot and little five-year-old Baby Wilson will be the stellar attraction, and the play itself with its story of heartaches, its theme of love and its wonderful comedy lines will appeal to all.

The authors of "The Girl of My Dreams" the musical play in which Jos. M. Gaites will present John Hyams and Leila McIntyre at the Griffin Opera House on Tuesday, 17th inst. can be credited, it is said, with having succeeded admirably in showing in that original and amusing piece the delightful probabilities afforded by opportunity and necessary conditions and Nesbit and Hauerbach the authors of the book do it, too, in such a merry fashion that the audience glides through the current of the story with a joyous abandon, which is akin to the pleasures of a fascinating waltz. The music composed by Karl Hoschna, is what might be expected from the musical creator of "Three Twins". and "Mme. Sherry," tuneful melodies, vivacious and snappy, nor does he dole out his numbers with niggard hand, or with unappealing monotony. There are a great many of them in "The Girl of My Dreams" and they are diversified and pleasing. Of the numerous song hits the most popular is "Doctor Tinkle Tinker" solo and chorus delightfully sung by Miss McIntyre. The chorus who assist her are dressed to represent toys. The quaint and pretty costumes in this number form a splendid picture.

"In "I'm Ready to Quit and Be Good," Mr. Hyams makes one of the distinct hits of the performance. "The Story of a Marionette," "The letter You Shouldn't Have Sent," "O-oh Maybe It's a Robber," "Dear Kittle Games of Guessing," and "Every Girlie Loves Me, But the Girl I love" are some of the numbers cleverly rendered by others of the company.

Altogether "The Girl of My Dreams" should prove one of the best, prettiest and wittiest productions to be seen here this season.

Thos. Walker Dead At the Age of 92

Thomas Walker, one of the oldest citizens of Campbellford, passed away on the 10th in his 93rd year.

He was born on Black Pots Farm in the parish of Old Deer, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, on March 9th, 1820. In 1845 he came to Canda, and after a short stay in Seymour township he settled on a farm on the fifth concession of Rawdon, Hastings county, where he lived for between fifty and sixty years. Mr. Walker was for many years known as one of the most intelligent, progressive and successful farmers in this district.

A liberal in politics, he was for nineteen years a member of the Council of the Conservative township of Rawdon and for thirteen years was elected Reeve by acclamation, a honor which has not been given to another in the history of the township. He was also Warden of the county. More than once he was urged to be a candidate for the Legislature, but having no liking for the bustle of political life he declined the honor.

In 1901 he disposed of his farm to his namesake and nephew, and retired with Mrs. Walker to Campbellford to spend the evening of their lives. In 1905 Mrs. Walker died.

Kindly in his disposition, generous in his dealings with his neighbors possessing an unusually sound judgment and of undoubted integrity. Mr. Walker was held in high esteem by all who knew him.

WEDDING BELLS.

HUNTER—PRINGLE

A pretty wedding took place in Bridge Street Church this morning, when Miss Hattie M. Pringle, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pringle, and the Rev. J. Bruce Hunter were united in marriage. Rev. H. S. Osborne officiated, assisted by Rev. J. P. Wilson, (former pastor of the church).

Owing to the sudden illness of the bride's father, she was given away in marriage by her uncle Mr. John Pringle, and looked very beautiful in her wedding dress of crepe over satin, trimmed with Duchesse lace and pearls, with veil and orange blossoms, carrying a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. She wore the gift of the groom a pearl ring and a pendant of pearls and olivines from her Sunday School scholars.

Miss Madeline Young made a charming maid of honor wearing a gown of pale pink covered with shadow lace, a large black picture hat and carried an armful of pink asters. Alice Sulman was a pretty little flower girl with her basket of pink and white sweet peas.

Mr. Frank Morrow of Ingersoll attended the groom and Messrs. Ed. O'Flynn and Vernon Moynes of this city, Doctor Don Wilson of Ottawa, and Ed. Webster of London ushered.

The wedding march was played by Miss Luella Hall of Napanee and during the signing of the register Mr. D. A. Cameron sang "Beloved—'Tis Morn."

Mrs. Henry Pringle wore a gown of black net trimmed with Duchesse lace and jet and carried yellow chrysanthemums. The mother of the groom was attired in a handsome black satin robe trimmed with Maltese lace.

The groom gave the bridesmaid a pearl pendant, the organist and flower girl pearl pins, and the ushers and soloist pearl stick pins.

Immediately following the ceremony he bride's parents received the guests at their residence after which the happy couple left for the east.

Upon their return they will reside in Toronto.

GIBSON—CALNAN

A charming wedding took place at Victoria, Ameliasburg on the 4th inst. the occasion being the uniting together in holy matrimony of Mr. Grant Gibson to Maud, youngest dauhter of Mr. David Calnan. The ceremony was performed at 12.30 o'clock by the Rev. C. G. Williams of Consecon. To the strains of the wedding march the bride entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her father. Very pretty indeed she looked as she stood under a beautiful arch of foliage and asters, her wedding gown being of cream satin. After congratulations, the guests proceeded to see the many costly gifts, among which was a handsome, china buffet, the gift of the bridegroom's parents. The bride's present from her father and mother being a splendid dinner set, chair from her brother, table from Mr. F. Boater, lamps, silverware etc. too numerous to mention. A sumptuous repast was served in the basement of Victoria Church, thoroughly enjoyed and in a happy mood the guests listened to the various speeches. The toast to the bride and groom was proposed by the pastor. At 3.30 the happy couple left by auto for Belleville en route to Toronto, Niagara, etc. Best wishes to them.

Preaching and Practice

"Never, never," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the course of his speech at Marieville, Quebec, on Saturday, the 7th inst., "will I raise my voice in appeals to race or religious prejudice."

Just how sincere the hon. gentleman was in this high-sounding declaration the reader may judge from the following remarks which Sir Wilfrid had made in a preceding portion of his speech, which reads as follows:

> "Then as to schools. How many times were you told that Laurier was a traitor to his race and his religion? Everyone waited to see the establishment of separate schools in Manitoba following immediately the elevation of Conservatives to power. The eyes of Castors, Nationalists and Blues were turned towards Messrs. Monk, Nantel and Pelletier; it was a solemn hour.
>
> "The opportunity offered itself early. The question of enlarging the boundaries of Manitoba arose. 'Ah,' said the people, 'now we shall get justice; Laurier is not in power.'
>
> "Then Mr. Monk spoke—Monk, the man who was going to restore all or break all. He showed that all he could break was his word. Riveted soldered to his test, nothing could make him leave it.
>
> "'The question has been settled by Laurier,' he said. (A voice in the crowd: "Monk, hypocrite!") 'Only the local Legislatures deal with it.'
>
> "He could not do better than that. It is not strange that many people regret their vote on the 21st of September. If Monk had spoken before his election as he did afterward do you think the result would have been the same? (Cries of "No, no.")

And he followed this up by saying at the close of his remarks on that subject:

> "The end that I have always set myself has been to unite the different interests in Canada, and make a united country, a united people. You say: 'We want our full rights.' BUT YOU MUST REMEMBER THAT WE ARE IN THE MINORITY, AND WHEN THE MINORITY DEMANDS ITS FULL RIGHTS IT EXPOSES ITSELF TO PECULIAR HUMILIATIONS."

If this be not a cunningly devised and wholly unfounded appeal to the racial and religious prejudices of his compatriots and co-religionists, then were the speaker's words senseless and meaningless. To say that the minority had been denied their "full rights" in regard to educational matters in Manitoba or any other province is a bold misstatement of the facts, which no one knows better than does Sir Wilfrid Laurier. If so, then the only denial of full rights was by Sir Wilfrid himself for a temporary party advantage. Instead of the minority being denied their full rights, the subject of education in the provinces, which was long a matter of party strife of a very bitter character, was carried from court to court and was finally adjudicated upon by the law lords of the Imperial Privy Council, whose decision was, in effect, that the power of legislating upon educational matters was vested in the Provincial Legislatures, and that in dealing with the question the terms of union in this respect had not been violated by the Legislature of Manitoba.

Such being the case, the public cannot but view with supreme distrust the grandiloquent declarations of the Liberal leader as to his disregard of racial or religious prejudice.

A Memorable Homecoming

The homecoming of Mr. Borden has called forth such a welcome as no Canadian has ever yet experienced. Party differences were sunk and Liberals and Conservatives united to do honor to a great Canadian. From Quebec to Ottawa it was a triumphal progress and the French Canadians in the ancient capital have been amongst the first to welcome the English Premier. The Mayor met him and read an address, accompanied by the city council and leading citizens of both parties. At Three Rivers, hitherto a Liberal fortress, thousands greeted the Lady Grey, the steamer which took the Prime Minister and his wife up the St. Lawrence to Montreal. At the last named city on Saturday night there was a popular welcome of imposing proportions. Hundreds of decorated automobiles accompanied the Premier to the Windsor Hotel where from the balcony a speech was made to the thousands in the streets below. Addresses were read by the French Canadian mayor and the different public bodies.

The Premier arrived in the Capital on Sunday noon which prevented any outward or public demonstration, but the civic fathers greeted him officially at noon on Monday and at night a public banquet was tendered the Prime Minister in the Chateau Laurier. The greeting which Mr. Borden received on this occasion and the large attendance prove the estimation and personal affection which surround him in the Capital of the Dominion.

Toronto on September 23rd will pay its tribute at which twelve hundred people will be present and accommodation has been made for eight thousand people to hear the speech. The Board of Trade and City Council will honor him and party will disappear in the outburst of "welcome home."

The strongest and most honest opponents of the Conservative leader all pay their meed of praise to the dignity and high mind which he has exhibited as the chief representative of the Dominion of Canada and his first visit as Canadian Premier to the Mother Country in the year of grace 1912 has stamped him a worthy and cherished leader whom all delighted to honor.

CURRENT COMMENT.

During the year ending on March 31st last 2,139,841 pounds of butter was imported into Canada from New Zealand, and 929,318 pounds from the United States. It would seem that what the Dominion needs is not wider markets for its butter, but more butter for its market.—Peterborough Review.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared in his speech at Marieville, Quebec, on Saturday last that he would never, no never! make of the naval question a party issue. Sir Wilfrid has in the past had the faculty of saying things which he intended to be taken as the reverse of what he said. Is he trying to play the same game that he did in the past so successfully?

Canada must bear its share of the imperial burden. That the burden has to be borne at all is a thousand pities. Some day the good sense of the nations will triumph and a policy of international naval and army retrenchment will become possible. Just now it is not possible and the peace of the world must be bought at a terrible price and our own Empire must foot a mighty bill. We will prove ourselves unworthy of it if we shirk our share.—Christian Guardian.

Mr. Sydney Fisher and Mr. George P. Graham, both of whom were members of the Laurier Government, and both of whom were defeated at the polls last September, stated at a public meeting held at Potton Springs, county of Brome, Quebec, on the 9th inst., that reciprocity still is the policy of the Liberal party. If they have nothing better to offer they will have to wait a long time before being returned to the treasury benches. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, however, fought shy of the subject in his speech at Marieville on the 7th inst.

A systematic effort is being made in Canada to revive the sheep-raising industry. It is a wide movement. There have been many fortunes made in this line of husbandry, and there will be still more fortunes made from sheep. The demand for mutton and wool is great, and never flags, and the price has mounted out of sight. Canada has many districts where sheep may be raised with little trouble or expense. Sheep will pasture well on land that is practically useless for anything else. In connection with the sheep revival, Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, has recently issued a departmental book of some 125 pages, copiously illustrated, relating to sheep and their possibilities. It makes admirable reading, and any farmer who wishes to gain both pleasure and profit should write to the Minister for a copy of this excellent work.

HE PRAISES PELLETIER

Sir J. Henniker Heaton Commends His Cable Policy.

In Interview In London, the Father of Penny Post and Pioneer of the Cheap Cable Service, Says Canada's P.M.G. Has Fought Hard to Break Up the Cable Rings—Carrying Capacity of Lines Not Taxed.

London, Sept. 10.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Sir J. Henniker Heaton spoke in the highest terms of praise of Hon. Mr. Pelletier for the determination with which he fought here for a state-owned cable in order to break up the cable rings. Hon. Mr. Pelletier, he said, has the active support of the Australian and New Zealand Governments in his efforts, but the British Government for some reason or other doesn't see its way to adopt the proposal, but instead joined in making overtures to the companies, in consequence of which a three-penny deferred telegram rate was agreed upon.

Hon. Mr. Pelletier pressed for more than that. He wanted threepence a word for ordinary messages and a shilling rate for urgent and code telegrams, "and," added Sir Henniker, "he'll gain his point, too, very soon and show the absurdity of the so-called deferred messages."

Sir Henniker pointed out the carrying capacity of cables to America was 325,000,000 words per annum, and only 35,000,000 were sent. It was true there was a great rush of messages during a few hours every day, but one. Sixteen lines to the United States and Canada should be placed at the disposal of non-code or non-urgent senders. The delay should never exceed a few hours. If all cables of the world were destroyed to-morrow they could be reconstructed at a third of the cost. We were now paying for abandoned cables, superfluous cables, watered stock and all the plundering and blundering of the past.

He believed that a fair settlement with the cable companies would be come to the establishing of a penny a word telegram with a minimum of twelve words for a shilling, throughout the world with the active support of the British Empire League his dream would be realized in less than ten years.

Suing Hydro Commission.

Oshawa, Sept. 10.—Claim upon the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commmission for three million dollars is made by Hon. Wm. Harty of Kingston and O. O'Connor, K.C., of Ottawa, for damages for the expropriations by the commission of the Chats Falls, on the Ottawa River.

Part of the property, which consists of a number of islands, was secured in 1883 from the Ontario (Liberal) Government by Mr. Harty. The balance was granted Mr. O'Connor last fall by the Laurier Government. No development work has been done.

The owners paid under $2,000 for what they now seek three millions. They claim that 50,000 horse-power can be developed.

The expropriation was decided upon by the commission last spring after a conference at Ottawa.

EQUAL TO LAST YEAR

Sir Wm. Mackenzie Says Crop Will Not Break Records.

President of C.N.R., Returning From His Annual Tour of the West, Declares That While the Wheat Yield Is Good It Will Not Exceed Last Year's Output — C.N.R. to Help Handle 1913 Crop.

Toronto, Sept. 10.—"The Western Canada crop, while equal to it, will not exceed that of last year," declared Sir William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway, in an interview here last night. Sir William returned to Toronto after his annual trip of inspection to the west. This year he proceeded right through to the coast. He returns in splendid health and spirits and with an optimistic outlook regarding the future progress and welfare of the C.N.R. in Western Canada.

Sir William said that he saw plenty of wheat cut throughout the west, but no threshing had been done yet. This was bad, as the crop had been hampered by much wet weather and the result would be that instead of the record crop prophesied the crop of the west would only equal that of last year.

The railway magnate was enthusiastic over the progress being made with the construction of his road in the west, and showed it by stating that he expected the completion of the C.N.R. transcontinental line right through from Montreal to Port Mann by next fall.

This was not all. Not only is the line to be completed right across by the fall of 1913, but the president stated that it was just possible that the Canadian Northern Railway would be a factor in moving the 1913 crop on the completed line. It was only just possible, but Sir William was hopeful.

The C.N.R. president had another announcement to make regarding the progress being made with the construction of his railway in the west. This was the completion of the connecting links between three important western cities which is almost at immediate completion. By this the cities of Edmonton, Calgary and Saskatoon will be joined together by C.N.R. connection.

BASEBALL.

THE GAME CHINESE SPORTS

"I don't know", says Rube Ellis of the Cardinals, "whether they will ever be able to make good ballplayers out of Chinamen, but I'll vouch for one thing; Chinese ball-fans are about the gamest and most strenuous that I have ever seen in all my journeyings around the circuits—and I've seen a lot of them.

"When I was playing out on the coast a few years ago, we were much surprised one afternoon to note a group of Chinamen sitting in a little group over by third base. It was the first time we had ever noticed any Chinks at the ballyard, and, naturally we wondered if some one had brought them for a joke. These few yellow men just sat in that solemn, dignified way of theirs, and never once bubbled forth in any sort of noise or uproar. Next day, there was quite a squad of them, and they were not so silent, either. They watched the plays with great attentiveness, and every now and then they would break out into a yell. It didn't take us long to see that the Chinks were strong for the daring, nervy fellows. One of our men slowed up on an infield roller, and loafed down to first. Those Chinamen immediately set up a yell of disgust and rage that was the loudest squawk in all the park. A few minutes later, one of our boys slid for home, plowing through the dust and arising, covering with dirt, but successful and those Chinks fairly danced up and down the aisles.

'Before many days had passed, a big Chinese colony came out to see every game. They always showed the same wonderful descrimination between playing desperate ball and loafing, too. If a fellow failed to take chances and did not hit the grit, the Chinks screeched and jabbered, and some of the men were actually afraid that they might get a knife stuck into them by the slant-eyed devils. But if a man took the long chances, slid through the gravel, and soiled his uniform for further orders, he got the glad hand and all Chinatown was with him.

"I actually believe the noise made by the Chinks, and the way they stood up for nervy ball playing, helped us a lot that summer and spurred us on to extra efforts. The Chinese cat came out of the bag though, one day late in the season. "Just as the clubs began the game, a heavy storm poured down; the field was flooded, and the baselines were canals. It was evidently a case of call it off, but high above the patter of the raindrops arose the shrill, insistent cry of the Chinamen, "Play ballee—play ballee!" Our manager laughing at their enthusiasm, walked over to the crowd of heathens.

" 'Say, Ah Lung,' cried he, 'There's no chance to play ball in this storm! Why are you Chinks so anxious for the game?'

" 'Play ballee in blig lain,' answered one fat Chinamen, 'gletee uniform muchee muddee. Blig laundly bilt. Makee much monee washee—washee.'

"And then we understood why the guileless, gentle Chinamen were so strong for the boys who slid, and so anxious to see a battle in the rain!"

PAPER-BAG MAKER CLAIMS $30,000,000 BRITISH ESTATE

An Earldom Puzzle for Courts to Decide--Traces Descent from Sir James Levingston, who Died in 1670, and Relates Interesting Details of Feuds in Which His Family Has Vainly Attempted to Secure Possession of 26 Villages--Two Titles and Other Large Estates--Unable to Finance Legal Action.

Herbert Wynyard Colclough, a general dealer and paper maker, who is now with his son conducting a small business in the working class district of Openshaw, Manchester, England, claims—

The title of Viscount Kynnaird, the Earldom of Newburgh, the title of Baron Levington, and two estates one at Hassop, near Chatsworth, in Derbyshire, and the other at Slindon Hall in Sussex.

The Hassop estate, Mr. Colclough says, comprises 26 villages, and the Sussex estate is ever larger. The total value of the estates and wealth which he claims is about $30,000,000.

Mr. Colclough showed documents by which he claims to prove that he is the rightful heir to the title and lands. By a document which bore traces of age he traced his descent from Sir James Levington, the zealous Royalist who was created a viscount in 1647, the first Earl of Newburgh (peerage of Scotland) in 1660 and died in 1670.

"I have all the original deeds, or truly attested copies," the claimant said, "and my proofs appear conclusive. I am practically without means to fight such a case as this, but to those helping to finance the claim I am willing, if successful to sacrifice half the annual renal of the estate after this portion has borne the costs each year until the death of the holder, when the money will revert to me or my heirs."

FORTY YEARS' FEUD

Mr. Colclough said that he and his father, now dead, had been contesting the claim at intervals since 1873 and it was only lack of money and a missing document that prevented him from contesting it in the courts. Today, however, the situation had altered favorably, for he had in his possession a copy of the original settlement, which, he alleged, showed that he was the rightful heir.

The story of the claim is a romantic one. Mr. Colclough says that a century ago Francis Eyre, the Earl of Newburgh had two seats, one at Hassop Hall, near Bakewell, Derbyshire, and the other at Slindon Hall in Sussex. He lived at the first named place and he married Dorothy daughter of John Gladwin. There were two sons and a daughter, who inherited the estate, and Thomas, the seventh earl, and Francis, the eighth earl, died without issue.

"Their sister, Lady Dorothy, also died, we allege, without issue, and this is not disputed. She became the second wife of a Colonel Charles Leslie, to whose family, at her death which occurred in August, 1853, the property passed and it has been held by them ever since.

THE PLOT THICKENS

"Now the first named Earl Francis made a settlement with his son Thomas that the property was to be given to Thomas and his assigns, and in default of Thomas not having any issue the property was to revert to Francis and Dorothy, who had no power to will away the estates and then to Thomas' mother as the next heir. John Gladwin, the father of Dorothy, who married Francis, the sixth earl, also had another daughter named Ann, who married Sampson Christopher Colclough, one time sheriff of Nottingham. There was one son, John Colcough, a captain in the Royal navy, and his issue was John Gladwin Colclough, my father.

"Lady Dorothy, as I have stated died without issue, and as the male side was extinct the property, we contend, should come to us. I have been interesting myself in the question practically all my life, and we have made attempts before to get hold of the estate.

"The question of the statute of limitations does not interfere with our claim. We served notice on the tenants in May, 1873, that rents should be paid to us, the rightful heirs. A few years later we attempted—my father, myself, my brothers and our friends—to take possession of Hassop Hall. About 14 of us went one night but we got somewhat roughly handled. This action was taken in order to demonstrate our claim and get the present owner to contest the rights.

"One day six of us actually entered the hall, and we were carried into the road again. Later we locked all the gates and erected warning notices to trespassers. The locks were knocked off and the notice boards pulled down.

14 AGAINST 150.

"Another day we secured gun licenses and started shooting over the estate. We were again carried on to the road. They did not take our game. We were brought before the magistrates and bound over to keep the peace for six months. Soon afterwards 14 of us marched to the hall, but we found 150 men opposed to us My father managed to get the key of the hall and refused to give it up. We were taken before the magistrates and committed to the Derby sessions

"The judge there upheld our claim and said we had a bona-fide right of entry to the estate. The holders of the estates, however, went to the high courts and got an injunction to restrain us from entering.

"In 1856 my father petitioned parliament in respect of the titles, and later inserted notices in the papers that he would take the title of Lord Kynnaird."

Mr. Colclough adds that his father used the title of Lord Kynnaird without opposition. The Scottish court sanctioned the use of this, the second title attached to the earldom, for legal purposes only.

WHAT DEBRETT SAYS

According to Debrett, Anthony James, fifth Earl of Newburgh, who died in 1814, was succeeded by his kinsman, Vincent, sixth earl, and sixth Prince Giustiniani (in 1644) of the Roman states. This Vincent was son of Cecilia, only child of Anne Countess of Newburgh (ante) by Benedict, fifth Prince Giustiniani.

But Vincent did not take proceedings to establish his claim to the earldom, and when he died in 1826 he was succeeded by his only daughter, Princess Giustiniani (a lady with ten Christian names), who, succeeding her grandfather, became Duchess of Montdragone. She was naturalized by act of parliament in 1857, and her claims to the peerage were allowed in 1858.

She had married in 1815 Charles, fourth Marquis Bandini, of Lanciana and Rustano, and on his death in 1877 she was succeeded by her son Sigismund N. V. G. Francis, eighth earl, then 50 years of age, whom Pope Pius IX had created Prince Giustiniani-Bandini in 1863.

This eighth earl (also Duc di Montdragone of the kingdom of Naples) lived to be 90 years of age, and on his death in 1908 his only son Charles (Prince Charles Giustiniani-Bandini) succeeded as the ninth and present earl.

POULTRY INDUSTRY

Great Room for Its Development in Canada

A. G. Gilbert, poultry manager at the Central Experimental Farm, in referring to the development of the poultry industry clearly shows that the demand for eggs in Canada has increased much more rapidly than the supply during recent years. In 1902 we exported to Great Britain eggs to the value of $1,733,242; nine years later, the exports had fallen to less than a value of $25,000, while the imports in 1911 reached a value approaching $500,000.

It is pointed out that farmers are not taking full advantage of the high prices offered for strictly new laid eggs at all seasons of the year. The good profits from these are being secured chiefly by specialists who are often at the disadvantage of having to pay retail prices for f. d.

LABOR IS NEGLECTED

Trades Congress Voices Opinion That It Is Being Overlooked.

Parliement Has Been So Busy Over Reciprocity and Other Things, Says Report, That It Has Done Practically Nothing For the Workingman—Must Elect Their Own Members—Oriental Labor Problem In West.

Guelph, Sept. 11.—A pointed suggestion that Parliamentarians at Ottawa have somewhat lost interest in labor matters, because a general election is in the distance, was contained in the annual report of President Walters, Parliamentary representative, at the afternoon session of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress. This report deals at length with the several matters that had come before the House of Commons during the past year, and concludes with the following paragraph:

"Owing to what is now known as the famous 21st of September, immediately after the adjournment of our last convention in Calgary, when the substitution of one party Govenment for another took place, the only session at Ottawa, the first session of the present administration, was a short one and no legislation was touched outside of the immediate necessities of the administration.

"As is customary, labor had been so prominent and important just before election time on the stump by the politicians that their interest had run out and it took a little time for it to recuperate enough to deal with labor matters. This will always be so until labor is on the inside instead of the outside of Parliament. In the meantime we must do the best we can."

A long discussion took place over the seating of three delegates from the Internation Union of Railroad Telegraphers. The chairman of the credential commission reported that one of the four delegates appeared as international representative, while the other three were seated by permission of the convention given by the passing of the report of the credentials committee. The report also required that the other three present credentials from their local unions.

Acting Secretary James Simpson thought it was a dangerous precedent as, if allowed, international unions would be able to finance three or four delegates and send them to vote on questions affecting them. It was too serious to pass over lightly. Other members also thought it would create a bad precedent. Brother Roberts stated that he would like to know for himself and for the order of telegraphers.

On a division by showing hands, it was decided to reconsider the report of the credential committee. One of the delegates, whose credentials were disputed, stated that they had followed the same rules for the past four years. Brother Pettipie of Vancouver deplored what might be termed "professional delegates."

Ald. Wiley of St. Catharines thought it wise to abide by the legislation that had been passed.

This discussion, which was long drawn out and tiresome, finally ended by the action of the convention in the matter being reconsidered, and only one delegate was allowed to take his seat.

J. W. Wilkinson, Vancouver, western organizer in British Columbia and Alberta, reported on his work. The chief problem was that of Oriental workmen, as well as other foreigners. Bank notices being printed in nine languages, the Oriental labor hindered greatly in organizing, but good progress is being made.

The organizer paid many compliments to President Walters for his efficient work on his tour through the west.

James Stevenson, organizer for Ontario, reported visiting many cities in this province, and stated that much more work was necessary, owing to the influx of laborers from Europe and European Asia. The other organizers' reports were of a similar nature and were referred to the committee on officers' reports.

Just before the adjournment of the afternoon session, James Keir Hardie made formal farewell to the convention. He leaves to-day for the east.

A USE FOR OLD PIANOS

Tribesman Who Converted It Into a Bed

A Labrador tribe, it is said, made the barrels stolen from a wrecked whaler serve as chimney-tops; the West Indians utilized Timothy Dexter's warming pans for sugar ladles and the Shans find no worse use for English beer bottles than to stick them up as household gods to keep away evil spirits. But the drollest instance of converted usage occurred when that adventurous Frenchman, De Tonnant, while in Patagonia, gave an old chief a worn out grand piano which he had bought for eighty francs.

A few days after making this generous present, De Tonnant went one morning to pay an early visit to the Patagonian. He found him sleeping peacefully with his wife inside the piano, from which he had carefully removed sounding board, strings, etc., and which thus transformed constituted a not uncomfortable bedstead.

Long Trip for Baby

Shipped all the way from Liverpool, England, to Calgary, Alta., by express cared for on the way by ladies young and old who were coming to Canada to make a home in this country, Rose Steele Richardson, an 18 months old baby, reached Calgary and is safe in the hands of her mother, none the worse for her long journey across the water and the thousands of miles by rail.

H. Hooker, treasurer of the Progressive National Committee.

LORD VERULAM'S SECRET

To be a descendant of William the Conqueror's banner-carrier at Hastings is one of the many distinctions of the Earl of Verulam. His lordship is the holder of quite half a dozen peerage dignities and a baronetcy of 1628. He bears a close resemblance to the late King Edward, and on several occasions had been mistaken for his Majesty and followed by a loyal crowd. Lord Verulam is by many believed to own among the priceless Elizabethan manuscripts which he inherited from the late Earl, the secret of the Bacon-Shakespeare problem. His father, it is interesting to recall, always asserted that Shakespeare wrote the plays which bear his name, but his lordship was wise enough not to commit himself on the Baconian theory.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

VIENNA CROWDED.

Eucharistic Congress Will Assemble 300,000 Visitors.

Vienna, Austria, Sept. 11.—Under the protection of his apostolic Majesty Emperor Francis Joseph, the twenty-third Eucharistic Congress yesterday began its labors, which are to be continued until Sunday next. Delegates and visitors numbering upwards of 150,000, and including representatives from Canada, the United States and South America, and from all the countries of Europe, have already gathered in the city, and 350,000 more are expected.

The last and crowning function of the congress will take place Sunday morning when an immense procession will march from St. Stephen's along the Ringstrasse to Tophberg, where low mass will be celebrated by the papal legate on top of the great entrance gateway. The Emperor and all the members of the court will attend the service, which will be conducted within the view of 50,000 persons.

There will be 300,000 men in the procession. The Host must be fetched from the high altar in St. Stephen's dome and escorted to the gate of the palace, where the mass is celebrated.

All rural districts have been informed by bills on the church walls that whoever attends the congress and says fervent prayers before any altar on which the Host is exposed is entitled to seven years' indulgence, which he may devote to any soul in purgatory. If prayers are offered up for the aggrandizement of the church a complete indulgence is insured. The same privilege is accorded to all who take part in the procession and in the Holy Communion on Sept. 15. All priests, down to the lowest degree, are entitled to grant pardons for the mortal sins, which in ordinary times only the bishops can pardon.

TEMPORARY AGREEMENT.

Arrangement Said to Have Been Made Regarding N. T. R.

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—It is understood that an agreement has been reached between the Government and the Grand Trunk Pacific Company for the operating of the Transcona-Superior Junction section of the road completed about six weeks ago.

A conference of company representatives and the chairman of the transcontinental was held yesterday afternoon. Major Leonard, interviewed at its close, would not say just what agreement was reached, further than to state "everything is being arranged satisfactorily and is running smoothly. We anticipate not the slightest difficulty."

While the details of the agreement reached cannot be learned, it is understood that its basis is that the company shall operate the road under a temporary agreement.

Asked if it was expected that the Cochrane section connecting Winnipeg with North Bay, would be under operation in time to assist in moving this season's crop, Major Leonard said that from the latest reports he had received from the contractors, he felt confident that it would.

Arbitration to Settle It.

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—The Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission will not, of course, pay anywhere like the $3,000,000 that Messrs. Wm. Harty, ex-M.P., of Kingston, and Daniel O'Connor, of Ottawa, say they want for the Chats Falls power rights needed by the city of Ottawa.

The claim will be settled by arbitration by the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, and the hearing will probably be at Ottawa.

It is understood here that the commission has formally offered Mr. Harty $2,000, namely, $420 with compound interest, for what he bought in 1883, generally known as the party rights.

As regards O'Connor, it is claimed that he got the timber slide rights from the late Dominion Government, but that they had no right to sell them, as they belonged to the Ontario Government.

Chorus Beauties Flitted.

Montreal, Sept. 11.—Trouble for "The New Barmaid" Co., which was to have played in Toronto this week, only began again yesterday when the leading man, Alexander Loftus, was released from jail where he had been placed on a capias. The company now discovers that two of their prettiest chorus girls have been abducted from the city by a well-known Englishman here.

A warrant was sworn out for the arrest of the man who abducted them, but the police officials wanted $250 from the company to cover extradition proceedings. This was not paid. Instead the company's manager went to the U. S. immigration officers, who are trying to have the girls deported to Canada when they are discovered on the other side of the line.

To Reduce Council.

Kingston, Sept. 11.—An interesting time is expected at the next session of the City Council. Ald. Harrison has given notice of motion calling for reduction of aldermen in council from 21 to 14, and also the term of office from three years to two years. There will be strenuous opposition.

A great many citizens favor the appointment of a paid commission to run city affairs. That the council is not as active as it should be, is the opinion of a majority of the citizens, and it is believed there will be something doing along the line of weeding out when January comes along.

To Banquet Mr. Borden.

Montreal, Sept. 11.—A meeting of influential citizens was held yesterday at the offices of L. T. Marechal, K.C., with the object of organizing a great banquet which the Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden has accepted for Sept. 21, the anniversary of the defeat of reciprocity. T. Chase Casgrain, K.C., was elected chairman of the general committee. Four subcommittees were appointed.

Invitations are being tendered to Sir James Whitney, Sir R Roblin, Sir Richard McBride and others prominent in Conservative politics.

Many Toronto children died from whooping cough last month.

Three Ontario Cabinet Ministers left for a tour of northwest Ontario.

Rev. Dr. Chown has gone to Vancouver to assume the duties of principal of Ryerson College.

Harold MacMahon, aged 16 years, lost his life in the old Welland Canal, a short distance from the Welland Vale Axe Factory yesterday.

A bomb explosion occurred yesterday in the market place at Doiran, in European Turkey. Twenty persons were killed and 30 injured.

Early morning fire completely destroyed the flour mill owned by G. Ratz at Elmira, Ont. The loss will reach $12,000, with insurance of $7,000.

There were 28 persons seriously injured, when eastbound train No. 6 of the Nickle Plate Road was derailed yesterday afternoon at Fagan Road, near Erie, Pa.

An agreement for a loan to China of $50,000,000, at 5 per cent. for 40 years, was signed Aug. 30 by the Chinese Minister and a representative of Lloyds' Bank, according to news just made public.

Mrs. J. N. Taylor of Chicago was killed and her husband severely injured, their two children escaping almost unhurt, when their motor car overturned into a deep ditch, near Wheatly, Ont., yesterday.

Kaiser Well Pleased.

Paris, Sept. 11.—Rene Ruaux, the military expert of The Temps, who was in close contact with the German Emperor during the recent manoeuvres of the Swiss army, quotes the Emperor as summing up his satisfaction with the work of the troops in a conversation with President Ferrier in the words: "Your army save me six army corps."

It is known that the Emperor's main object in attending the manoeuvres was to convince himself of the ability of the Swiss army to make the neutrality of the country respect in case of war, and his remark is interpreted to mean that by the Swiss army forms a screen to prevent the French from invading Germany through Switzerland.

Ottawa Man Claims Fortune.

St. Louis, Sept. 11.—Six hundred claimants began yesterday afternoon in the probate court a legal struggle for the $64,000 estate left two years ago by Jeremiah Moynihan, an eccentric St. Louis character known as the "Millionaire Rag Picker," after the probate judge had rejected yesterday what purported to have been a will in favor of an alleged son, Glen Adonis Gilbert of Galena, Ill.

More than sixty of the claimants were in court. The first to be heard was B. F. Moynihan of Ottawa, Ont., who believes he is a son of the late rag picker.

Adam Beck's Guests.

London, Ont., Sept. 11.—Sir George and Lady Askwith arrived in London yesterday to be guests of Hon. Adam and Mrs. Beck for a few days. Sir George was a guest of the Western Fair directors at their luncheon at noon yesterday. His visit to London is merely as the guest of Mr. Beck.

Sir George will visit the Labor Congress at Guelph, and afterwards proceed to Toronto.

Lightning Hit Grant Hall.

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 11.—Another big rainstorm, accompanied by severe lightning, struck the city yesterday morning.

A bolt of lightning struck Grant Hall, knocked several stones out of a place on to the roof and shattered one of the hands of the big clock.

Prominent Oddfellow Dead.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 11.—Geo. Bell, one of the most prominent Oddfellows in the Dominion, died yesterday, aged 65. He was chief clerk in the registration branch of the Interior Department.

British Fleet Strengthened.

Paris, Sept. 11.—The recently negotiated Franco-Russian naval contention and the older Anglo-French convention relating to the Mediterranean seaboard will be brought into practical operation within a few days when the French fleet will be permanently transferred to Toulon from Brest.

Experts point out that with the Russian fleet in the Baltic Sea, the strength of the British fleet in the North Sea will be materially increased against any contemplated German attack, while the English Channel is considered sufficiently defended by the numerous fleets of destroyers and submarine stationed on both the English and French coasts.

Mongolians Ready to Fight.

London, Sept. 11.—A serious situation exists in Mongolia, according to a Pekin despatch to The Daily Mail. Kobdo, in western Mongolia, has fallen and Altai is considered to be in great danger at the hands of revolutionists.

The Cabinet, at a secret meeting, has discussed the advisability of asking Russia to mediate between China and the Mongolians, who are said to be prepared to fight China to a finish if an attempt is made to establish Chinese rule in Mongolia.

Port Nelson Not Chosen.

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—There is absolutely no foundation for the despatch sent out from here some days ago to the effect that Hon. Frank Cochrane had decided upon Port Nelson as the terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway.

"You can say that neither Nelson or Churchill has yet been decided upon," said the Minister of Railways and Canals, yesterday afternoon, when asked regarding the matter.

"There are many important considerations to be taken into account before a decision is announced," he continued.

"An early decision will be reached, but the question must be thoroughly gone into in Cabinet Council."

Police Inquiry Sept. 23.

Toronto, Sept. 11.—Inspector Walter Duncan of the Toronto detective department, has been suspended until Sept. 23, when the investigation into the Farmers' Bank case and other cases will be opened. The enquiry will be public.

That was what the police commissioners decided at a special meeting in the City Hall yesterday afternoon.

Alex. Yeats of Calgary, formerly of the local police department, will be brought here as a witness, and other out of town men, formerly connected with the Toronto police department, will likely be called upon to give testimony.

Woman Wasn't Drowned.

New York, Sept. 11.—Physicians who performed an autopsy yesterday on the body of Mrs. Rosa Menschik Szabo, exhumed Monday in a Jersey City cemetery, declared yesterday afternoon that they had found indications that the woman's death was due to causes other than drowning.

Mexico to Ask U. S. for Favor.

Mexico City, Sept. 11.—A secret session of the Mexican Senate Monday night granted the request of President Madero for authorization to ask the United States Government to permit the transportation of troops through American territory to the State of Sonora.

Laurentic Steward Killed.

Montreal, Sept. 11.—Falling fifty feet into the hold of the steamer Laurentic yesterday morning W. E. Roberts, a steward, was instantly killed. Roberts' brother was a steward on the Titanic.

Storm In Labrador.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 11.—Wireless messages from Labrador tell of the havoc wrought by a hurricane which swept that coast last week. One schooner was driven on the rocks at Cut Throat and four of the crew were drowned.

The greater portion of the fishing fleet is on the way from the extreme north of Labrador, a section dotted with islands exposed to the fury of the storm. Tragic news is expected from that section.

Bruce Ismay to Resign.

New York, Sept. 11.—New York papers yesterday printed a story to the effect that "it is understood on good authority," that J. Bruce Ismay is to resign as president of the International Mercantile Marine Company, and probably will be succeeded by P. A. S. Franklin, now vice-president and head of the business in this country.

Harold A. Anderson, first vice-president, will resign at the same time, it is understood, and will be succeeded by Frederick Toppin, his assistant. Mr. Anderson has been head of the Liverpool office. The changes are expected the first of next year.

Trainloads of Wheat.

Winnipeg, Sept. 11.—Clear, warm and windy was the prevailing condition throughout the west yesterday. With the bulk of the wheat of Manitoba in stock, two-thirds of Saskatchewan's crop cut, and threshing very general all over the west, there is no gloom in the prairie provinces. Trainloads of new grain are now moving eastward, the earliest period in the history of the west for shipments to the lakes of full trains of wheat.

Western farmers, too, have profited by last season's congestion, and have many individual storage facilities they did not possess last year, which resulted in heavy losses.

U. S. Riflemen Arrive.

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—The team of riflemen who will represent the United States in the contest for the Palma Trophy arrived in Ottawa yesterday morning. The team was chosen as the result of the National Rifle matches at Sea Girt, N.J. They represent the cream of American crack shots.

The Canadians are practicing steadily at Rockliffe under Lieut.-Col. Helmer.

Car Strike at Duluth.

Duluth, Minn., Sept. 11.—The street car strike situation here yesterday remained strained, with sympathizers talking of further outbreaks against the car company and the imported "strike-breakers."

About fifty per cent. of the cars are running. Thirteen arrests were made in Monday night's rioting.

A SLIPPERY WITNESS.

Gaynor Three Times Threatens to Refuse to Testify.

New York, Sept. 11.—For about two hours yesterday afternoon Wm. J. Gaynor, mayor of New York, sat in a witness chair at the City Hall, and parried with picturesque retort and evasion the attempts of counsel for an aldermanic committee to learn his views on the police situation brought to a head by the murder of the gambler, Herman Rosenthal.

Three times he threatened to leave the stand because he considered the questions irrelevant; twice he denounced the hearing as a scandal mongering excursion and often throughout his testimony he repeated that attempts to "scandalize him" would be in vain, for, he said, he had lived in the city too long and had begun his efforts to purify government long before Emory R. Buckner, counsel for the committee, was born.

At no time during his examination would he admit that the police department was inefficient. He expressed renewed confidence in Commissioner Waldo and declared that if the social evil flourished it was at least on the decrease and was a lesser evil than police blackmail, which he had tried to eradicate.

Four brother inspectors of Cornelius G. Hayes, recently reduced by Police Commissioner Waldo for making alleged false statements reflecting on the commissioner, took the witness stand at police headquarters yesterday afternoon in behalf of the department and swore that Waldo had never instructed them not to molest disorderly houses.

Hayes' trial was concluded last evening, decision being reserved.

Two Aviators Killed.

Oxford, Eng., Sept. 11.—Another double avation fatality, the second within a week, occurred early yesterday morning to members of the Army Flying Corps, when Lieut. C. A. Bettington and Lieut. E. Hotchkiss, both of whom had just been given a commission on probation, were killed while flying past Wolvercote.

The Liverpool market closed today ⅝d to ¾d higher on wheat and ¼d to 1¼d higher on corn. Berlin wheat closed ⅜c higher, Budapest ½c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—Cables on Manitoba spring wheat came strong, at an advance of 3d to 4½d per quarter. The demand was good, but owing to the sharp advance in prices in Winnipeg and the very high rates being demanded for ocean freight exporters were unable to work any further business. There was also a good demand from millers for Duluth wheat to grind in in bond, and sales of some round lots were made. In oats, the feeling is strong, with a good demand for supplies for both local and export account. The foreign demand for new crop spring wheat flour was good, and sales of 50,000 sacks were made for October-November shipment. The local market is steady. Millfeed active and firm. Demand for hay for export good. Butter fairly active and firm. Cheese quieter and in sympathy with the low prices in the country spot values were reduced ¼c. Potatoes plentiful and 10c lower. Eggs firm. Provisions steady.

Lavergne For Cabinet?

Montreal, Sept. 11.—The Herald (Liberal) prints a rumor that Armand Lavergne will enter Federal politics as a supporter of Premier Borden, and will probably contest L'Islet County.

"The Conservative Government at Ottawa, it is said, hopes to line up the Quebec vote behind Mr. Lavergne in much the same way as the French-Canadians supported Sir George Cartier and incidentally the Macdonald regime, and that a Cabinet position will be found for him in the near future" says The Herald.

FIRST DAY OF THE BIG FAIR WAS HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL

The Attendance was Larger than Usual—Fine Racing and Good Time Made—The Evening Show Attracted a Large Crowd—Some Excellent Attractions were Witnessed—Two Fires Caused Some Excitement.

After a heavy downpour of rain early yesterday morning the skies cleared and for the remainder of the day heat prevailed. This condition of affairs was hailed with delight by the management of the Belleville Fair, which opened yesterday under their auspices. Although an attractive programme was presented the attendance was by no means as large as it should have been under the circumstances. The officials had, at considerable expense provided special features which were of an entertaining character.

AFTERNOON PROGRAMME.

When the gates were opened at one o'clock the spectators spent an hour or so in viewing the exhibits previous to witnessing the speeding events, which were naturally the attraction for all who attended.

In numbers and quality the horses, cattle and sheep shown are in excess of former years. The fancy work demonstrating the handiwork of the ladies proved interesting to many visitors.

During the afternoon the judging in many of the classes took place and in some cases the judges had no easy task, owing to many of the exhibits being nearly equal in merit.

Mr. N. McAdoo of Kingston is the Government's expert judge on horses, and in a ring during the afternoon he was busy judging roadsters, carriage horses, etc. Messrs. Stewart and Bradley are the expert judges of sheep, cattle and swine.

SPEEDING EVENTS.

For the entertainment of the spectators three speeding events were on the card and naturally all present were interested in them. These consisted of a green race, 2.30 class and a pair of roadsters race. Mr. Wm. Carnew was starter, Messrs. M. Sprague, S. Curry and J. Caldwell judges and J. A. Mackie, timekeeper.

GREEN RACE, ½ MILE HEATS.

In this event there were three entries, namely: Silver Joe, owned by J. Powell, of this city; Axie, owned by G. T. Williamson, of Toronto, and Ellen Gray, owned by R. Williamson of Toronto. For first place the race was between Silver Joe and Axie, and the former proved to be the victor. The track was in first class condition. The summary was as follows:

Silver Joe, J. Powell, Belleville	1	2	1	1
Axie, T. Williamson, Toronto	2	1	2	2
Ellen Gray, R. Williamson, Toronto	3	3	3	3

Time—1.18, 1.15, 1.16.

2.20 CLASS, MILE HEATS.

There were four entries for this event and although Lady Sphinx took three straight heats, thus securing first money, each heat was well contested. In the various heats but little difficulty was experienced in effecting a good start. Iron Duke, owned by G. W. Williamson of Toronto, made a determined effort in each heat to beat Lady Sphinx, but was unable to do so. The summary was as follows:

Lady Sphinx, G. Powell, Belleville	1	1	1
Iron Duke, G. W. Williamson, Toronto	3	2	2
Major Direct, Chas. Williamson, Toronto	2	4	4
Windsor Belle, L. Ketcheson, Belleville	4	3	3

Time—2.23½, 2.25, 2.24½.

PAIR OF ROADSTERS, ½ MILE HEATS.

There were but two entries in this event, namely, a team owned and driven by Mr. A. C. Dafoe of Foxboro, and a team owned and driven by Mr. Thomas White of Trenton. It proved to be an easy win for Mr. Dafoe, his team taking the lead at the start and easily maintaining it. But two heats were run.

Between heats selections were rendered by the I.O.O.F. band which was upon the ground, and special attractions were presented upon an elevated platform. These consisted of exhibitions of fancy roller skating by the Mayo family, four in number; a musical trio, and Mlle. Delora, who gave exhibitions of physical culture.

THE EVENING SHOW.

There was a considerable attendance in the evening, some 1500 or more people being present to view the various attractions, which all seemed to thoroughly enjoy. Col. Ponton, a former President of the Fair, in a few graceful words thanked the citizens for their attendance and announced each attraction as it was presented in front of the grand stand.

The first of the many interesting attractions on the programme was the I.O.O.F. band in odd costumes, for which prizes were given for the best make-ups. The prizes were won by Jack Blaind as "Noisy Bill"—and he made "some noise," too. Jack Lee won second, as a "Suffragette," and he filled the bill in a first class manner. The third was won by Wm. Wannacott, as the "Original Laff," and he also filled his part to perfection.

THE DARK HORSE.

A character riding around the grounds on horseback was the feature of characteristics. For a long time even the judges did not know her—for the character proved to be a lady of the city—and when her identity was discovered it was decided to award her a special prize, so excellent was her make-up. It was Mrs. Mary Seams, who in her early days was a leading attraction as a bareback rider.

Then after the excitement of the judging had ceased the programme on the stage in front of the grandstand commenced, and with the assistance of the I.O.O.F. band was a success in every way.

First came Mme. Delora, the Physical Culture Girl, who is a contortionist of the first degree, keeping the large audience spell-bound for about twenty minutes with her large variety of features.

After the applause for Mme. Delora had subsided came the Musical Rankins. Besides rendering a number of solos and duets they also carried a most up to date variety of comedy, which was much appreciated by the spectators. The comedy was very amusing and laughable, and kept the crowd in an uproar.

The Oddfellows' Band rendered a selection while "Jimmie" Clarke was preparing for his part of the programme, which consisted of the Sailors' Hornpipe and the Irish Reel. Jimmie was in good shape last night and went through the dances in his usual fine style.

Probably the most amusing and interesting feature of the bill was the Four Mayos in their act called "A Skating Rink Scene." Had it not been for the roughness of the boards they would have showed up far more brilliantly than they did. As it was, they left a most favorable impression on their audience. Some of the make-ups of the Mayos were a sight to behold, and the manner in which they skated and bounced around the stage was indeed amusing.

A cornet solo, "Where the River Shannon Flows," by Jack Lee came next and was rendered in a very artistic manner.

By a little coaxing on the part of the officials Jimmie Clarke rendered a solo on the bagpipes.

Mr. Jack Lee again favored the audience with a cornet solo, "Love's Own Sweet Dream" (by request). This solo closed the programme and there is little doubt but that the music will long continue to ring in the ears of his listeners.

NOTES.

After the show was over a fire broke out just over the north fence of the Fair Grounds which gave the firemen a run. It proved to be a brush fire and caused a lot of excitement. Its origin was unknown.

A young wonderland in the form of a side-show is on the grounds and it was well worth the price of admission to see the freaks of nature they have.

The Ferris wheel was continually on the go all day and until 10 o'clock last night.

The many booths report a good business during the day and evening.

Farewell Gathering and Presentation

In recognition of faithful service and general good fellowship, a large number gathered in the Sunday School room of Holloway Street Church last Friday evening to do honor and wish God-speed to Mr. P. F. Canniff, who, after years of official work as Sunday School Superintendent, and in other capacities, was severing his connection with the society upon leaving for the Northwest. The large apartment was tastefully decorated with flags, bunting and flowers, and a fine programme had been arranged for the occasion. On behalf of the society Rev. A. R. Sanderson, the pastor, presented Mr. Canniff with a library table and two chairs of quartered oak, addresses following by Mrs. Charles Walters for the Sunday School, the Women's Missionary Society and the Ladies' Aid, and —r. Thomas Blanchard for the church as a whole. Feeling remarks were also made by Rev. Mr. Duprau and others. Mr. Canniff, who was visibly affected, expressed his appreciation, referring to the harmony that had ever predominated in all his work with those present, and hoping that the present prosperous condition of the church would be continued. Then followed informal social intercourse lasting until late in the evening, the departing one, with his wife and family, receiving the "God-be-with-you" wishes of all.

CUMMINGS, Ga. Sept. 10.—Ed. Collins, a negro, who was charged with helping to hide the body of a young white woman several days ago, was shot to death while in jail here by a mob of several hundred white men this afternoon. Afterwards a rope was placed about the neck and the body dragged to the town square, where it was strung up to a telegraph pole.

DISCOVERS ANIMAL GERM

That Has Been Killing Horses in Nebraska.

LINCOLN, Neb., September 10.—State Bacteriologist H. H. Waite of the University of Nebraska has discovered the germ which causes the mysterious disease that has been killing horses in Kansas and this state, according to a statement given out by Governor Aldrich to-day. The germ is said to enter the horse's head through the mouth or nostrils and thence find its way to the brain. The germ is supposed to diffuse itself through the atmosphere as well as hay or other provender.

A state conference of veterinary surgeons will be held Wednesday to discuss the situation. Invitations have been sent to nearly a hundred practicioners in all parts of the state.

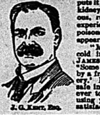
FIRST DELIVERY OF WHEAT

REGINA, Sask. Sept. 10.—Thrashing has been under way southwest of here, and at Moose Jaw today the first delivery of new spring wheat was made. Singularly enough the name of the farmer who sold the wheat is Mr. Frost who for six successive seasons has made the first delivery of new wheat to the flour mills of Moose Jaw. The load sold by Mr. Frost this morning graded No 1. Northern.

Nature's Way Is The Best.

Buried deep in our American forest we find bloodroot, queen's root, mandrake and stone root, golden seal, Oregon grape root and cherrybark. Of these Dr. R. V. Pierce made a pure glyceric extract which has been favorably known for over forty years. He called it "Golden Medical Discovery."

This "Discovery" purifies the blood and tones up the stomach and the entire system in Nature' own way. It's just the tissue builder and tonic you require when recovering from a hard cold, grip, or pneumonia. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" at times; in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach—puts it in shape to make pure, rich blood—helps the liver and kidneys to expel the poisons from the body. The weak, nervous, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people experience at this time of the year is usually the effect of poisons in the blood; it is often indicated by pimples or boils appearing on the skin, the face becomes thin—you feel "blue."



J. G. Kent, Esq.

"More than a week ago I was suffering with an awful cold in my head, throat, breast, and body," writes Mr. James G. Kent, of 710 L. Street, S. E., Washington, D. C. "Some called it La Grippe, some pneumonia. I was advised by a friend to try a bottle of your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I tried a bottle and it did me so much good that I feel safe in saying it is the greatest and best medicine that I ever took. My health is much better than it was before using your medicine. It does all you claim for it and is satisfactory."

SHALL I WIN HER?

THE STORY OF A WANDERER

By JAMES GRANT

Author of "The Romance of War," "Under the Red Dragon," "Fairer than A Fairy," etc.

How wildly beat my heart as I sat perched up there among the green foliage and yellow flowers of a great mimosa, listening intently to every sound, and every moment expecting to see the ferocious Caffres —led by old Vonga, hissing through their white teeth, and yelling like unchained demons—come crashing among the trees at full speed, with musket and assegai; and I could imagine the whoop of triumph and exultation with which they would greet the discovery of my haltered horse, and the close investigation of the vicinity that would at once be insituted.

But all remained still, most solemnly still. I heard only the wild beating of my heart and the chattering of an occasional monkey, who doubtless wondered at my adoption of his habits, and invasion of his sylvan retreat.

As the time passed on, and noon drew night, I was pleased, to find by the direction in which the shadows fell, that I had, by a fortunate chance, in the first energy of flight taken the proper direction towards the south-west. To aid my lonely steps, I had now no pocket compass, as in the days when I had my waggon and team to inspann for the road and outspann when we halted.

I passed the entire day without food. I felt only thirst, for the excitement and anxiety I endured were great. The runnel gurgled sweetly and pleasantly below the tree in which I sat—cool it looked, and most inviting as its current glided smoothly over the brown pebbles, and under the broad green leaves the yellow gourds, the scarlet flowers, and long reedy grass that bordered it; but I dared not yet descend to quench my thirst.

A zebra came to drink—a large and beautifully streaked one—and I envied the long deep draught the animal took, till suddenly his eye caught sight of my saddled horse that was grazing near, and then he fled from the spot.

In an adjacent tree I could see that a colony of bees had lodged themselves, and I longed for some of their spoil—the honey—but had no means of smoking them out. With some dry grass I could soon have done so; but to fire it would have cost me a ball cartridge, and lack of that cartridge in some future contingency might cost me my life.

Evening drew on—the evening of an interminable day as it seemed to me; but I endured all with patience and hope, trusting that this was but the fortunate beginning of a happy end; and thinking over the two lines from "Macbeth" with which I had often consoled myself in those perilous times, and have already quoted:—

"Come what—come may,
Time and the hour run through the roughest day!"

So the lagging hours passed on, the shadows grew deeper in the leafy grove, and I ventured to leave my lofty perch at last.

While laving my face and head in the runnel I drank as the thirsty alone can drink. I then rubbed down the horse with tufts of grass the animal was fresh now after a long day of rest. I looked carefully to his trappings—to bridle, girths, and stirrup-leathers; slung my rifle to the saddle, and mounting, set forth, guided only by the last amber flush of day that lingered in the west beyond the undulating range of hills which at the end of the plain rose opaquely against the light, like the dark blue waves of a petrified sea.

All night I rode towards those hils, and saw them rising in magnitude before me. Over the wild karoo I traversed herds of antelopes were scouring; once or twice a pair of giant ostriches, a flock of bustards, and a convey of partridges passed me, but nothing hostile was visible under the clear bright stars of the Southern Cross, and my ear could detect no sound of hoofs, though I sometimes dismounted, and placed my ear close to the ground to listen.

I rode hopefully on, as yet without any desire for food or sleep and without much sensation of weariness; but I knew that food and slumber, too, would become pressing necessities on the morrow, and when and how could I provide a meal without using my rifle, and thereby summoning I knew not what enemy from the nearest thicket or kloof, even in the wilderness?

As pale daybreak began to steal in, and cast my shadow before me, the green waste was seen to be spangled with flowers, and studded here and there by the lovely acacia the gaudy yellow blossoms of which are the favorite of the giraffe. The loaded the air with perfume.

The sun was rising when I found myself entering a narrow ravine that seemed to form the beginning of a pass through the mountains. there was also the appearance of a kind of pathway, or track, which had long been englected, for creepers had over grown it.

As day brightened I became anxious for a shelter and place wherein I might sleep for a few hours in safety from Caffres, and those wild animals with which the country abounds. One side of the kloof, or ravine, was covered densely by forest trees, on the other rose great masses of gray basaltic rock in which I perceived several fissures; so my plans were formed at once.

In the forest I unbitted and knee-haltered my horse as before, concealing the saddle in a tree. Then, rifle in hand, I proceeded to ascend the cliffs in search of a secure place for shelter, and in hope of finding some wild bird's eggs.

Over detached blocks, which had fallen in masses from the summits above, I clambered on my hands and knees, and saw that what had appeared at a disance to be a fissure was a regular cavern, having a narrow entrance, but widening within.

A pang of alarm came into my breast and instinctjvely I cocked both locks of my rifle, on perceiving the face of the cliff about the entrance was all starred and scored by bullets thus indicating that an attack and defence of some recent inmates had taken place.

I shouted and then concealed myself, expecting instantly to see the woolly head and gleaming eyes of an armed Caffre, or the thick curly pate of some hunted Boer or bushranger appear; but, save the echoes of my voice, no sound responded. Encouraged by this I resumed the ascent and ere long found myself in a very curious and well concealed retreat below the brow of a gloomy and impending cliff, from the verge of which there hung thousands of baboon ropes and brilliant trailers, forming a green and natural fringe.

The smooth faces of the rocks within the cavern were covered with Bushman paintings or frescoes, not unlike those which are found on Egyptian tombs; in the most brilliant colors—red, blue, black and white—were representations of the chase. Men on horseback and on foot armed with bows, war clubs, and assegais, were seen in pursuit of uncouth figures that were meant for the gemsbok, the koodoo, and the elephant, with many other designs which the wild Bushmen are said to have worshipped of old.

These I merely glanced at causally being more excited and inerested by traces of more recent inhabitants, in the shape of some embers, scarcely cold, a cooking place of stones, some fruit, vegetables and Caffre corn that lay near, and three brace of fine plump partridges, recently shot. Besides, there was a regularly formed bed of dry leaves in a corner.

Whoever they were, the proprietors of these affairs wree absent at present; but they might return at any moment and much too soon for my purpose.

If fugitive Europeans, they might help me in my ultimate escape. If hostile Caffres or Amaponda thieves my fate might soon be sealed if they found me in their den. But the mode in which the partridges were plucked and hung upon a cleft stick, and the manner in which the vegetables had also been prepared, made me almost certain that the place had been occupied by Europeans; so I resolved to watch and wait.

I clambered into a dry and cosy nook, a little way farther up the rocks, where some bushes of the scarlet and pink leaved geranium, which grew in every cleft and crevice completely concealed me, with my rifle carefully capped and cocked at hy side and he sharp little hatchet close at hand. I found a shelf of rock that formed a pillow, and then worn out by all I had undergone—by want of food and rest—I sank into a profound slumber.

Yet it was not so profund but that I had dreams of Clarice Haywood in her pure white beauty, of her voice so tender and love laden, of Walcot Tower and the Cheviot Hills and of old Haddonrig in the sweet season of summer, when the drowsy hum of flies and bees came with fragrance of the garden flowers through every open window.

When I awoke all was dark; the moon red and fiery yet on the wane seemed ti linger above the black peak of a mountain, while the clouds like torn veils of crape, were swept past her face by the gusty wind, imparting a weird aspect to the scenery, nearly all of which was sunk in sombre obscurity.

OUR POPULATION

An Analysis of the Figures on the Census Returns

The rural population of Canada in 1911 was 3,924,394, and the urban population 3,280,444. In 1901 the rural population was 3,349,516, and the urban population 2,021,799. The increase of rural population in the ten years is therefore 574,878, and of the urban 1,258,546, which is 17.16 per cent. for the former and 62.25 per cent. for the latter.

In Alberta the increase of rural population in the ten years was 180,327, and of urban 121,314. In British Columbia the increase of rural population was 100,318, and of urban 113,505, and in Manitoba the rural increase was 70,511, and the urban 129,892. New Brunswick lost 1,493 rural and gained 22,262 urban, while Nova Scotia lost 23,981 rural, and gained 56,745 urban.

Ontario's Figures

Ontario lost 52,184 rural and gained 392,511 urban. Prince Edward Island gained 15 urban, but lost 9,546 rural. Quebec shows gains of both rural and urban population, being 39,951 for the former and 313,162 for the latter. Saskatchewan also shows gains in both classes, being 287,338 for the former and 113,815 for the latter. In Yukon the rural loss was 13,430 and the urban loss 5,277. In the Northwest Territories, whose population is wholly rural, the loss was 2,933.

Another interesting feature is the tabulation of people by conjugal status. There were 1,331,564 married men and only 1,251,182 married women, probably accounted for by the fact that the surplus of husbands had left their wives at home in Europe until they were able to make good in Canada.

Two Million Bachelors

That there is ample opportunity for cupid to get busy is proven by the fact that there were 2,369,160 bachelos, and 1,941,354 spinsters in Canada when the census was taken. There were 89,121 widowers and 179,598 widows.

The growth of the divorce habit is shown by the fact that there were 839 divorced men in Canada in 1911, as against 337 in 1901, whilst the number of divorced women grew from 321 in 1901 to 691 in 1911.

The largest gain during the last forty years was made by Montreal, being 355,480; the second largest by Toronto, being 317,538; the third largest by Winnipeg, being 135,794. Vancouver's growth was 100,401 in less than thirty years.

Males totaled 3,821,106, and females 3,383,771.

The number of occupied dwellings in the sub-districts of the Dominion in 1911 was 1,413,913, and the number of families 1,488,353, compared with 1,028,892 dwellings and 1,070,747 families in 1901.

WEEDS

Weeds, weeds, weeds to no end! This weed question is serious, and getting more so. A short rotation of crops helps greatly in the battle, but even where this is adopted, one has his hands full for a time in dealing with a dirty farm. Thistles fight with the spring grain. Switch-grass, blue grass, bindweed, perennial sow thistle and the like make extra work, even in the hoe crops. Docks rear their unsightly heads aloft in the meadows, yellow mustard hides the grain in thousands of fields, and even dandelions do serious mischief, overrunning pastures. These, with hundreds of others, claim urgent attention during the growing season, when the corn and roots, and presently the hay, ought to monopolize one's thought and labor. What can be done about it all? We hardly know. Help is so scarce the majority of farmers cannot hire a man by the day for such work. Mainly, it must be done by men regularly employed on a monthly or yearly engagement.

A Jew, who said he was a photographic artist, applied to the Belfast magistrates for a warrant against a canvasser who, he believed, had received 6 cents for him, and had not returned it. He believed there were other cases. The magistrates refused the application.

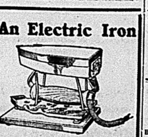
An Electric Iron



And What It Will Do For You

1. Because you do not have to wait for it to heat up and do not have to walk back and forward from table to stove you can do your ironing in about half the time it usually takes with the ordinary irons.

2. Because the temperature of your iron is easily and quickly regulated you can do your pressing without fear of scorching.

3. Because of the wire holder which fits on the stand and goes with the iron, you can set it bottom up for steaming velvets or pressing ribbons or neckties. Look at the cut.

Painful Accident To a Workman

Mr. George Goodnow an employee at the Steel Company of Canada's plant here, met with a painful accident this morning. As a result he will be incapacitated from work for some time, and may possibly not recover. It appears that he and some fellow employees were working about a concrete mixer and took a quantity of gasoline from a tank near by intending to place it in the mixer. The gasoline overflowed and in some manner not at present accounted for ignited. Goodnow made an effort to extinguish the blaze so that it would not reach the gasoline tank and in doing so was terribly burned. As soon as possible the ambulance was summoned and the unfortunate man was rushed to the hospital where he received melical aid. It was ascertained that Goodnow was badly burned about the arms and legs. The flames did not touch his face or head. The victim is a married man residing on Church Street in this city. Messrs. Higgs and Fry who were near by at the time received slight burns.

Killed by Dash of Acid in the Face

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Screams coming from a park in Brooklyn late last night brought a crowd of passers by hurrying to a secluded bench, where they found a man with hands pressed to his eyes moaning that a woman had thrown acid in his face. The police arrested a girl who gave her name as Esther Capatan and led her to the park bench, but the man was so badly burned about the eyes that he could not see her. Soon he became unconscious and died before an ambulance arrived.

Under pressure from the police, the girl said that she knew the man as Samuel Kaplan and that he had taken all her money under faithless promises of marriage. She declared that he was one of the group of swindlers wanted in Chicago. Although she insisted that he had taken the acid himself after trying to force her to drink it, she was locked up on a homicide charge.

Burns Relics are To be Sold

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—A cable from London says: The Globe Tavern at Dumfries, a famous haunt of the poet Burns, is in the market. Many a richt guid willy wacht was quaffed by the poet in this old hostelry which contains numerous relics of the poet including a window on a pane of which by means of a diamond he wrote two verses, as well as a punch bowl, a jug, a cup, a Prince Charles wine glass, Burns' favorite chair, Mrs. Burns' workbox and other articles.

An American visitor to Dumfries a few days ago endeavored to find out if it were likely that the pane of glass could be cut from the window and sold separately, as he was prepared to put down as many dollars as might be thought necessary. He was immensely disappointed when he was informed that such action would be looked upon as a sacrilege.

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—The Cabinet to-day had its first meeting since the return of the Prime Minister and his colleagues, but only routine business was considered. There will be another Council to-day and almost daily from now on. The question of the time of the assembling of Parliament has not yet been considered, but a decision in that regard is likely to be reached within a fortnight, especially if the House is to meet in November.

Infantile Paralysis At the Falls

Special

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Sept. 11.—The four year old son of William Rufron, a contractor, is suffering from infantile paralysis. The case was diagnosed this afternoon by Drs. Carl G. Leowolf and R. J. Talbot, the latter city health officer. The child has lost the use of both arms. The family has been quarantined. This is the first case of the dread disease in this city during the present epidemic that is sweeping this section of the country.

Prominent Woman Stole Diamond

Special

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—The daughter of an English Church clergyman, and the wife of a former English Church clergyman, but now the managing director of a large firm in a Western city, Mary Baars pleaded guilty to stealing a diamond ring valued at $65 from Eaton's on Monday. She was arrested by Detective Tipton at the Union Station as she was about to board a train for the West. At the time of her arrest she was wearing the stolen ring on her finger, together with a ring she had purchased at the time of the theft.

Mr. W. A. Henderson, representing the woman, said it was apparently a case of falling before sudden temptation, although Mrs. Baars had sufficient money to buy the ring. She had been visiting her parents in an Ontario town, where her three young children are.

"One good thing is in her favor," said Mr. Henderson. "She is determined to suffer the punishment for her wrong without allowing her parents and husband to know of her trouble. I can't explain why she did it. She is not strong, and was in the hospital a short time ago and underwent an operation."

Mrs. Baars was remanded until Friday for sentence.

Said to be 25,000,000 Years of Age

EDMONTON, Alta., Sept. 11.—Perfectly formed fossils of the trilobite species, the highest animals of the Cambrain formation, declared by palaeonotologists to be more than 25,000,000 years old, were unearthed by Dr. C. D. Walcott, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, D.C., at the base of Mount Robson, in the heart of the Rockies, west of Edmonton, while o na scientific expedition occupying two months. He was accompanied by H. H. Blayden.

Dr. Walcott said, in the course of an interview here to-day, that the bed of fossils, which was found at a point 5,000 feet above sea level is practically inexhaustible. He reported also finding fossils of an entirely new species which he believes will add valuable information to the geology of the world.

The finding of the trilobite is looked upon as important. It is of the group of fossil crustaceans of which a single specimen is known from the Permian of North America.

German Ladies Fought For Love

BERLIN, Sept. 11.—The rivalry in love between two society women, the Baroness Cecelia von Schendel and Frau Sybilla von Nordhausen, has just had its sequel in the Court of First Instances at Schoneberg, near Berlin.

They had previously been intimate friends, but both fell in love with a young cavalry officer, and from that moment they became the bitterest of foes.

The two ladies frequently met at social functions, and many angry scenes ensued. To put an end to an intolerable situation, Frau von Nordhausen sent a telephone message to the baroness requesting a final interview, at which dice were to be cast for the officer's preference. The interview was duly arranged at the baroness' residence, but shortly after the two women had met they came to blows.

After a fierce tooth and nail encounter the adversaries had recourse to a hatpin and a pair of scissors, the consequence being that the baroness had an eye put out and her enemy had an ear literally torn from her head.

'At the hearing of the case, Baroness von Schendel produced a neatly folded paper packet, from which she took a bunch of her adversary's hair, which she flourished before the judge's eyes with the triumphant cry: "I have had my revenge and damaged her beauty."

The baroness, who has lost the sight of an eye, was awarded $100 damages.

London Newspapers Praise Mr. Borden

LONDON, September 11.—"Just the kind of a speech which, in the interests of all people under the British flag, needs to be made much oftener," says the Liberal Daily News and Leader, this morning, commenting on the address delivered by Premier Borden at Ottawa.

"The people of the Dominion know little of the British people at home, and, therefore, they have a tendency to take quite literally the jeremiads of political tacticians. This is a serious error, and may lead the dominions to under-rate the worth of the contribution, while it lays them open to panic-mongers.

"If," continues the Daily News and the Leader," the people of the Dominions appreciate truly the strength and virility of these islands, they will be proof against appeals to the German peril. Let reason, not ungoverned emotion, dictate the manner and degree of their sharing the common tasks of the Empire."

"High as Mr. Borden placed himself among the statesmen of the Empire, by what he said and did during his recent visit to this country, he raised himself yet higher in the Old Country's regard by his speech at Ottawa," declares the Daily Telegraph.

"We are far from thinking it strange that the Canadian Premier should receive such a favorable impression of the men of these isles, even when things may have been at the worst. We never cast any doubt upon the abundance in this people of all qualities which count for national greatness, but it is unausual for a speaker in Mr. Borden's position to say it, and saying it with so much emphasis, to an audience in one of the sister states, it being one of the things which were thought better left unsaid.

"There has been," continues the Telegraph, "some vague suspicion of a tendency on the part of the Motherland, to overvalue herself on the score of greater age, wealth, or maturity of civilization. The South African war taught us, however, how readily this attitude could be dropped at the call of stern realities.

"Realities of the existing international situation are not less stern, and Mr. Borden has not long delayed to say the right thing, as he resolved to do the right thing, in the cause of closer fellowship."

UMBRELLA LENDING SOCIETY

BRUSSELS, Sept. 10.—The "Umbrella Lending Society," with a capital of about a million dollars and a stock consisting of several thousand umbrellas, has been started here.

The subscription is a dollar a year and each member is given an aluminum counter stamped with a number. When a subscriber is caught by the rain he has but to go to the nearest restaurant, tobacco shop or big store and in exchange for his aluminum ticket he is immediately given a sound umbrella. As soon as the rain ceases, he deposits the umbrella in a similar establishment and receives another counter.

HOME RULE IN ULSTER

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M. P. P., Gives Impressions of What He Heard in the North of Ireland.

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—"I met some of my own people in the North of Ireland who were unalterably opposed to Home Rule, who wouldn't have it on any terms, and I met some who were ready to throw up both hands for it, who were quite willing to trust the South. There is undoubtedly a strong feeling in Ulster against the Home Rule Bill but there are a good many Irish Protestants who believe in it."

This was the sizing up of the Home Rule situation in Ireland of Mr. J. W Johnson, local member for West Hastings who has just returned from a three months' tour of the British Islands and Europe. Mr. Johnson was at the Parliament Buildings yesterday, calling upon the Prime Minister.

The West Hastings member found that Ireland had made great strides since his last visit six years ago. "The people," he said, "are now able to own land, and that has made a tremendous difference in their outlook upon life.'

While in England Mr. Johnson was struck by the remarkable attention Canada and things Canadian are receiving.

"The man on the street seemed always ready to talk about Canada" he remarked. "The visit of Mr. Borden undoubtedly had a great deal to do with that. Certainly no man has ever gone to Britain from the over seas dominions who has so won the affection and respect of the English people as has the Right Hon R. L. Borden. As far as I could tell the British people are quite content to leave the question of navy help in the hands of Mr. Borden and his Government, and, of course, through them, in the hands of the Canadian people. They have been bearing the burden for many years now, and while they will be grateful for any support the Dominion may give them, I found no evidence of any desire to demand anything."

Snow in England Furs Being Worn

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The inclemency of the weather that England is experiencing is shown by the fact that today's London temperature at noon exactly corresponded with that of last Christmas Eve.

Wintry conditions prevail throughout England, with bitter northerly winds and unusually low temperature Snow and sleet have fallen in North Yorkshire. A woman who spent the night in the open air in Surrey died from exposure.

The weather affected the Doncaster race meeting, where most of the women wore furs. The army manoeuvres in Norfolk are being carried out under miserable conditions, the troops marching through mire during the day and sleeping in sodden fields at night.

On the continent the weather is unusually severe at a number of places. At St. Moritz, Switzerland, the temperature fell to freezing point this morning. Heavy rain has been falling incessantly in Central and Western Germany.

In the mountain district of Bavaria remarkably cold weather prevails, and so much snow has fallen that winter sports are being engaged in.

$1000 Reward For a Cure

TOPEKA, Kans., Sept. 11.—A reward of $1,000 is awaiting the man who, within thirty days, may discover a cure for a disease that is causing death to thousands of horses in Kansas. It has been offered by Gov. Stubbs. The death of ten thousand horses in the western two-thirds of Kansas, is causing much distress among the farmers. Hundreds of them have lost every horse on their farms, and are unable to prepare the fields for the new crop of wheat.

After a dozen or more expert veterinarians had talked for three hours at a conference here it was admitted that the nature of the disease was a mystery and that any treatment that might be given was largely an experiment.

The palisade worm was blamed by some of the veterinarians because it has been found in great numbers in an autopsy made. Others, however, declared that the worm had frequently been found in horses that had died of other diseases.

Reports to-night show that the malady is spreading, and that an average of 200 new cases are appearing each day.

Notes of the New Autumn Fashions

Furs, laces, brocades, draperies that require a lavish use of material and the utmost adroitness in the handling, with the narrow skirt in full control of the situation are among the ones predictions for the autumn and winter. There have been various rumors that skirts are to be wider than at present, but the advance models show no appreciable increase of width, about two yards at the hem being the average. There are different styles of draperies which in some cases give the impression of greater width, and in other skirts pleatings are set in, pressed very flat. However, the skirts of many of the smartest of the new tailored suits are perfectly straight and sometimes they are bordered around the lower edge with fur. The jackets of many are cutaway and of rather elaborate construction. Individual taste to some extent dictates the length of the new coats, but the usual model is a little below the hips. This is true especially of the simpler designs, which have the straight rather than the cutaway lines. Very beautiful, thick, soft cloths, moleskin and similar fabrics, are used for these costumes, and the more elaborate afternoon costumes are made of charmeuse and panne trimmed with fur and often with beads. In spite of the general elegance and richness of the season's fashions there are some very beautiul new evening gowns, which are not elaborately trimmed, but depend for their beauty entirely on the perfection of their lines and the elegance of the fabric of which they are made.

Fur will be popular this winter, and the fur trimmed tailored costume will be in evidence. Evening gowns, afternoon gowns, wraps of chiffon and brocade and every sort of costume may be trimmed with fur.

Then there is lace everywhere, and very handsome lace much of it is. Not so much embroidery is to be noticed on the new gowns, and when embroidery is used it is usualyl the most exquisite sort of bead work, which is seen on some of the new velvet costumes for afternoon wear.

YOUNG WIFE IS BURNED

Toronto Woman Poured Kerosene on the Fire.

Mrs. Julia Kemp, Aged 17, Is Killed by Explosion—Henry Sheriff Falls From Roof and Breaks His Back—Another Torontonian Falls From a Moving Car and Is Killed—Fourth Dies From Fall From Window.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—When she attempted to hurry the dinner by pouring kerosene on the fire shortly before noon yesterday, Mrs. Julia Kemp, aged 17, of Humber Bay, was so badly burned by the explosion that followed that she died in the Western Hospital at 6.30 last night.

Mrs. Kemp had been in the habit of using oil to light the fire. In attempting to repeat this practice the oil exploded. The flames caught her clothing. She screamed for assistance, but when neighbors tried to get in the back door they found it locked.

Mrs H. MacDonald, who lives next door, rushed to the woman's aid with a mat and succeeded in smothering the flames. Mrs. Kemp, however, was very badly burned.

Dr. Carman Ricker of Mimico was summoned. In the meantime the neighbors applied olive oil to her burns. Bates and Dodd's ambulance made a record run and conveyed the young woman to the Western Hospital. Her injuries were so serious, however, that nothing could be done.

The dead woman was formerly Miss Julia Currie, and was born in the district. She married A. Kemp, her mother's brother-in-law, last January.

Fatal Fall From Car.

W. Burke, of Hooke avenue, night watchman at the St. Clair sewer construction works, fell from a moving car he was attempting to board yesterday morning and sustained such severe injuries that he died an hour after being taken to Western Hospital. His head was badly smashed, and he had other severe injuries. His body was taken to the morgue, where an inquest was opened last night under Dr Morgan. It was adjourned until Sept. 18.

Mrs. Dyment Is Dead.

Mrs Katherine Dyment of 110 Carlaw avenue, who fell from the second storey of Frankel Brothers' premises on Eastern avenue, Tuesday afternoon, while cleaning windows there, died from her injuries in the General Hospital yesterday. Her skull was fractured. Her body was taken to the morgue, where an inquest was opened under Dr. Clendenning and adjourned until the 16th.

MUST SAVE HER FACE

Turkey Tries Hard to Get Peace With Credit.

Realizing That Italy Will Hold Out For Her Demands, the Porte Is Endeavoring to Secure Terms Which Will Not Injure Reputation In the Moslem World — Italian Aeroplane Captured at Tripoli.

Chiasso, Switzerland, Sept. 12.—The Italian Premier, Signor Giolitti, who is now at his country place at Piedmont, has had a special wire put in in order to communicate with the unofficial delegates who are discussing peace with the Turkish representatives in Switzerland. It is expected that the Premier will return to Rome today and will submit to the Council of Ministers a report on the present state of the negotiations.

Turkey is now convinced that Italy will never recede from the main points set forth in her proposals and is bending her energies towards reaching a settlement which will save her prestige before the Mussulman world.

Capture Italian Aeroplane.

Tripoli, Sept. 12.—The Turks, who on several occasions have tried vainly to smuggle into Tripoli an aeroplane for scouting purposes, are at last in possession of a machine, through a mishap to Captain Moiza of the Italian army. Captain Moiza was making a flight from Zoura to Tripoli, when the motor of his machine stopped, and he was obliged to descend in a hostile country. He was made prisoner.

Will Exchange Prisoners.

Constantinople, Sept. 12.—Change of non-combatant prisoners has practically been arranged for between Turkey and Italy. The prisoners held by the Turks comprise members of the Italian mineralogical mission captured in Tripoli, while the non-cambatants in the hands of the Italians are civilian officials captured in the Aegean Islands.

BANK EMBEZZLER ALVORD DIES AT STOCKPORT, NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Cornelius Lansing Alvord, known in New York banking annals as the "king of embezzlers," died in his cottage home at Stockport, N.Y., yesterday, nursed tenderly to the last by his devoted wife. His death revives the story of remarkable defalcation.

Banking officials still recall the shock with which the news was received on Oct. 20, 1900, that "Connie" Alvord, the big, fat, jovial, note teller of the First National Bank had disappeared, leaving behind him evidence of peculations from the vaults amounting to $695,000. Alvord had been in the employ of the bank for a quarter of a century, and by perseverence and hard work had risen from the position of a humble clerk to that of note teller at a salary of $3,500 a year.

He had the reputation at the time of his disappearance of never having missed a single day at his desk in five years, and the reason for this apparent fidelity was revealed when his books were examined by expert accountants. The examination showed that Alvord had been systematically extracting money from the deposit vaults of the bank and making false entries in the records of notes received in order to conceal his operations.

Soon after he began his embezzlements his mode of life changed. He purchased a handsome residence, known as the "palace," on Chester Hill, Mount Vernon, and his wife began to figure as a social leader in that town. Alvord in his palmy days weighed more than three hundred pounds, and his waddling figure soon became a familiar sight in Broadway hostelries. He rented a suite at the Hotel Pabst, for which he paid by the month although he rarely occupied the rooms oftener than once a week. Haughty head-waiters obeyed with obsequious attention his slightest nod, and footlight favorites were often in his company.

Despite his penchant for the Tenderloin he did not forget his wife or family. His children enjoyed the services of a high-priced governess, and diamonds gleamed on the slender fingers of his handsome wife. Although Alvord made no attempt to conceal the luxurious and extravagent career he was leading, no inkling of his private life ever reached the officials of the First National Bank, by whom he was regarded as an exceptionally painstaking and honest employee.

Not even his refusal to take a vacation caused them any suspicion, and the jealous manner in which he resented any interference with his books was regarded merely as one of his eccentricities. So cleverly did he conceal his thefts that not even the Federal Bank Examiners, who went over the books twice a year, were able to discover any irregularities. It was noticed that when an examiner visited the bank, Alvord kept close at his elbow to explain the meaning of certain penciled figures, which, he explained, represented the actual totals on his clearing sheets.

One night, however, a clerk saw him making some changes on a sheet, and casually mentioned the matter to C. D. Backus, the Assistant Cashier. Curious to ascertain what it was, he looked over the sheet. What he saw aroused his suspicion, and he began a hasty examination of Alvord's books. After poring over the books for half an hour, he summoned all of the clerks who remained in the bank and within ten minutes had obtained overwhelming proof that the jovial, hard-working note teller was a thief.

Some telepathic warning brought Alvord to the sidewalk on Broadway and Wall Street and caused him to glance through the window in the direction of his cage. He saw the group of excited clerks and the pale-faced cashier and immediately knew that he had been discovered. That night, Oct 18, 1900, he disappared.

News of the defalcation was withheld by the officials of the bank until Oct. 23, although the police were secretly notified. On the latter date the story of Alvord's thefts was made public and a reward of $5,000 was offered by the bank for his capture. On Oct. 29, he was seen by an acquaintance in the Touraine Hotel, Boston, but escaped before he could be apprehended. The next day he was arrested in a rooming house in Boston, whence he had fled from the hotel.

He was indicted by the Federal Grand Jury on fifty-one counts and in January, 1901, he pleaded guilty to three of them, and was sentenced to thirteen years in Sing Sing. He accepted his fate philosophically, and absolutely denied the charge made by the bank that he had "planted" a large portion of his loot. Alvord asserted that he was penniless and that he had lost everything through speculation in Wall Street.

After his sentence, his wife, who had disappeared, suddenly returned and reopened the Chester Hill house. This property was in her name and was never molested, but judgment was obtained by the bank for $500,000 against Alford personally. Real estate and personal property traced to him were seized in satisfaction of this judgment, but only a very small percentage of the $695,000 stolen was ever recovered.

Alvord was released from prison in April, 1909, after serving eight years, having received a commutation of sentence for good behavior. Meantime his wife, who had visited him constantly during the years of his imprisonment, sold the place in Mount Vernon and prepared the little cottage in Stockport for his home coming. There with her and their three children he spent his last years a hopeless, broken man.

British Army is Finest in World

LONDON, September 11.—Premier Borden's tribute to England's vitality sends a pleasant thrill through the Old Country this morning, and the thrill is intensified by Col. Sam Hughes's declaration, after witnessing the army manoeuvres, that, profiting by the lessons of the Boer War, the British army has become the finest in the world, barring none.

England feels young. Newspaper comments show her delight at finding that she also looks young to trained Canadian eyes.

The purport of the editorials of a dozen of the leading journals is best summed up by the Daily Graphic, which says:—

"We have only to look around to see the absurdity of the idea that England, in any vital sense, is older than the historically younger nations she brought into the world. Everywhere is evidence of vitality.

"Her willingness to face new dangers and to grapple with new problems demonstrates to the world that the vigor of England does not die.'

Canadians Hurt In Auto Collision

Mrs. Stair sustained a bad cut on the head and was unconscious for more than three hours. The other two were bruised about the face. Weil has a broken arm.

EXPLOSION ON ENGINE.

On Tuesday evening an explosion occurred upon the locomotive which is engaged in hauling cars on a spur line from the Lehigh Cement Works at Point Ann to the G. T. R. THE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The re organization of the Women's Institute brought together again those interested in their homes and children. Many expressions of approval of the airy, cheerful assembly room of the high school were heard and it was decided to begin a teachers' and mothers' course of child study at the meetings this year. Miss Robina Templeton of MacDonald Institute delighted everyone with her practical and entertaining talk on "Laundry Methods" giving several easy methods of washing, one of the most interesting being the gasoline method for hot weather. She also demonstrated how to fold clothes properly and told how to wash laces and delicate colored goods without injury. Report of the Playgrounds Treasurer showed a successfully managed summer for the children notwithstanding the adverse weather conditions.

WEDDING BELLS.

HUFFMAN—GRILLS.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Grills, second concession, Thurlow, on Wednesday, September 11th, at high noon, when their eldest daughter, Nellie May, was united in marriage to Mr. J. Ernest Huffman, eldest son of Mr. John Huffman of Gilead. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. T. Wickett of Shannonville under an arch of evergreens decorated with white asters.

To the strains of Russian Imperial, played by Miss Emma Walker, the bride entered the drawing room on the arm of her father, wearing a gown of cream paillette satin trimmed with baby Irish lace and insertion and a tulle veil caught up with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The couple were unattended. Little Edna Ketcheson, niece of the groom, acted as flower girl, and looked very sweet in a dainty dress of point d'esprit over pink silk. After the usual congratulations a sumptuous wedding luncheon was served to about fifty guests, after which the usual toasts were proposed. The many beautiful and costly presents testify to the popularity of the young couple.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain; to the flower girl a gold locket and chain. Spencer's Sunday School presented the bride with a silver pudding dish, suitably engraved. Among the numerous other presents received were rockers, fancy tables, silverware, clocks, etc., and a substantial cheque from her father. The happy couple left amid showers of confetti for Brockville, Ottawa, and points east. The bride's going away suit was of navy blue serge with hat to match. On their return they will take up their residence at Gilead, fifth concession of Thurlow. Their many friends join in wishing them a happy and prosperous wedded life.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

THE BACHELOR'S BABY

Before a large and appreciative audience at the Griffin Opera House last evening the Bachelor's Baby was presented. The chief character was that well known actor Etienne Girardot, who has an enviable reputation as an impersonator of the charactr he desires to represent. Mr. Girardot as Tom Beach, a bachelor who disliked children, portrayed well that part. The play itself is merry whimsical in spirit and possesses many amusing situations also crisp lines, with touches of pathos that grip that well spring of emotion the heart. The company that supported Mr. Girardot contains the names of Louis Shea, Dorothy Turner, Henry Hurbert, Lena Loraine, Geo. B. Hubbard, Helen E. Davidge Hugh Wynne, Percy Honner and Baby Wilson, the latter of whom is both cute and pleasing.

"THE GIRL OF MY DREAMS"

At Griffin Opera House, Tuesday September 17, Jos. M. Gaites will present to the theatregoers of Belleville John Hyams and Leila McIntyre in the delightful musical play "The Girl of My Dreams." This highly successful musical production which had its initial presentation in Chicago three seasons ago, enjoying a twelve weeks run, is said to be one of the most delightful and refined musical plays seen in years and a worthy successor to Gaites' famous "Three Twins." It has also filled highly successful engagements in all the prinicpal cities of the country including Boston, Philadelphia and New York City.

The story of the piece tells of a bachelor's downfall before the charms of a demure little Quaker girl. These roles will be those of the principals, John Hyams and Leila McIntyre. The bachelor is much of a club man and has the cynical attitude of his class toward the feminine sex. A habit of breaking village speed ordinances leads him into a bad motor accident. He is carried, much injured, into a Quaker household where he is nursed back to health by the Girl. By the time he is able to look about from an arm chair, his idea's of bachelorhood are shattered. The Quakeress and her father later go to the city to see the bachelor and the young woman is much shocked by her prospective husband's friends. She doesn't know whether she loves him or not, but the sky is clear in time for a happy ending just before the drop of the final curtain. The play is chuck full of catchy musical numbers "I'm Ready to Quit and Be Good," effectively rendered by Mr. Hyams, and Miss McIntyre's delightful "Doctor Tinkle Tinker" being the most popular. The supporting company numbers among the principals, Alice Hills, Francis Gaillard Neil Burns, Silvia Di Frankie, Della Niven, Irving Brooks, Frank McEwen, Adele Boulais and Joseph Harris together with a splendid male chorus and the orignal De Luxe Pony Ballet. The organizaton numbers seventy people in all. This production was recently seen at the Princess Theatre, Toronto, and His Majesty's Theatre, Montreal. Plan at Doyle's, Friday September 13.

THE NORDICA SERIES.

The plan for the Nordica series opened this morning with a rush. The long list of names were called out and they were then allowed to select their seats. There was a big sale of season tickets which is being sold for $3.00 which entitles the holder to the best reserved seats for all three concerts. The Bispham concert, the first of the series, will be held at the City Hall on Monday September 16th. Prices 50c, $1.00 and $1.50. Bispham is without a doubt the greatest baritone that has ever visited Canada. Bispham played Kingston last night and packed the Opera House to the doors. Seats now on sale at Doyle's.

The Steamer Dack Ran on a Bar

Yesterday the members of the two Sons of England Lodges chartered the steamer Dack, to pay a friendly visit to Lodge Kensington at Picton. On the way down the bay the steamer stopped at Deseronto and picked up a number of the Sons of England Lodge of that port. On entering the harbor at Picton a mishap took place, the boat running on a bar about 300 yards from the outer dock The Master thought that she was aground on the bow and ordered all to the back of the boat, then tried to back out but this was found impossible. The bow was tipped up and the bunch were in somewhat of a predicament. In lowering one of the lifeboats it went into the stream nose down and was partly filled with water. The Captain of the Dack jumped into the boat, but in doing so he was thrown into the bay and was fished out by those on board.

The Secretary of the Sons of England, Picton Lodge, saw the accident from the shore and obtaining the first craft he could, which happened to be a canoe, took the stranded party off two at a time. When all were ashore a rope was secured to the Dack and after about two hours hard work she was released. The party left Picton at about 3 a.m. this morning and arrived home shortly after 7, none the worse for their adventure other than some delay.

A FOOD CONVERT
Good Food the True Road to Health

The pernicious habit some persons still have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve stomach trouble, keeps up the patent medicine business and helps keep up the army of dyspeptics.

Indigestion—dyspepsia—is caused by what is put into the stomach in the way of improper food, the kind that so taxes the strength of the digestive organs they are actually crippled.

When this state is reached, to resort to tonics is liking whipping a tired horse with a big load. Every additional effort he makes under the lash diminishes his power to move the load.

Try helping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easily digested, full of strength for nerves and brain, in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.

"I am an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts and consider it an ideal food." writes a Maine man:

"I had nervous dyspepsia and was all run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From reading an advertisement I tried Grape-Nuts food, and, after a few weeks' steady use of it, felt greatly improved.

"Am much stronger, not nervous now, and can do more work without feeling so tired, and am better every way.

"I relish Grape-Nuts best with cream and use four heaping teaspoonfuls as the cereal part of a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." Name give by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Where is the Market?

> One of the features of the Saskatchewan exhibit in the Government Building at the Canadian National Exhibition is a large streamer with the following in red and black lettering:—
>
> In 1901 1% of Saskatchewan's arable acreage produced 18,000,000 bushels of grain.
>
> In 1911, a decade later, 15% of Saskatchewan's arable acreage produced 212,000,000 bushels of grain.
>
> By 1921, less than a decade hence, Saskatchewan will be producing 500,000,000 bushels of grain.
>
> While Saskatchewan's production of grain was increasing 1,078%, Canada's consuming power increased only 34%, and Great Britain's imports of wheat decreased slightly.
>
> Where is this grain to be marketed? Echo answers, Where?

The foregoing is copied—heading and all—from the Toronto Globe of recent date. That it is a thinly veiled plea for reciprocity such as was decisively rejected by the people of Canada in the general election of September 21st, 1911 is clearly apparent.

Curiously, as it happened, on the very same day on which the above quoted article was published in The Globe, the following editorial appeared in the Winnipeg Free Press, which is one of the most able Liberal journals in Canada:—

> Politicians and political organs continue to declare that it is absurd and nonsensical to suppose that the United States will import wheat as long as it remains a wheat-exporting country.
>
> How comes it then, that Ontario has for years past been both buying and selling wheat? The Ontario millers regularly buy western Canadian wheat at 25 cents a bushel above the price of Ontario-grown wheat. At the same time Ontario exports a portion of its own wheat crop. This, of course, may be nonsensical and absurd on the part of Ontario, but it is nevertheless a fact.
>
> Even Western Canada, which produces every year enough wheat to feed itself twenty or thirty times over, imports wheat, or at any rate wheat flour, for the making of certain kinds of pastry and biscuits. It imports this flour because it imports none of the particular kind of wheat from which this flour is ground, just as Ontario grows no hard wheat.
>
> The United States will buy hard wheat from us because they need more hard wheat than they grow themselves. The United States have not exported a single bushel of hard wheat for several years.

The Free Press' statements form a complete and entirely satisfactory answer. The plain facts are that Canada grows the best wheat in the world and that it will find a market, even if the eastern provinces and foreign countries have to reduce their production of that cereal. John Bull wants, and is always ready to pay a good price for the best quality of food products, and moreover a considerable market for Canadian flour is now being opened in the West Indies and South America and Japan is likely to become a large purchaser of the same article. Saskatchewan need not be under any uneasiness as to a market for her wheat in the future.

Parliamentary Authority

In Edmonton they talked reciprocity to the Duke of Connaught. In his reply he was silent on the question. It is said that he avoided it because it was political. The Governor-General, remarks a contemporary, was quite right in maintaining silence in regard to a question over which the House of Commons has sole authority.

The House of Commons of Great Britain once found it necessary to declare "that to report any opinion or pretended opinion of his Majesty, upon any bill or other proceeding, pending in either House of Parliament, with a view to influence the votes of the members, is a high crime and misdemeanor, derogatory to the honor of the Crown, a breach of the fundamental privileges of Parliament and subversive of the constitution."

It is in accordance with this well-understood policy that our Governors-General refrain as a rule from expressing opinions upon legislative action. To make the Governor-General a partisan would be to destroy his usefulness, and to impair the balance of the constitution.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Time was when every other day the Toronto Globe used to sneer at the salary accepted by the leader of the federal opposition. For nearly a year The Globe has been silent on that subject. Why is this thus? Perhaps The Globe thinks that Sir Wilfrid is earning his pay better than Borden did.—Hamilton Herald.

At the suggestion of a deputation which waited upon the Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, at the Parliament Buildings it is possible that the 13th of October may be set aside as a holiday for the school children of the province to commemorate the death at the Battle of Queenston Heights on October 13, 1812, of Sir Isaac Brock and Lieut.-Colonel Macdonell, Attorney-General of the province.

A remarkable cure of curvature of the spine is announced at the Methodist Hospital in Philadelphia. The case is that of Adele Weinberg, a young girl hunchback. The surgeon removed part of one of the lumbar vertebrae found to be diseased, and in its place used a section of leg bone. The plaster cast in which the child was encased following the operation, has now been removed, and she is as erect as though her spine had been normal since birth.

A street lamp at Greensford, England, was found lighted every day for several weeks, although in each case the light had been extinguished by the lamplighter in the morning. He watched for the culprit one morning and was surprised to see the lamp apparently light itself. Investigation revealed the fact that a tomtit had built its nest in the corner of the lamp and had hopped on the ring attached to the chain of the incandescent bypass, thus turning on the light.

Three Kingston hotelkeepers, following the example of some in this city, after losing their licenses, have blossomed out as temperance houses, selling two per cent. beer. There must be something very fascinating about this beverage, near the border line of an intoxicant, judging by the immense business, Saturday nights and Sundays, by those handling it. In this respect they have far more than a two per cent. advantage over the regular liquor dealer under a high license.—Hamilton Spectator.

Death walks about us in many unlooked for guises. The steeplejack may be killed by a fall from a curbstone, and the sailor whose whole life has been spent at sea may drown in a bathtub. In New York a few days ago a man was awakened by the sound of dripping water. Looking about he saw drops slowly falling from the ceiling, where a pipe had sprung a leak. The water was falling into his baby's mouth. When the mother took the infant out of harm's way it was dead, the dripping water having drowned it.

LOST TRIBE DISCOVERED EAST OF THE MACKENZIE

Two Thousand White People who are Believed to be Direct Descendants of the Following of Ericsson--While the Civilization of One Thousand Years Has Gone on they are Still in the Stone Age.

SEATTLE, Sept. 9.—Ranking next in importance from an ethnologist standpoint to the discovery of the lost tribes of Israel, is the discovery made by Prof. Vils Jalmar Stefanson of the American Museum of Natural History, of a lost tribe of 2,000 white people who are believed to be direct descendants of the following of Lion Ericsson, who came to Greenland from Iceland about the year 1,000, and a few years later discovered the north coast of America. The people living on Victoria Island, 30 degrees east of the mouth of the Mackenzie River, and more than 2,000 miles by the coast line, are still in the stone age. While the civilization of nearly 1,000 years has gone on they have stood still. Prof. Stefanson arrived in Seattle this morning.

One of the remarkable incidents of the five years' exploration which Sefanson carried on is the fact that he left his Winter headquarters near Banks Land four years ago with sufficient flour and other cereals to sustain himself and his Eskimo associates for two weeks and enough salt and tea to last for a month, and on this scant supply of food lived for four years on the bleak, inhospitable shore of the Polar Sea, caribou, seal and beaver meat furnishing his only meat, and clothes.

In 1910 Stefanson returned to the mouth of the Mackenzie River, where he was joined by Dr. R. Anderson, a former college classmate from the University of Iowa. During his explorations around the region at the top of the world Stefanson discovered thirteen new tribes of people. Ten of these tribes had never seen or heard of white men the progenitorys of two other tribes had seen the members of the Franklin expedition, another tribe had once been visited by a whaling vessel.

Have Red Hair

The tribe of white people which Stefanson declares are purely of Norwegian origin never had seen other people of their own color. Their number is about 2,000. More than half of them have rusty red hair, blue eyes, fair skins and tow colored eyebrows and beards. They live on both shores of Coronation Gulf, on the mainland of North America, and Victoria Island, which formerly was known as Prince Edward Island.

It was for this people that Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole, searched, while making his celebrated trip through the north west passage.

The Norsemen settled into two colonies, one on the north and one on the south side of Newfoundland. In the 14th century, Eskimos came from the north settlement. Their record was complete till 1441, when the black plague scourged Europe and for two centuries communication between Newfoundland and the Old Country was cut off. When communication was destored the people of the second settlement were missing. Their graveyards, buildings and other adjuncts of their semi civilization were found and the theory was formed that the people had drifted to a settlement further west across the narrow straits that divided them from the Arctic archipelago, where they intermingled with Eskimos, whom they took along with them to the island on which their descendants now live. They still use the same kind of bone needles that were invented by their forefathers and many of their methods of life are similar to that of their progenitors.

They are migratory people, never remaining longer than a few weeks in the same place. When they moved Stefanson and his associates moved with them. They never live on the coast, and it was for this reason that Amundsen failed to discover them when he sailed by their island. In the winter time they settle on the ice in the centre of a bay where they hunt seal.

In the summer time they go to the centre of the island, where they eat the caribou, which there abound in thousands.

Houses Built of Snow

Their houses are made of snow. A roof is stretched over the top by means of small pieces of driftwood which on rare occasions are found on the coast. The stray fragments of wood are highly prized. The furs furnish their clothing. Their shoes are cut to come well up to the thighs. Here it is met by a kind of under skirt, which reaches to the waist. The coat is fashioned in almost precisely the same manner as the 'swallowtail' or full dress coat worn at inaugural balls by their civilized brothers. It cuts off at a sharp angle just above the waist line, a long tail divided into two pieces hanging down behind. The whole outfit is strapped together by means of thongs and buttons made from raw hide and bone.

In one place on the island Prof. Stefanson discovered a conical stone house, which bears a striking resemblance to the house built in Greenland and Newfoundland by the Norsemen who first inhabited those places.

Never Saw Match or Rifle

None of the natives had ever seen a sulphur match or a rifle. They had never even heard of them. One tribe expressed surprise when Stefanson killed a caribou with a 'Manlicher' rifle at a distance of more than 1,000 yards.

Although Stefanson must have endured untold hardships during the five years he spent in the Arctic, one never would think so from talking to him. He traveled on foot more than 1,000 miles, and sustained himself and Dr. Anderson on the proceeds of his rifle.

There are but two specimens of the barren ground bear in the United States. Stefanson secured 19. Thirteen of them were killed with a rifle and six were killed by the natives. They will be brought down by Dr. Anderson, who left the shores of the Arctic on a whaler. Dr. Anderson also is bringing many other biological geological and botanical specimens.

The temperature in this latitude in winter ranges about 55 degrees below zero on an average. Prof. Stefanson and his associates wore wollen underwear in summer, and in the winter, which is nearly all of the time, wore clothing which they made with the fur pelts of animals slain. Pants and coats were made with two thicknesses of fur, one fur being placed next to the skin, and the other turned outward to meet the cold and frost.

Maps Inaccurate

During the five years that he spent on the expedition Stefanson killed nearly sixty tons of meat. He traveled twenty miles for every one traveled by Amundsen Perry or any other explorer and mapped a large portion of the country.

The maps of the top of the world he says are grossly inaccurate. Rivers which are marked on the charts have no existence in fact and mountain ranges appear where the country should be flat. He found Amundsen's maps, however, very useful and generally correct.

While the Indians in the region in which he traveled provided for themselves and fed their aged and children with the proceeds of the primitive weapons, Stefanson was equipped with modern fierarms. The unhunted animals, he says have no more chance against a rifle than a mosquito would have against a piledriver.

Scientifically the work was divided between himself and Dr. Anderson Stefanson did the mapping and the anthropolegical and ethnological tasks while Dr. Anderson took care of the biological, botanical and geological tasks.

"THE HAIRS OF YOUR HEAD ARE NUMBERED"

There is a great deal of truth in the old saying.

Roots die, vitality gives out. The hair begins to turn grey.

This is particularly unfortunate as we are all living in an age when to LOOK young means to fill the YOUNG and IMPORTANT positions. Old fogies go to the background.

If you should begin to chalk down every day of your life, the exact number of hairs that turn grey, you would be surprised and soon learn that "The Grey Hairs of Premature Old Age" come on very quickly, if you neglect them.

His Majesty Sanctions Production of Play on Condition

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—The Kaiser's personal censorship of plays in which the Hohenzollerns are represented has just been exercised on a new drama in which Frederick the Great and Queen Louise appear. His Majesty sanctioned the production of the play on condition that the scene depicting Queen Louise's meeting with Napoleon at Tilsit after the defeat of the Russians in 1807, be eliminated.

LABORITES SEE O.A.C.

Trades and Labor Congress Takes Afternoon Off.

Organization Decides to Take No Action With Regard to the Fight Between Two Factions of Carpenters In Montreal—Lord Hamilton's Slur on Keir Hardie Bitterly Resented by Delegates.

Guelph, Sept. 12.—There was no session of the Trades and Labor Congress yesterday afternoon, but instead a visit was paid to the Ontario Agricultural College. The local committee supplied special cars for the occasion and the majority of the delegates availed themselves of the opportunity. The visitors were received by Dr. Creelman and staff and were shown all over the buildings and grounds, and the labor people were much pleased with the treatment received.

The majority of those who went out to the college were not only surprised at what they saw, but were absolutely astonished. They were particularly delighted with the live stock, the experimental plots, the dairy and poultry departments and the excellent manner in which the college grounds are kept.

The fight between the Amalgamated Carpenters of Montreal and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters' and Joiners' was brought before the congress in a resolution by Narcisse Arcaud of Montreal, asking that the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters be not recognized by the congress

He pointed out that the Amalgamated Carpenters had their charter revoked by the American Federation of Labor, and they had proved themselves harder to fight than the bosses in Quebec. After the united order had signed up agreements for 40 cents an hour the Amalgamated took work at 35 cents. The resolution committee reported non-concurrence in the resolution.

The convention sympathized with Mr. Arcaud's position, but as it was largely a question of jurisdiction, and in other parts of the country the two orders work together harmoniously, it was decided to take no action.

Resentment was strongly expressed at the evening session of the congress concerning the statements credited to Lord Claude Hamilton in an interview published in a Toronto paper, that the congress should not take Keir Hardie, M.P., too seriously, as he did not represent the British Labor party.

This was declared false and a letter was read from the executive committee of the British organization, in which Keir Hardie was appointed delegate, and saying that it was hoped his presence would stimulate interest in the Canadian movement.

Fraternal greetings were brought by John D. Smith of Kansas City, representative of the American Federation of Labor, who reviewed the work across the border and pointed out that so successful had they been along legislative lines there that they had elected 15 men to Congress, all representative tradesmen.

Aviator Peck Dead.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Aviator Paul Peck of Washington, D.C., holder of the American duration flight record, was killed in a fall with a biplane last night while flying in a gusty wind. He attempted too steep a spiral and when he struck the ground the heavy engine came through the wreckage, striking him in the neck.

A gusty wind blew at Cicero Field all day, and Director Andrew Drew posted the customary warning to aviators against going up. Peck, believing his small biplane would be fast enough to carry him through the choppy wind, went into the air in spite of the caution.

Peck was American licensed aviator No. 57, and had developed a monoplane and the biplane in which he was killed. The biplane was of only 26 feet span, headless and equipped with a gyro-motor., He was about 24 years old and making a trial flight preparatory for the international aviation meet here to-day.

No Hardship In Arctic.

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 12.—Stefansson, after five years in the Arctic, started last night for New York to compile his scientific data, after which he will return to the Arctic region via the Edmonton trail and Mackenzie river. He planned to devote twenty years to Arctic exploration, and has still fifteen years work ahead.

Every attempt to lead Stefansson into talking of the hardships of the Arctic region has brought forth this answer: "There are no hardships."

Becker Trial Delayed.

New York, Sept. 12.—Supreme Court Justice Bischoff yesterday afternoon granted a stay in the Becker trial delaying the case from to-day until Oct. 1. This was granted on application of John F. McIntyre, Becker's counsel, for the appointment of a commission to take the testimony of persons in Hot Springs, Ark., who talked with Sam Schepps, a witness in the case, and his captors, in Hot Springs.

German Aviator Killed.

Dresden, Saxony, Sept. 12.—Lieut. Siebert, an aviator, attached to the Red Army in the Imperial manoeuvres now in progress in Saxony, fell with his aeroplane while scouting yesterday and was killed. His companion, Lieut. Zimmerman, was seriously injured.

Five of the six Red Army aeroplanes have been disabled while carrying out military orders. The dirigible balloons are proving very satisfactory.

Damming Montreal River.

Latchford, Sept. 12.—Once again the Dominion Government have started contractors to dam the Montreal river here. Five contractors have already attempted it, without success. J. H. Hockey Team Will Visit Australia

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—During his stay in town Bruce Ridpath gave out details of a novel plan that Frank Patrick has in view for next spring after the close of the hockey season. According to the former Ottawa star, the British Columbia hockey magnate intends to take a picked team of eastern and western hockey stars to Australia to play exhibition games of the great Canadian winter sport in that country. They have an artificial ice plant at Sydney with a good ice surface on the rink, and it is expected that such a novelty as hockey would attract big crowds. The teams would be picked by Frank Patrick after the close of the season, and it is expected that three or four Ottawa players would take the trip, which would last a couple of months.

THE RING

HILLIARD LANG BEATS BRONSON

WINNIPEG, Sept. 11.—Hilliard Lang earned the decision in his bout with Bronson here last night, after the boys had gone the limit. They met at 142 pounds.

Bronson, who claims that he is the legitimate welterweight champion of the world, because he fights at 142 pounds, the proper welterweight limit, is certainly one of the best boys at that weight in the country. He is the first toup notcher Lang ever met at his own weight. The Toronto boy has been battling them both here and in the East at anywhere from 145 pounds to 156 pounds, principally the former. His victory of last night which was as clean cut as it could be without a knockout, almost makes good the claim of Charlie Conkie, his manager, that he is as good as any 142 pounder in the world.

DIX AFTER BOXING AGAIN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Prize fight managers in this city were greatly troubled to-day and there was a general feeling that big bouts between recognized champions cannot be set here. The action of Governor Dix in serving notice on Sheriff Julius Harburger and District Attorney Whitman that the bout between Packey MacFarland and Ad Wolgast was a prize fight pure and simple, and must not be permitted, has dazed the promoters.

It is taken to mean that the Governor has determined to nullify the present law by insisting on the enforcement of the penal code provision, making prize fighting a felony, and if he maintains this attitude on all big matches, only the second and third raters can be brought together in the various clubs.

LEACH CROSS DISQUALIFIED

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Leach Cross of this city and Fred Duffy of Buffalo were scheduled to fight 10 rounds at the St. Nicholas A. C. last night, but in the fourth round Referee Tone disqualified Cross for fouling. Cross in one of the previous rounds hit his man low and then used the kidney punch, which is barred by the State Athletic Commission. After being cautioned Cross apologized, but in the fourth round he repeated the kidney blow twice, landing hard rights over Duffy's kidneys, and he was immediately disqualified. Duffy had the better of the bout on points at the time the referee interferred.

National Hockey Commission Coming

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 11.—It can be announced this afternoon that a real National Hockey Association stretching from coast to coast is now a foregone conclusion. President Quinn, of the National Hockey Association, has been working on this plan for the last six months and the final spike has been driven in it, so to speak, by the arrival of Rollie Norman from the lower provinces.

A letter similar to the one received by Mr. Bannerman and which was printed in last night's Star was written by Mr. Quinn to the Pacific coast and the Maritime districts, and Mr. Norman came in person to bring the response to this while Bruce Ridpath brought word from the Patricks that they were agreeable to a plan. A meeting will therefore be held one of these days at which representatives from all the districts will assemble and a hockey commission will then be formed to act as court of last resort in cases of dispute which the four district leagues will be unable to settle themselves. Thereby the game will be put exactly upon the same basis upon which baseball is being run in the United States. It will mean that the National Hockey Association will consist of a central, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec district; a Maritime district, a Soo district and a Pacific coast district. These will be the only changes for the coming season.

RELICS OF ROMANS

Skeletons of Caesar's Soldiers Dug up in Old English City

Eighteen skeletons were unearthed at Chester, England, by workmen who were preparing a site for an extension of the Chester Infirmary. The skeletons were found at a depth of five feet. The site was undoubtedly used by the twentieth legion of Romans during their occupation of the city. With the skeletons were found several Roman sandals which were wonderfully preserved, also some Roman pottery, tiles and bottles.

One hundred guineas was paid for a seven-year-old cow at a sale of a noted herd of Ayrshire cattle belonging to Mr. James Wallace, Auchenbrack, near Thornhill, Scotland.

BRITISH OFFICIAL STANDARDS ARE BUILT IN THE WALL

One of the queerest and most important of all the ceremonies that are gone through in England is the unearthing and examining of the contents of an extraordinary box buried in the masonry which forms the public staircase of the House of Commons, and thereby checking the weights and measures used in Great Britain. This ceremony is performed once every twenty years.

To get at the box, which is of oak, it is necessary to pull down part of the wall of the staircase. Then, after the casket has been exhumed and its unique contents examined with infinite care by a band of scientists, it is again put back in cavity of the wall, which then is built up.

The box contains two pieces of metal. One of them is a cube of plantinum measuring only one inch along each side; you would buy another like it for about $200, but this particular cube has a value beyond all other pieces of metal. The way in which it is guarded gives some idea of its worth. To begin with, it is carefully wrapped up in a specially prepared paper uncommonly soft in texture, and is laid in another silvergilt case. This case goes into yet another made of stout bronze, which fits into a sturdy mahogany box, firmly screwed down, and in addition, sealed in a particular way.

The other thing in the box is a rod of bronze. It is carefully protected too, and is placed on eight rollers in another mahogany case. This case is securely screwed together and carefully sealed. Both these mahogany cases are put in a special casket made of lead, firmly soldered and perfectly air-tight. There is still another covering, however, the leaden casket being fitted into the oaken one already mentioned. This is of specially selected wood, and is sealed in such a way that its contents are kept absolutely intact. It fits exactly into the cavity of the masonry of the staircase.

The two queer pieces of metal which are guarded with such sacredness are the standards of the British weights and measures. They always remain of the same value. The standards which were first used came to grief in 1834, in the fire at the House of Parliament, and it took many men of science many long years to compute and manufacture the existing two pieces of metal. The one inch cube af platinum, though so small, weighs a pound. The bronze rod is thirty-eight inches long and has two studs of solid gold to measure off the yard. Two lines cross these gold studs, and at a certain temperature and pressure of the air, the distance between these fine lines is the standard of British measures.

When the ceremony of examining the standard comes off, they are not touched by hands, but are held in special tongs. One of the most delicate balances known is used in weighing the cube. The yard is measured with the utmost exactness, a powerful microscope being used, and other delicate measurements are made.

THRILLING ADVENTURE

Vessel Suspended High in the Air on an Iceberg in the Arctic Seas

In illustrating a lecture on icebergs, before the Royal Societies' Club at London, Sir Charles Clements Markham, the explorer, described a thrilling incident which he said was the most remarkable escape from imminent danger in the whole annals of Arctic adventure.

It concerned, he said, their steam tender, the Intrepid, commanded by Lieut. J. B. Caton. A vast floe drove her against a berg with a frightful crash. Destruction seemed certain, when the little vessel was seen to rise to the pressure. She was forged forty feet up the side of the iceberg, masses of ice from the floating floe running ten feet above the bulwark, then the piled up mass from the floe sank down, leaving the ship suspended on the side of the berk, her only support to keep her stationary in this dangerous position being two small wedge pieces, one at the stern post and the other at the bow. She was in imminent danger of falling over on her broadside from that height.

The boats had been got out, but they were smashed to pieces by the ice. Three times the ice-floes pressed against the berg, and, with the boats gone, the loss of the ship would have entailed that of all on board. Suddenly the pressure eased off, and the Intrepid was launched into the sea from her lofty position, without injury. Lieut. Caton and others had walked under her keel while she was thus suspended on the side of the iceberg. The present Admiral Sir V. Vesey Hamilton is the only survivor of those who were actually on board her at the time.

RULES FOR WHIPPING

Japanese Press Makes Fun of Elaborate Official Orders

The Tokio Press is making much fun of an administrative order contained in the "Official Gazette," giving minute directions as to the method of application of corporal punishment in the Korean peninsula.

The culprit shall lie on his stomach, his hands stretched out above his head and fastened. Straps are to be passed around his body and around the knee joints and arms, with the clothes so arranged as to expose the hips. The executioner shall stand with his whip at arm's length, the tip protruding three inches over the edge of the prisoner's body. The executioner's left hand shall be on his left side, palm upwards, the right foot in advance, and bearing the weight of the body.

The stroke is to be delivered perpendicularly, and the skin is under no circumstances to be broken. The punishment is to take place one hour after a meal ,and the prisoner, if he requires refreshment during the operations, shall be given a drink of fresh water.

The Press suggests that the Minister of Finance might obtain something towards covering the deficit in the Budget by making a spectacle a public one at a charge of a penny per head for spectators.

Married by Signs

Two marriages of deaf mutes were conducted at Croydon by the Rev. Vernon Jones, one of the chaplains of the Royal Assocaition in Aid of the Deaf and Dumb.

One was at Christ Church, West Croydon, and was attended by over 100 deaf mutes. The other was at Holy Innocents', South Norwood. The whole of the service in each case was carried out by sign language.

One bridegroom was a bootmaker and the other a toymaker, the former being married to an upholstress and the latter to a dressmaker.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

BULGARIA HOSTILE.

Balkan Country Is In Open War With Turkey.

Vienna, Sept. 12—Fighting has broken out on the Turko-Bulgarian frontier, according to messages received from Constantinople and Sofia yesterday.

It is said the Bulgarians opened hostilities by firing from a frontier fort upon a Turkish patrol. The Turks returned the fire, killing five Bulgarians. Bulgarian reinforcements soon came up, whereupon the Turkish commander armed the Mohammedan peasants in the vicinity and added them to his forces. The battle raged all day, with many casualties. Following so soon upon the bomb explosion, for which it is charged Bulgarians were responsible, resulting in twenty deaths at Doran, near Salonica, fears are entertained here that the clash will render a war certain.

Rushing Troops to Frontier.

Constantinople, Sept. 12.—The Turkish War Office dropped all concealment and began rushing troops toward the Bulgarian frontier yesterday.

The Government evidently has lost its temper over Budgaria's badgering concerning Macedonia, which a Cabinet Minister acknowledged yesterday as impertinent interference with Turkey's internal affairs."

Bulgaria's Ultimatum.

Berlin. Sept. 12.—Bulgaria has sent an ultimatum to the powers, says a special to The Frankfurter Gazette yesterday, to the effect that unless Turkey grants autonomy to Macedonia, a Turco-Bulgarian war is inevitable. The Zeitung prints a similar despatch, saying that if the powers did not secure autonomy for Macedonia, Bulgaria must resort to arms.

TO IGNORE REGULATION.

Ottawa Separate Schools Will Be Bilingual Say Trustees.

Ottawa, Sept. 12.—The Ottawa separate school board will take a bold stand against the enforcement of the regulations in regard to bilingual schools, recently put in force by the Ontario Government. This was decided at last night's meeting of that body, which lasted until after midnight, and where a motion was passed stating that the board would decline to enforce such regulations. As to the effect of this stand several trustees stated that the Government could do no more than cut off its grants of $4,000, while others differed from them and stated that should it so desire the separate schools of the capital could be rendered mere private institutions, for which taxes could not be collected. At length, however, two motions, moved by Trustee Genest, were carried.

The first, after pointing out that the mode of teaching prescribed by the new resolution was detrimental to the pupils for whom the board had to provide, that the appointment of English Protestant inspectors over the heads of the bilingual Roman Catholic ones was objectionable, and that additional expense would be incurred, stated the board would be regretfully compelled to decline the said instructions.

The second motion, addressed to the Department of Education, drew attention more particularly to the matter of the appointment of the Protestant inspectors. "The aim is not education but the Anglicanization of our children," said Trustee Genest in the course of an eloquent address, in which he introduced his motion.

Frost Scare Regretted.

Winnipeg, Sept. 12.—Crop conditions throughout the west are greatly improved. There has been little or no damage from frost. Injury to the crops as the result of the recent heavy rains have been very light indeed, and much less than was anticipated.

The grain is drying out in splendid condition and threshing is now in full swing. The recent scare as to frost sent east by grainmen and others is deplorable, inasmuch as it retards immigration and does harm in numerous ways. There has been no frost to date, except in a very few isolated cases, where some grain may have been reduced a grade. With the fine weather of the past few days continuing a bumper harvest is assured.

Gibson Faces Murder Charge.

New York, Sept. 12.—Calmly smoking a cigar on the porch of his home in Rutheford, N.J., last night, Lawyer Burton W. Gibson awaited the arrival of Sheriff William C. DeGraw of Orange County, N.Y., with a warrant for his arrest on the charge of murder in the first degree. The warrant was issued late yesterday in Middleton, N.Y., and charged Gibson with having caused the death of his client, Mrs. H. Rosa Menschik Szabo, who was drowned on July 16, while boating with the lawyer on Greenwood Lake, N.Y.

Nearly Cost 2,000 Lives.

New York, Sept. 12.—The Hudson County Democratic Club, formerly the Robert Davis Association of Jersey City, 2,000 strong, had a narrow escape from drowning last night when the iron steamboat Perseus ran on a reef opposite the College Point ferry-house.

The boat was badly damaged and the inrush of water stopped the engines and cut off the electric lights on all the decks. A panic followed, but brave and efficient work by the crews of two tugs prevented any fatalities.

Dissension In C. F. of L.

Three Rivers, Quebec, Sept. 12.—Dissensions within and attacks from without seemed to be the general experience of the Canadian Federation of Labor, judging by the reports which were made at the opening sessions of the fourth annual convention, held here yesterday.

The reports showed that the Canadian body has had to fight strenuously the American organizations and that even in its own ranks there have been difficulties that have retarded progress.

TO REFORM SERVICE

Dominion Departments May Be Overhauled by an Expert.

Ottawa, Sept. 12.—The announcement made in London Truth yesterday that Premier Borden, while in London, engaged the services of Sir George Murray to make recommendations for the reorganizing along more efficient lines of the administrative Departments of the Government is in part officially confirmed here. The report is correct in so far as it relates to the coming of Sir George to Canada at the instigation of Mr. Borden, but nothing definite, as far as can be ascertained, has been decided as to the precise purpose or object for which Sir George is coming. Premier Borden has not given out anything officially relating to the matter.

Sir George Murray is one of the best known of British civil servants. He entered the Foreign Office in 1873 and was transferred to the Treasury in 1880. He later became private secretary to Gladstone and then to the Earl of Rosebery when Prime Minister. From 1897 to 1899 he was chairman of the Board of Inland Revenue, when he was promoted to the secretary of the postoffice, holding great responsible position until 1903, when he was appointed Permanent Secretary of the Treasury.

It is understood that one of the matters to which Sir George Murray will give his attention while here will be the organizing of the British system of under secretaries in Canada. Sir Joseph Pope, while in England, gave the question some attention, and it is understood that the creation of under secretaries will take place this session. The reorganization of the Department of Foreign or External Affairs, will likely also be one of the matters upon which Sir George will advise, and for which his long service in the British Foreign Office eminently fits him.

UNIONIST ELECTED.

Government Loses Seat Vacated by Master of Elibank.

London, Sept. 12—Major J. A. Hope, Unionist, yesterday was elected member of Parliament for Midlothian, Edinburghshire, in succession to the Master of Elibank, who recently was elevated to the peerage. Hope's majority over his Liberal opponent, Alex. Shaw, was thirty-two. The poll resulted as follows: Major Hope, Unionist, 6,021; Alex. Shaw, Liberal, 5,989; Provost Brown, Labor, 2,413. The loss of the Midlothian seat to the Government was due to the intervention of the Labor party, which recently announced its intention to nominate a candidate in every constituency where there was a large number of workingmen, despite any effect it might have on the coalition majority in the House of Commons. In the last general when no Labor candidate contested the Midlothian seat, the Master of Elibank won over Major Hope with a majority of 3,157.

While the Unionists are highly elated over the capture of Midlothian, which has been Liberal since the late Hon. W. E. Gladstone carried it in 1880, representing the constituency for 15 years, the result seems more indication of the widening breach between Liberals and Laborites than of Unionist strength, as the Unionist vote increased by only 341. It has been suggested that the Master of Elibank resigned the seat because of differences with the Government. Probably he was opposed to his party running a candidate in the Labor seat of Hanley, as a result of which the Labor party decided to act quite independently of the Liberals in contesting seats.

Progessives Sweep Colorado.

Denver, Col., Sept. 12.—Progressives in both parties swept Colorado in the state-wide primaries held Tuesday. Philip B. Stewart was nominated for governor on the Republican ticket, and Elias M. Edmonds on the Democratic ticket.

Progressive candidates for all other offices were nominated with them. The Roosevelt forces endeavored to get Stewart to withdraw from the old party and join the Bull Moosers, but he refused and will now be opposed by Edward B. Costigan, the Bull Moose candidate, entered by petition in the regular election.

Dismissed From Office, Takes Life.

Quebec, Sept. 12:—Jumping from a window of the third flat of the Mountain Hill House, Dudger Beauregard, a well-known Quebecker, committed suicide yesterday morning. Mr. Beauregard, who was a purchaser of right of way for the Transcontinental Railway Commission in the district of Quebec, had lost his job recently, owing to his political opinions, and this is thought to have caused him to end his life. He was living in Defosses street with his four daughters.

Big Canadian Company.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—A group of influential Canadians, including Sir William C. VanHorne, Sir William Mackenzie, Messrs. George F. Johnston, C. W. McLean and J. Wesley Allison, have secured from the Steel Package Co. of New York the latter's patents to manufacture steel barrels and commercial packages of all descriptions.

The new concern, it is said, is capitalized at $5,000,000, the financing having been done in New York, and will erect in the vicinity of Montreal one of the largest steel manufacturing plants in the Dominion. All the enterprise has been financed and the new company will start off with several million dollars' worth of orders.

Baron Oppenhein, one of the famous Rothschild family, it is understood, is heavily interested in the company.

The new concern is to be known as the Canadian Steel Package Co., and it is probable Sir William Van Horne will be the first president.

Explored South America.

New York, Sept. 12.—After laying the foundation for an extensive biological exploration of practically unknown regions in Columbia, Ecuador, Peru and Brazil, Prof. Leo B. Miller has returned to the American Museum of Natural History, bringing 2,300 specimens of birds and animals. He was gone eighteen months. The museum will follow up the Miller researches with several larger expeditions.

Prof. Miller's most interesting discovery was of numerous specimens of the "cock o' the rock," a magnificent colored bird, which is found only on South America.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Because they were not permitted to smoke at work, operatives in the Slobo Shoe Factory at Quebec have gone on strike.

The Dominion Labor Department authorities forecast a slight decrease in the index number of the cost of living during August.

Mrs. Joseph Norman, aged 27 years of age, committed suicide at the home of her sister, at Guelph, yesterday by swallowing carbolic acid.

The Winnipeg Telegram (Cons.) says that R. L. Richardson is to be the Liberal candidate in the bye-election in Macdonald, Man.

Cardinal Peter Hercules Coullio, archbishop of Lyons, France, died there yesterday. He was born at Paris in 1829 and created a cardinal in 1897.

The famous Mosque of Santa Sophia at Constantinople, built by Justinian in the sixth century, has been considerably damaged by the recent earthquake.

The Hamburg-American Line's steamer Kamerun, which sailed from Hamburg, Germany, Aug. 24, has been wrecked on the west coast of Africa. The crew was rescued.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Loretto Cecelia Kingsley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kingsley of Wolfe Island, Kingston, to Hon. Louis Heinrich Janessans, son of Grof Count Von Unkila of Germany.

Miss Pankhurst In Paris.

London, Sept. 12.—Christabel Pankhurst, for whom the police have been hunting on a charge of complicity in a conspiracy for the encouragement of suffragette-militancy, is in Paris, The Women Social and Political Union announced yesterday

Having been assured that, as a political offender, she cannot be extradited, there is no further reason, The Union says, for secrecy.

From Paris Miss Pankhurst will continue directing the suffragette campaign on this side of the channel.

Unclaimed Millions.

London, Eng., Sept. 12.—A Parliamentary return recently issued shows that in England and Ireland the sum total of £5,641,173 sterling, or about $28,205,865, is held as unclaimed funds in different Government departments. This, of course, does not include the unclaimed balances held by banks.

The funds are made up thus: Funds in Chancery, £2,387,283; unclaimed dividends from bankrupts' estates, £1,157,117; Government stocks and dividends unclaimed, £2,096,773.

Flowers of China.

As a result of investigations by certain agricultural experts it has been learned that the rose, as well as the chrysanthemum, originated in China.

Parks of Juarez.

Juarez, Mexico, is believed to be the only town in the world in which the direction and control of the city parks have been turned over completely to women. The parks are cared for by men, but above the men is a board of eight lady managers.

Plans of Cruiser-Liners.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—Plans of cruiser-liners prepared originally at the request of the C.P.R. by Edward Bath, an eminent English naval architect, were made public here yesterday.

They call for vessels of 700 feet long, 30 feet draught, and a speed of 24 knots an hour. The vessels would have turrets for four six-inch and eight 4.7 inch guns, and sixteen quick-ring guns. Heavy armor would also be carried, while more could be attached in war time.

The designer points out that not only would a number of these vessels prove to be a great strengthening to a fleet, being virtually as fast and as heavily armored as cruisers, but they would reduce the passage from Liverpool to Montreal to five days. The cost of the liners would be $3,000,000.

Fire Chiefs In Convention.

Woodstock, Sept. 12.—Fifty fire chiefs, representing the chief cities and towns in Ontario, are here for the fourth annual convention of the Fire Chiefs' Association, which opens this morning in the city hall. Mayor Welford will welcome them officially, after which topics will be read by chiefs of departments and general business transacted. A banquet will be held in the evening at Hotel Oxford.

Cannot Interfere.

Ottawa, Sept. 12.—That it has no jurisdiction in the matter, is the reply of the Railway Commission to the request of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association in regard to the recent increase in lumber freight rates by American railways, giving connection between Canada and United States points. These rates have been materially advanced.

BELLEVILLE FAIR WAS MOST SUCCESSFUL IN MANY YEARS

Five Thousand Thronged the Grounds on Closing Day—A Grand Display of Live Stock—Speeding Events were Closely Contested—One Race went Six Heats—Gala Time Enjoyed by All—Notes of Proceedings.

The Belleville Fair for the year 1912 is now an event of the past. It was brought to a close yesterday afternoon under most favorable auspices. The closing day was all that could have been desired, and in consequence the attendance was a record one, in fact the number of paid admissions for the two days and evening were considerably in excess of previous years. The management are naturally proud of the success which crowned their efforts. A number of spectators visited the fair during yesterday morning, and as early as one o'clock in the afternoon people commenced to go into the grounds in streams, arriving in every conceivable mode of conveyance. It is estimated that there were upwards of 5,000 persons upon the ground during the afternoon, including the school children, who were granted a half holiday in order that they might attend the fair. The youngsters certainly enjoyed themselves, visiting every nook and corner and viewing the amusements presented. The ferris wheel, side show and special features proved to be an attraction for them. During the early part of the day the judges were busy in many departments making their awards, and in some classes their task was by no means an easy one, owing to the number of entries and the excellent exhibits. In some respects it has proved to be the most successful fair ever held in Belleville.

SPEEDING EVENTS.

The speeding events were naturally the attraction for the greater portion of the spectators, who certainly in this respect had the worth of their money paid for admission. The two events upon the programme were the free-for-all and the 2.40 class. The latter proved to be a hard fought contest as six heats were required to be run before it was concluded. It was growing dusk when the final heat was run.

FREE-FOR-ALL, MILE HEATS.

In this event there were six entries, namely, Lady Sphinx, owned by Geo. Powell, Belleville; Hester Schuyler, Ashley Stock Farm, Thurlow; Major Direct, C. Williamson, Toronto; Sidney Mack, R. Williamson, Toronto; Iron Duke, W. B. Williamson, Toronto, and Black Bill, R. Turley, of Frankford. Only three heats were necessary to decide the event. Lady Sphinx proved to be an easy winner, passing first under the wire in each heat. In two heats Hester Schuyler made a desperate effort to overtake the winner, but was unable to do so. The summary was as follows:

Lady Sphinx, Geo. Powell, Belleville	1 1 1
Hester Schuyler, Ashley Stock Farm	3 2 2
Major Direct, C. Williamson, Toronto	2 4 6
Sidney Mack, R Williamson, Toronto	5 3 4
Black Bill, R. Turley, Frankford	6 6 3
Iron Duke, W. B. Williamson, Toronto	4 5 5

2.40 CLASS, MILE HEATS.

This proved to be the great event of the day, and the spectators were treated to a fine exhibition of speed and staying power. In the first heat and just after the start, an accident occurred, but fortunately no person was seriously injured. In the turn at the first quarter, when the horses had nicely got away, Joe Hal, owned and driven by George Barnum of Madoc, fell, throwing Mr. Barnum to the ground. As the horse was trailing at the time he did not interfere with the other competitors. It was at first feared that both horse and driver had been injured, but such proved not to be the case. Mr. Barnum withdrew his horse from the race after the accident. The other contestants were:—Alcove, owned by W. Williamson of Toronto; Windsor Belle, owned by L. C. Ketcheson of Belleville; Black Prince, owned by Mr. MacColl of Wooler, and Ionia, owned by T. Stewart, of Deseronto. Windsor Belle took the first two heats in a comparatively easy manner, but the third and fourth heats were captured by Alcove. In the fifth heat in the second half mile, Black Prince forged ahead and won by a fair margin. When the fifth heat was concluded the owners of the horses were called to the judges' stand and asked if they desired to have another heat, or if they would allow the race to go over. The crowd naturally clamored for the race to be concluded, and the owners decided to have another heat, after a fifteen mintes' intermission. In the sixth and concluding heat at the start Black Prince forged ahead and maintained the lead to the finish, winning not only the heat but the race. Owing to the fact that so many heats had been contested and the owners had agreed to finish the race the judges recommended that the management of the fair add $5 to the prize money. It was nearly seven o'clock when the last heat was finished, and notwithstanding this late hour, a large crowd of spectators remained to see the finish. It was certainly a great horse race. No time was given out. Windsor Belle won second money. The summary was as follows:—

Black Prince, McColl, Wooler	2 3 2 2 1 1
Windsor Belle, L. Ketcheson, Belleville	1 1 3 3 2 2
Alcove, W. Williamson, Toronto	3 2 1 1 3 3
Ionia, T. Stewart, Deseronto	4 4 4 4 4 4

Joe Hal, Geo. Barnum, Madoc, withdrawn.

NOTES

A boy named Willie Bedell residing on Benjamin Street in this city while running across the race track was knocked down by a trotting horse, but fortunately escaped injuries.

Mr. Joseph Reid of Sidney Township captured Mr. E. G. Porter's silver cup for the best driving team upon the grounds.

Mr. Raney of Stirling was awarded Mr. Lee Ketcheson's prize of a silver cup for the best lady's turnout. Mrs. Harry Ketcheson of Sidney drove the animal.

Mr. R. J. Garbutt of Thurlow captured the Association silver cup for the best display of fall and winter apples correctly named.

ELECTRICAL DEMONSTRATION

The Trenton Electric and Water Company made an excellent exhibit of farming utensils run by electricity It was shown how working, churning cutting machines, etc., could be operated by electricity. The company also demonstrated that cows could be milked by electricity, by having two animals milked. This was an interesting exhibit.

SHALL I WIN HER?

THE STORY OF A WANDERER

By JAMES GRANT

Author of "The Romance of War," "Under the Red Dragon," "Fairer than A Fairy," etc.

Far down below, the kloof and wood in which I had left my horse were buried in utter darkness. For a moment I could scarcely remember where I was or how I came to be there.

Was it the fragment of some distempered dream that out of all this seemed to come before me the soft dark face and black upbraiding eyes of the Griqua girl from whom I was flying?

"But can I sacrifice my liberty for her?" thought I. "Bah! the little savage will soon become consoled."

Yet the thoughts of Mariqua were not to be so easily thrust aside.

I now heard the sound of voices near me. What was the language spoken I could not determine; but the red wavering glow of a fire now shone from the mouth of the cavern I had lately explored. Its recent tenants had returned or others now were there.

Judging by the position of the stars and the shining moon, midnight was past, and daybreak could not be far off, and now was the time to satisfy myself as to who these people were—if friends, to join them; if foes, to creep down to the thicket in the kloof, mount, and be off westward with all speed.

I carried the hatchet in my teeth and rifle in hand, crept out of my rocky alcove. Drawing near the mouth of the cavern I peeped in.

The odor of the broiling partridges came pleasantly towards me from a fire of wood, the red flames of which lit up, with quaint grotesquerie, the garish Bushman frescoes on the walls or rock, so that the figures seemed to start forth to the eye, to move and waver like a shaken tapestry.

Near the fire were seated two men dressed in the usual colonial fashion with round jackets, yellow "cracker" trousers and moccasins of fur, with Fingo hats and feathers.

Both were armed with gun and knife. One a Hottentot, was busily superintending the cooking; the other, a white man of great size and personal strength, apparently, reclined on the bed of leaves.

He groaned heavily at times, as if in pain. He seemed pale and weary, and his right leg, which was bound up by strips of raw hide, was evidently wounded, for it appeared powerless, broken, and covered with blood.

I entered the cavern, rifle in hand. The sufferer, with the air and eye of one who cared little now whether he met friend or foe, looked up from his bed of leaves, and I found myself face to face—with whom?

Mark Sharkeigh, alias Graaff, the Bushranger, the fugitive convict, the subtle and revengeful wretch who, in concert with an awful hypocrite, had defrauded me of my birthright, and consequently, as yet, of Clarice Haywood!

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Mark Sharkeigh he proved to be indeed, and his comrade was my quondam knecht and follower, Adrian Africader, the thief, deserter, and rebel. So I had suddenly lighted upon pleasant company.

On recognising me Africander made a wild spring towards his rifle, which lay on the ground near the fire: but I was too quick for him. Adroitly placing my foot on it, I thrust him back furiously, by charging him breast high with mine, and with all my force. He grew peagreen with terror, and reeled against the rocky wall of the cavern exclaiming in his Cape gibberish—

"Ya, ya, Almachtig! Dat is he—my groote Bass Reichardt! Shoot, shoot, Bass Mark, or mi scapsils: (i.e. my stars) he will make an end of us."

"Was there ever such a confounded old duffer, to let himself be disarmed but I'll settle his hash if I can," cried Sharkeigh, writhing himself into a sitting position, and true to his first and natural impulses, attempting to cock his rifle with the intention of shooting me.

But he fell back powerless, unable to life or level it; so I instantly snatched it from him, and then both men were before me, defenceless save for their knives, which one was incapable of using, and the other afraid to do so.

"Shoot shoot!" cried Africander in growing confusion and dismay.

"Silence, you traitor and thief," I exclaimed; "as I have no jambok here, I shall talk to you by and by; but I must first confer with this great villain."

Then, with great deliberation, I smashed both their rifles, breaking each at the small part of the butt.

The wounded outlaw, from his bed of leaves, glared at me for a time like a veritable wild beast. His eyes were suffused with blood; the hairs of his vast and untrimmed beard seemed to bristle with the nervous excitement, which led him fatuously to open and shut his huge and clumsy hands. Then he clasped them and groaned deeply, for he felt that all was over with him now. He was frightfully pale, for he had evidently lost much blood, and had endured great agony.

I afterwards learned that, on escaping from his kraal on the night it was (for Clarice) so opportunely attacked by Sandilli, he had made his way with Adrian Africander to this Bushman's cavern or temple.

On the preceding evening this retreat had been discovered and attacked by Vonga's people when in pursuit of me, and the fight had ensued to fill up their time. The worthy pair had escaped to the forest in the kloof; they had been fired at there and Mark was wounded—had his right thighbone "smashed to pieces in the skrimmage," as he said.

And now it would seem that he had crawled back here but to die; for his blood was in such a state of fever and ferment by the excesses of his past life that mortification was already setting in.

"Ha!" he exclaimed, through his clenched teeth as he surveyed me with an indescribable glance. "So, as we say in the bush, 'you have got the right snake by the tail at last.'"

"It would seem so," said I, while leaning on my rifle and surveying with wonder and disgust the now crippled wretch on whom Death had put his icy fingers. "You are a snake, serpent indeed."

"We have met before, Captain Haddon," said he, "and now we meet for the last time. I have not forgotten, though I now give the precious tap on the head you gave me in that scuffle with old Bagshot in Treviotdale. My first idea—it's nature I suppose—was to pot you; but my second is to die without another crime."

"That is well," said I. "You will I hope, bring your terrible life to a decent close."

"My life has indeed been terrible," said he bitterly, and in a trembling voice; "but who thrust that life upon me, or rather who thrust me upon the bad career with which you taunt?"

"Your own evil propensities."

"Not so, but your uncle, old Hab, of Haddonrig who again and again had me convicted and locked up among felons and thieves as a poacher, till I grew in time to be a thief and felon myself. Who put me in the castle of Jedburgh, even as a boy—a halfling bairn—for stealing pheasant eggs for my sick mother, and for picking sticks out of his park fence for her little fire in winter: Who, but old Hab of Haddonrig: This was but the result of your cursed game law—a law made by the rich for the temptation and oppression of the poor. Then I grew to be a man and I shot everything that came in my way, and made many a clean sweep of the preserves, as you know Next I was on the turf, as you know, too, Master Dick," continued the miserable creature, becoming more colloquial as his voice grew weaker while he reclined against the side of the cavern with half closed eyes. "Yes, on the turf for a while and soon got the name of a blackeg, though I was on pretty equal terms with the best in the land, for the turf of the racetrack, like the turf of the cold kirkyard, levels all distinctions. Many a tip I took from those who lost and many more from those who won, till I grew weary of being a regular rascal, and betaking me to my gun again, became once more an honest poacher."

"Honest!"

"Yes honest, Dick Haddon for the birds of the air and earth belong to no man, howsoever old Haddonrig may have thought."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

AN ELEPHANT'S CHARGE.

The Way It Was Met by a Cool Headed and Nervy Hunter.

Dr. Dunbar-Brunton spent some years in Africa as a district medical officer. One of his most thrilling adventures was with a bull elephant. With a friend, who went off on another track, he had been following up the tracks of elephants all day without success, and just before sundown received word from his comrade that he was going back. Dr. Dunbar-Brunton decided to return also, but before starting on the homeward track sat down and lighted a pipe. He was smoking quietly when he heard the noise of his friend's beaters, and a native who carried a gun said, "Look!"

A great bull elephant was close upon them. Very quietly the doctor laid down his pipe and took his gun, while the natives scuttled up the trees in terror. The doctor took a quick shot, but just missed the elephant's brain pan. It threw up its trunk, opened its mouth, put its tusks forward and charged. A second shot struck in the shoulder, but did not check its onrush.

The doctor shot again when it was within a few paces, and, hurtling past him, it fell, with legs outstretched, with a bullet in its heart. The doctor turned to his pipe. It was still alight, and he finished his smoke while the natives danced round the body of the elephant.—Chicago News.

Man Eating Sharks.

The sailor says that the most ferocious creature that swims in the sea is the shark. By that he does not mean every shark, but what is called the man eater, just as a certain species of tiger in India is called the man eater because it hunts human beings for its prey, preferring them to animals. The man eating shark is not the largest of this species of fish, but is noted for its strength, also the rapidity with which it swims. It goes through the water so rapidly that few fish exceed it in swiftness, and it is thus able to catch food of that kind. This is especially true in the waters—such as the Indian and south Atlantic oceans, the Pacific ocean and the waters tributary to them—that are deep enough for the shark to swim in.—Chambers' Journal.

Swords and Beards.

At one time in England all "gentlemen" wore swords as well as beards, and their habit of drawing these weapons to settle the most trivial disputes is said to have had much to do with the cut and styles in beards. During this sword wearing period all "bluffers" wore their beards cut and hacked in most outlandish shapes, trying to convey the impression that they were bad men, who had been in many terrific sword combats.

More Than One.

The witness testified that he had been knocked down by a motorcar and that the chauffeur, who was joy riding, had given no warning of his approach.

"Do you mean," asked the judge, "that he didn't have a horn?"

"No, your honor," replied the witness; "I think he'd had too many."—Argonaut.

An Electric Iron

And What It Will Do For You

1. Because you do not have to wait for it to heat up and do not have to walk back and forward from table to stove you can do your ironing in about half the time it usually takes with the ordinary irons.
2. Because the temperature of your iron is easily and quickly regulated you can do your pressing without fear of scorching.
3. Because of the wire holder which fits on the stand and goes with the iron, you can set it bottom up for steaming velvets or pressing ribbons or neckties. Look at the cut.

NEW BATTERY OF ARTILLERY ORGANIZED IN THE CITY

Largely Attended Meeting Last Night Effected the Organization—Officers Elected and Other Business Transacted—Headquarters will be in Old Officers' Quarters on Church Street—Every Requisite will be Provided—Battery will go into Camp on Fair Grounds.

A well attended meeting was held in the city building last evening for the purpose of completing the organization and electing the officers of the 34th artillery battery, which is to be established here.

Major R. Rierdon of this city gave an address to those present, urging young men to take an interest in artillery training, which was calculated in every way to improve them. They desired not only to have a permanent organization here, but to make it one of the best in the district.

Sergt.-Major Hunter, Quartermaster Sergt. Lee and Sergt. G. Spafford also gave brief but practical addresses.

The headquarters of the battery will be on Church Street, in what is known as the officers' quarters of the old drill hall. These premises will be placed in first class shape for the new military organization. A gymnasium and other necessaries will be provided. It is also contemplated to have a gun park established here, and a Rifle Association amongst the members of the battery.

On the 23rd inst. the new battery will go into camp at the Agricultural Park and will remain in camp for 12 days. In connection with the camp there will be a school of instruction to qualify the men as N. C. O.'s.

The officers selected were as follows:

Major—R. Rierdon.

Captain—H. Clapp, V.S.

Lieutenant—T. Dolan.

Sergeant-Major—R. Hunter.

Quarter Master Sergeant—George Lee.

Sergeants—G. Spafford, G. Boyle and H. Thompson.

Wheeling Sergeant—E. Rutherford.

This new military organization starts off well and the prospects are that it will have a large and active membership.

Corrected Version of Mimico Collision

The Intelligencer has learned on undoubted authority that the despatch from Toronto under date of the 6th inst., concerning a railway collision near that city which despatch was published in these columns, was grossly incorrect in every essential particular.

The despatch states that a G.T.R. train crashed into a light engine at Mimico. The fact is that it was a C. P.R. train which crashed into a G. T. R. light engine which was on its way to the terminal at Mimico. The G. T.R. engine, which was in charge of Mr. J. J. Johnson, of this city, who is one of the most careful and competent engineers in the company's service, was proceeding at the rate of about twelve miles per houf, to which the speed is limited on that section, when the C.P.R. train, which was running at about forty miles per hour, dashed into it.

The despatch states that no tail lights were showing on the G. T. R. engine, which statement was shown by the evidence given at the investigation to be untrue.

The Intelligencer is glad to be able to give a correct statement of the unfortunate occurrence and thereby to remove a false impression from the minds of its readers.

Nurses Turned Hose On Hospital Board

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. September 12.—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Victoria Hospital to inquire into charges of mismanagement and unseemly actions on the part of the staff, Alderman T. E. Baker, who laid specific charges, in writing, was held up in leaving the building by nurses, and efforts made to force him to sign an apology. He refused, and the nurses endeavoured to turn the hose on him.

At this moment Mr. F. E. Armitage, one of the directors hurried out hearing the rumpus, just in time to receive the water intended for Alderman Baker.

This is a sequel to the recent fracas in the council chamber when aldermen came to blows.

The Board treats the serious charges lightly, however, and only reaffirms its confidence in the matron and staff. The nurses threatened to quit unless exonerated.

Mexican Rebels Held Up American Train

NOGALES, Ariz. Sept.—11.—The Southern Pacific passenger train which left here for West Coast points at 11 o'clock today was held up by rebels unler Emilio Campa at Quijano, 30 miles south of Nogales, and partly destroyed.

The first intimation that rebels were in the vicinity was a volley of shots fired at the engine, and, obeying the implied command, the engineer brought the train to a stop. Campa himself boarded the train and with an exhibition of extreme deference explained to the passengers that they would not be molested; that he merely wanted all the arms and ammunition aboard the train.

After taking what few arms and ammunition there were, the engineer was sompelled to run the train to Aguazarca, where there was a bridge The mail, baggage and second class cars were placed on the bridge and set on fire. Telegraph wires were tied to the engine and torn down when the train started. Only the first class coach and sleeping car escaped destruction.

News of the hold was brought here tonight by six members of the crew of the train who made the trip to Nogales in a hand car. A switch engine was immediately despached south to bring back the passengers and coaches not burned. All the baggage of the passengers was burned.

Campa sent word by the returning train that he intended to continue south and take possession of Hermosillo, the capital of Sonora.

Remorse Drives Man To Give Himself Up

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Remorse over having killed a man in St. Louis seventeen years ago caused Patrick Haley, fifty-seven years old, to surrender to the Chicago police last night. He asked to be sent back to St. Louis.

"I have been dodging the police and suffering tortures of an ill conscience and can stand it no longer," said Haley. "I want to be sent back to St. Louis and stand trial."

Haley said he quarreled with the man a few minutes after meeting him and struck him on the head, fracturing his skull, the blow proving fatal a few hours later. Haley fled from the city and never even learned the name of his victim.

Famous Kidnapping Case Recalled

Miss Amelie Chetwynd's impending marriage to Capt. Clade Reynard of the Twelfth Lancers, serves to recall the dramatic attempt made to kidnap her and her elder sister Eleanor, by three individuals acting in behalf of their mother. The latter is the sister of the late Sir Herbert Naylor-Leyland, and was the wife of the Hon. Richard Chetwynd, the late Viscount Chewynd's only son, who committed suicide four years ago during the lifetime of his father.

His marriage to Miss Leyland was an unhappy one in every respect, and was dissolved in her favor, the custody of her two daughters being awarded to her. She was subsequently deprived of them by the courts, owing to her extravagance of conduct, and in financial matters, the children's guardianship being assaigned to Christopher John Leyland of Haggerston castle, Northumberland.

Before they had been there very long their mother made her sensational attempt to abduct them. Having chartered a steam yacht she awaited them at Beal, a point on the Northumbrian coast, where her agents were to bring them. She intended to carry them off to the port of San Sebastian, in Spain, but the plotters, in spite of their outting telegraph and telephone wires in order to secure their safety, and damaging the castle motor cars to prevent pursuit, failed of their object, and two of Mrs. Chetwynd's agents in the affairs a man named Thomas Duquid, and another person, were captured, tried for abduction, and condemned to penal servitude.

Mrs. Chetwynd, herself escaped, and after living abroad for some time, was allowed to return, and last spring landed in the bankruptcy court. Her two daughters have handsome fortunes of their own, inherited from their Leyland grandparents, and further augmented by their guardian, Christopher Leyland.

Suffragettes May Be Shut Out of Canada

Special

OTTAWA, Sept. 12.—Is a militant Suffragette an undesirable citizen within the meaning of the law?

The suggestion that the warlike Suffragettes from England may be barred out of Canada under the terms of the regulation regarding undesirables has been made to the Department of the Interior, and the belief seems to prevail that the regulations would apply. The suggestion has special reference to the threatened invasion of votes-for-women leaders from across the ocean; and the fact that sundry of these ladies have served time in jail, and that their mission is the introduction of law-breaking methods into Canada, would it is urged, be sufficient to justify their exclusion.

The department, of course, will not be called upon to decide the point until the Suffragettes themselves decide whether or not they are coming.

THE LIBERALS ARE BACK TO THE OLD IDOLS AGAIN

For weeks there has been a desperate struggle between two factions in the Liberal party. It has raked the party all over older Canada and has extended into the offices of the Chief Liberal newspapers. A great wing of the party in the older provinces resent the persistent and uncompromising low tariff campaign of the chief Liberal newspapers and their continued adherence to reciprocity. Desperate efforts have been made to convince these papers that their course is politically disastrous and that any serious approach to free trade would be ruinous to the whole industrial interests of the East. On the other hand the practical politicians of the party have insisted as strenuously that they can only hope to carry the next election by holding Quebec, by cultivating the Grain Growers of Saskatchewan and Alberta, and by possible gains in Manitoba. The speeches now being made by Mr. Fisher, Mr. Graham, Mr. Lemieux and other official spokesmen of the party, indicate pretty clearly that the free traders have triumphed and that the party has finally resolved to adhere to reciprocity and to return to the old agitation for tariff for revenue which was the chief feature of the Liberal policy until the party got into office in 1896. The industrial interests of the country, with the great majority of the farmers of the older provinces, whether they will or not will be driven into permanent alliance with the Conservative party, and fortunately it is also manifest that protectionist sentiment gains ground steadily in all Western centres of population.—Toronto News.

Greenland Crossed Over Barrier Ice

Special

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 12.—Greenland has been crossed for the first time from west to east over the barren ice by the Swiss expedition under Dr. DeQuervain, joint director of the Swiss Central Meteorological Institute who is now at Roykjavik, the capital of Iceland. All the members of the party are well.

Members of the expedition started from Jakobahawn, in Danish Northwest Greenland, and marched for three months over the ice wastes. They made the east coast on August 2, ten miles ffom Anginagsalig, which was their goal. Many valuable scientific results were achieved.

The greatest height of the inland ice measured 2,500 metres, but they saw higher peaks and discovered mountains on Christian Ninth Land, nearer the east coast.

Dr. DeQuervain will hold the material he has collected until he is able to make comparisons with the results of the Danish expedition under Capt. J. P. Koch, which will cross from west to east in 1913, but by a more northern route.

PARROT FRIGHTENS BURGLAR

CORNING, Sept. 12.—A parrot belonging to Warren J. Cheney, Republican candidate for county judge, put to flight a burglar who had in his possession Mr. Cheney's vest, which contained $150.

The parrot objects to anyone entering the room in which it is kept at night, and the burglar on his way out passed through this room. The parrot raised such a disturbance that the burglar dashed out of the back door, dropping the vest and the money in his flight.

Arabians Mobbed Captured Aviator

Special

TRIPOLI, Sept. 12.—Details of the capture of Captain Moizo, the Italian aviator, by the Turks yesterday state that the army flier was compelled to land in the desert owing to a defective motor. The Arabs became alarmed at the sudden descent of the flying machine, and fled, panic-stricken, but afterwards they returned when they found the aeroplane could do them no harm, and mobbed the aviator. Captain Moizo thereupon whipped out a revolver, but a squadron of Turkish cavalry galloped up and declared him a prisoner. They conveyed the captain and his aeroplane to the headquarters.

Montreal Man Badly Wanted

BOSTON, Mass., September 12.—The police throughout the country have been asked to look for John E. McGill, cashier at the Boston office of the Allan Line. McGill disappeared on July 31, and it is alleged that $2,859 was found to be missing at the same time.

The offiicals at the Allan Line deny any knowledge of the man, but it is known that a police notice has been sent out from the Boston headquarters asking other cities to be on the lookout for him.

McGill is said to be single, and to come from Montreal. He lived at the Hotel Commonwealth. On July 31, he did not appear at the State street office of the steamship line, and when his hotel was called up it was found that he had settled his account there and had left.

An investigation followed, and it was found that his accounts were short.

HAILSTONES CRASHED THROUGH BARN ROOFS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—From all parts of Eastern New York and Western Connecticut there came to-day reports of the heavy damage caused by lightning and hail last night. The loss to the Connecticut tobacco crop from the hail is estimated at $100,000. The hail stones in some sections were so large and they went through roofs of barns.

In the vicinity of West Point the wind was very violent. Fifty trees in the military academy camping ground were uprooted, and telephone and telegraph wires were torn down.

Deliberate Suicide In Bar of Hotel

WINDSOR, Sept. 12.—After writing his wife a farewell note in which he suggested arrangements for the care of his five children by relatives, and named his pallbearers, George H. Morris, aged forty-five, a metal polisher, living in Detroit, committed suicide by swallowing a solution of cyanide of potassium in the bar of Brighton Beach Hotel, Sandwich, this afternoon. A few moments after swallowing the draught he sank to the floor and was dead when Dr. J. W. Beasley arrived five minutes later.

Morris entered the Sandwich hotel this morning and made himself acquainted with Proprietor Reaume, with whom he had seevral drinks. His manner was not that of a man who had decided to end his life, but in his pocket at the time was a farewell letter to his wife, dated from Windsor. After eating a hearty dinner, Morris returned to the bar shortly after two o'clock, asked for a glass of water, and, dropping into it a large lump of potassium, which he took from his pocket, began to stir it leisurely.

"Rock salt," he remarked, when he noticed the bartender eyeing him curiously. "I have to take it every little while for my health."

For nearly an hour he stood stirring the mixture until the last of the poison was dissolved, and then swallowed it. Coroner J. B. Labelle was called, but decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The body was removed to Sutton's morgue.

Morris' farewell note read:

"Dear Carrie,—Don't blame me for this foolish act, but I am of no use to you or the family. I have disgraced you wherever we have lived and think it better to end it all. The $2,000 insurance you will get will be of more use to you than I am. This is my last sad statement. I owe it all to whiskey. May God have mercy on my soul. Tell the boys not to laugh at my folly."

The remains will be turned over to the suicide's wife.

FRENCH HEELS COST $7,000.

Telephone Company Put to Expense of New Fire Escape.

DENVER, Co., Sept. 12.—Because telephone operators insist upon wearing shoes with French heels, the Mountain State Telephone company must spend $7,000 in the construction of the new fire escape at the headquarters building.

The building is equipped with first class fire escapes, but in a recent practice drill it was found that many of the girls wore shoes with small heels and that the heels caught in the holes in the iron platforms and steps. In case of fire this would probably prove disastrous.

BATEMAN TO BE TRIED

Oshawa Man is Charged With Murder of His Wife.

Seventy-Seven-Year-Old Cobbler, Who Married His Wife as the Result of a Newspaper Advertisement Ten Years Ago, Is Implicated by Coroner's Jury—Had Tried to Secure Her Property, Say Witnesses.

Oshawa, Sept. 13.—John Bateman, aged 77 years, will be tried for the murder of his wife, whom he married eight years ago through a newspaper advertisement.

After an inquest conducted all day by Coroner Hoig in Temperance Hall, at Cedarvale, a little village just outside the borders of the town, the jury at 11 o'clock last night returned a verdict to the effect that Sarah Allerton Bateman had died on Sept. 5 as the result of injuries inflicted by her husband.

A dozen witnesses related details in connection with the crime and stories on oath went to show that domestic infelicity had existed in the Bateman household and that for years they had squabbled over money matters. Bateman had endeavored repeatedly to induce his wife to turn over her property, worth about $2,500, to him, but she had steadfastly refused.

The murdered woman was fond of cats, and Bateman's affections didn't run in this direction, with consequent quarrels, and Bateman, although he does not look the part, was said to have a hot temper, one that was difficult to curb.

Two years ago the aged prisoner signed an agreement, or separation, the stipulation being that if he ever returned to his wife's home he would be considered a trespasser and subject to arrest, but the old man returned within a year. As a climax to this drama, a week ago, just as the villagers were stirring from their homes, a cry was raised that the Bateman home was afire, investigation bringing to light that Mrs. Bateman had been struck several times on the head with an axe and her skull broken in several places. She was found dying on the floor of her bedroom in her night apparel by neighbors. Coal oil had been soaked in the mattress, which was in flames. The husband was accused of murder, but he merely placed his hands in his pockets and sauntered down the road. He displayed no concern whatever, according to witnesses, even during the moments after the discovery of his wife's remains.

When the inquest was under way, with direct accusations against him being made by witnesses, he sat with his chin on his chest and evinced little or no interest. Even when the skull of the woman was placed on the table before him with the gaping holes he never winced.

On one occasion when a witness declared that he tried to get his wife's money he hissed, "You lie, you liar!"

Automobile Party Traveled Far

To travel continuously 5,500 miles, part of it through a great salt desert where their water gave out and they could only crawl along, is somewhat of a motoring feat but that is the record to date of a party of Californian tourists who are in Ottawa.

Four in number, the motorists have come all the way from Los Angeles, Cal., to Ottawa and by a roundabout way at that, while some of the roads they traveled——! And the worst of it is that according to their statement they were never more bumped or jolted than right here in Ontario, the old Nipissing road over which they traveled to North Bay being the chief offender.

The party consists of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Stone, Mr. H. O. Begel and Mrs N. M. French. Starting from Los Angeles they went through Salt Lake City, Denver, Omaha, Chicago, Detroit, Windsor, to Toronto. From there they went north through Orillia and Parry Sound to North Bay, toured through the beautiful Temagami district and then came to the Capital by way of Pembroke. After staying there a few days they will go east to Halifax, then down to New Orleans and back again to Los Angeles.

"We only changed one tire on the road," said Mr. Begel, speaking of the trip. "Our hardest experience was going through the great Utah desert. We took a road never traveled before except by one car and for two days had practically no water for our engine so that we were forced to go along at half speed, making only 100 miles per day as compared with our maximum of 282. The loss of one of our water bags was responsible for the mishap. Outside of this, however, we had an uneventful trip as regards accidents."

Fiancee's Death and Arrest Craze Man

MONTICELLO, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Arrested on suspicion of having poisoned Ada Jacobs, the girl whom he was to marry, Clarkson Nicholas, of Jeffersonville, who was later exonerated, was taken to Middletown asylum violently insane, last night, after he had made several attempts to take his own life.

Miss Jacobs died suddenly Sunday night, while at Nicholas' home. Physicians who were called thought the girl had been poisoned and Nicholas was arrested. An autospy proved that death resulted from heart disease.

Nicholas and Miss Jacobs were devoted lovers, it is said, and her death and the subsequent arrest proved too much for Nicholas and he went insane from the shock and grief.

Why Beef and Leather Are Up

The Chicago beef ring are presenting facts to show scarcity of cattle as a reason for the high cost of meat. It is stated at the local cattle markets that the plentiful supply of hay and feed this year is making it possible for farmers to keep their young stock over winter, and that many of them are doing it.

Be that as it may the Chicago men say cattle are scarce and in as many words that leather will be dear.

Beardmore & Co., leather merchants and tanners, inform The Telegram that they had an agreement with Morris & Co., of Chicago, for all the September take off of hides from native steers The Beardmore company expected the total to reach some 5,000 hides. The letter from the Morris Company would indicate that only a few hundreds of hides will be available. The letter of Morris & Co. says: "In the past week we have only salted 46 native steer hides. For several weeks back our Chicago kill has been between 500 and 600 hides, which is ridiculously small because during equivalent weeks last year we killed two and a half times as many Only a small percentage of native steers is on the market. Finished native steers sold as high as $10.75, which is the highest price ever known.

"We lay the facts before you so that you will not figure on getting any great number of hides on your purchase from us. Our beef man tells us that there will be a famine for native steers in the near fture."

Make Your Own Moving Pictures

Gianni Bettini, an Italian invetor has perfected a device which makes it possible for almost any amateur photographer to make his own moving pictures. Not only does the new mechanism bring the cost within the means of the average amateur, says the Technical World Magazine, but the resulting pictures are actually clearer and sharper than those produced in the ordinary way by the use of a moving film of celluloid.

In accomplishing these astonishing results Bettini has exactly reversed the principle of the usual moving picture machine in which the film travels back of the lens from spool to spool. His photographs are made in series on a glass plate which is held right while the lens itself moves.

The glass plates used in the Bettini machine measures eight and one half inches in length by five and one half inches in width. The photographs taken in series on this plate are only five sixteenths of an inch in width by one quarter inch in depth. In this way sixteen consecutive pictures appear in a line and on each plate there are thirty six lines making a total of 576 images. The photographs are taken at the rate of twelve or more a second as the lens travels to and fro.

The cost of a plate of this kind is four cents while a celluloid film long enough to carry the same number of pictures costs $1.50. The Bettini camera is sold for less than one third as much as the regular moving picture camera, and it is also used in connection with an ordinary stereopticon for reproducing thus saving further expense for apparatus.

GIRL'S GIGGLES ROUT BOLD HIGHWAYMEN

Attempt to Get Purse Hidden Under Arms Tickles Frightened Victim

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 12.—When Mrs. Frances Justite was held up by two armed men she was too frightened to scream. Her alarm was given in a more effective way, however, for the robbers laughingly left her with her money intact. She told them her money was hidden under her left arm. One of the robbers thrust his hand under her arm for it. Immediately came a nervous giggle. "Here, shut up. Stick up your hand," she was ordered. You,—you tickled me," Mrs. Justite answered. "I can't stand it."

"Then get it yourself," the robber said.

"I will not," was the indignant reply. Again an attempt was made to extract the money. Again came the giggles, growing louder with each struggle. The robbers began to laugh and, becoming afraid their noise would attract attention, fled leaving Mrs. Justite with her purse containing $5.

Suspicion is the fly in the matrimonial ointment.

Johnson to Retire From Prize Ring

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Coincident with the verdict of a coroner's jury that his wife, Etta Johnson, former wife of Clarence Duryea, a well-known New York turfman, had committed suicide on Wednesday night while temporarily insane, Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, made the remarkable statement that he believed himself to be suffering from brain fever. He also announced that as a result of his wife's tragis death he would forsake the prize ring forever.

Johnson, who had left his wife's deathbed to appear at the inquest, was in an extremely nervous condition.

AUTOMOBILE AND PISTOLS FIGURE IN ELOPMENT

STAUNTON, Va., Sept. 12.—Lochinvar himself could not have won a bride in more sensational fashion than Arthur Hagey did here, late yesterday. But instead of a charger Hagey used an automobile, a revolver and a party of friends.

Sixteen year old Myrtle Moore's father objected to her marriage with Hagey and after frustrating an elopement Monday night, he sent Myrtle off to school. Late yesterday a party of Hagey's friends drove up to the seminary and rushed Miss Moore away to a cross roads, where they transferred her to a buggy and sent her to Johnson City, Tenn. Meawhile the motor car continued to Abingdon, Va.

At Abingdon an officer, warned by the irate father shot the tires practically off the automobile, before he discovered Miss Moore was not in it Meanwhile Arthur and Myrtle were married in Johnson City.

CRIPPLE'S NOBLE WORK

Miss Sophie Wright Perservered in Spite of Physical Handicap

Miss Sophie Wright, who died in New Orleans, was only 26 years old, and had been a cripple since babyhood, but she was able to leave in New Orleans a monument that will not soon be forgotten. Her back was broken by a fall when she was three years old, and the next six years she spent strapped to a chair. She had so far recovered at the end of this time that she was able to go to school, and at the age of 14 the idea of starting a school of her own occurred to her, for she knew from experience that there was widespread ignorance among girls and boys in New Orleans. Miss Wright found a banker who was willing to lend her $10,000 at 8 per cent., and with this capital she rented a building and with a staff of capable assistants started a night school. An outbreak of yellow fever soon made it necessary for her to close the school, but she converted it into a storehouse for medical supplies, and she and her assistants joined in the work of stamping out the fever. When the epidemic was over, the Wright School was threatened with bankruptcy, but a friendly banker came to her assistance, exinguished the original loan, and reduced the interest on the mortgage. So the work was resumed, and Miss Wright's school has attracted thousands of pupils since then. The gentle cripple seemed to exert a spell over the roughest of her scholars, and many of them were transformed from rowdies into gentlemen, and started fairly on the road to success by her interest in them.

It costs a lot of money to keep the school of experience going.

TI BREAK THE TIE

Last evening a meeting of the city baseball league was held and the matter of the standing of the teams was discussed. The S. C. C. are virtually out of the race and will not play again. The T. A. S. and the Ontarios being a tie, a final between these two teams will be played possibly next Wednesday afternoon.

BURNED A SHANTY.

Yesterday afternoon alarm No. 7 called the entire brigade to a fire in the hollow behind the old stone ruins on Commercial Street, thought to have been set by boys playing with matches. The structure, a small wooden building filled with hay, was partly consumed when the apparatus arrived on the scene, but was quickly extinguished. The loss was but slight.

SEMI WEEKLY HOP

Last evening a dance was held in Johnstone's Assembly Rooms, Front Street, ad a very large and select gathering were in attendance. All enjoyed themselves thoroughly dancing to suitable music. A new dance, called the The Skates Waltz, just recently procured from the United States, by Mr. Johnstone was introduced and it made a big hit especially after the gathering caught the time and step.

WEDDING BELLS.

BOLDWICK—JOHNSTON

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Johnston, Shannonville, on Sept. 4th instant, when their daughter Alma S. was united in marriage to Mr. William Boldwick of Halston, the ceremony being performed by Rev .W. T. Wickett, in the presence of a few immediate relatives and friends. After all had partaken of a sumptuous wedding breakfast the happy couple motored to Belleville where they took train for Toronto and points west. On their return they will reside at Halston.

WHITE—MASSON.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Masson, Seymour, when their eldest daughter, Miss Jane Rattery was united in marriage to Mr. W. H. White, eldest son of the late John White and Mrs. White, Roslin, by the Rev. G. A. Brown, of Campbellford.

The bride looked sweet in her wedding gown of cream Parisian lace, with veil and wreath of Christmas orchids. She wore a pearl pin, the gift of the groom and carried a shower bouquet of asters.

After the ceremony the guests sat down to a dainty wedding breakfast.

Many handsome and useful gifts testified to the esteem in which both the bride and groom are held.

The happy couple left on a trip down the St. Lawrence.

The best wishes of many friends go with the bride and groom for a happy and prosperous journey through life.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

THE GIRL OF MY DREAMS

Jos. M. Gaites, producer of such famous immediate predecessors as "Three Twins," "Bright Eyes" "The. Enchantress" etc., now offers John Hyams and Leila McIntyre in the delightful musical play "The Girl of My Dreams" which is underlined at the Griffin Opera House for Tuesday Sept. 17th. For two seasons this beautiful clean, mirthful musical comedy has been delighting packed houses of pleased patrons throughout the country. It has never failed to elicit unqualified praise from both press and public and rounded out by the wholesome experience of such a record before varying and captious audiences, "The Girl of My Dreams" now seeks to win those who are yearning for that in this city.

John Hyams is a born comedian. His dancing is clean and his singing excellent. His acting is just what it should be, is never overdone and the horse play which usually forms a great part of such a performance is entirely missing. His portrayal of Harry Swifton, the confirmed bachelor who finally fell by the wayside, is exceedingly well done.

His co-star Miss McIntyre, is a winsome little woman. Her sweet face is well set off by her sober Quaker garb, and she captures the audience from her first appearance. She takes the part of Lucy Medders, from a little Quaker village, and her country ways, her delightful voice, and her entire peformance makes her beloved by all.

The organization numbers over seventy people. A cast including Irving Brooks, Alice Hills, Della Niven, Neil Burns, Francis Gaillard, Sylvia de Frankie and Frank McEwen together with the Harem-Scarum Pony Ballet, a big beauty chorus and an augmented orchestra.

This production was recently seen at the Princess Theatre, Toronto, and His Mayesty's Theatre, Montreal and pleased the large audience attending. Plan now at Doyle's.

BISPHAM CONCERT HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL IN KINGSTON.

Bispham, America's greatest baritone, sang in the Grand Opera House, Kingston, on Wednesday night of this week and the Daily Whig says the house was packed to the doors and his concert was one of the finest ever given in Kingston. He is not only a great singer, but an artist, too. Have you ever felt yourself carried away to the scene of action of a song? You are hearing and seeing the whole of a tragedy till your hair stood up on your head. Then hear Bispham sing Danny Deever. The Kingston Standard says that David Bispham delighted a packed house and is without a doubt a great artist. It is unlikely if a baritone of such depth, purity and exquisite expression has ever thrilled an audience of Kingston music lovers as did that of Mr. Bispham. The Bispham concert will be held here in the city on Monday, Sept. 16th. This will be the first of the Nordica series. Seats now on sale at Doyle's.

MOVING BOG IN IRELAND.

A considerable portion of bog at Anaholty, within a mile of the village of Castleconnell, County Limerick, has begun to move, and has already covered a large quantity of turf stacked and ready for drawing home. The bog is moving parallel with the River Shannon, and threatens to submerge the grass and tilling lands in the neighborhood unless its progress is stayed by the roadway and embankment which it has to encounter. The heavy rains and floods are set down as the cause of the movement. The bog now in motion gave trouble some eight years ago.

And many a man has a kick coming that never reaches him.

HAPPY THOUGHT

PERFECT BISCUIT BAKING NEED NOT BE DIFFICULT

It all depends on the heat your oven gives.

Ranges with slow ovens are all right for some kinds of biscuits. But an oven that is chronically slow simply ruins others, and it is useless for many purposes.

Other stoves bake beautifully on one side and not on the other. So you can never depend on them.

"Happy Thought" Ranges are perfect bakers.

If you want a slow oven, a slow fire will produce the desired result. If you want a very hot, quick oven, just build up the fire and keep it going strong for a little while.

This feature saves you money in two ways:

It saves fuel by making it unnecessary to use too much, and by giving you the full heat value of every ounce of fuel.

It saves the food material by ensuring just the right result, no matter what part of the oven you use.

More than a Quarter Million Canadian women use the "Happy Thought" every day.

Industrial Progress

The policy of protection to home manufactures which, at the instance of the Liberal-Conservative party, was adopted by the people of Canada in 1878 and was given effect to by Sir John A. Macdonald's Government early in the following year, has borne fruit abundantly—as abundantly as even the most sanguine of its advocates ventured to predict.

This is convincingly shown by the census returns of Canadian manufactures taken in 1911, which, are now compiled. Compared with the census of 1901 for the year 1900, they show an increase in ten years of 4,559 in the number of working establishments; of $798,820,009 in the value of capital; of 175,108 in the number of persons employed; of $127,274,301 in the earnings of salaries and wages and of $683,722,157 in the value of products.

The following statistics give the comparative figures for the two census years 1900 and 1910: Establishments in 1900, 14,560; in 1910, 19,209, an increase of 31.12 per cent.

Capital, 1900, $446,916,487 in 1910, $1,245,745,496, increase of 178,74 per cent.

Employees, 1900, 339,173; in 1910, 514,287, increase 51.62 per cent.

Salaries and wages, 1900, $113,249,350; in 1910, $240,523,651, increase 112.38 per cent.

Products, 1900, $481,053,375; in 1910, $1,164,775,532, increase 142.13 per cent.

During the past decade there has been evidently a steady tendency toward the merging of industries. There are fourteen industrial establishments in the Dominion each having a production of five million dollars or over annually, and one hundred and thirty-six establishments each with an annual production of between one and five millions.

Over half of the total number of factories in Canada, or 7,922, are in Ontario, and the annual value of product is given as $578,763,118.

During the five years from 1905 to 1910 the three Prairie Provinces doubled the annual value of their industrial products, the figures aggregating $35,000,000 in 1905, as compared with $70,000,000 in 1910.

Compared by provinces the census of manufactures shows the following records for the year 1910, as taken in the year 1911, viz:—

Canada—Establishments 19,209, capital $1,245,745,496, employees 514,281, salaries and wages $240,523,651, value of products $1,164,775,532.

Alberta—Establishments 290, capital $29,518,346, employees 6,980, salaries or wages $4,365,661, value of products $18,698, 826.

British Columbia—Establishments 651, capital $123,027,521, employees 33,312, salaries and wages $10,912,866, value of products $53,141,235.

Manitoba—Establishments 439, capital $47,941,540, employees 17,325, salaries and wages $10,912,866, value of products $53,673,609.

New Brunswick—Establishments, 1,158, capital $36,125,012, employees 24,755, salaries and wages $8,314,212, value of products $35,422,302.

Nova Scotia—Establishments, 1,480, capital $79,596,341, employees 28,795, salaries and wages $10,628,955, value of products $52,706,184.

Ontario—Establshments 7,922, captal $593,556,495, employees 237,895, salaries and wages $117,161,019, value of products 578,763,118.

P. E. Island—Establshments 6,584, capital $2,013,365, employees 3,762, salaries and wages $531,017, value of products $3,136,470.

Quebec—Establishments 6,584, capital $326,946,925, employees 158,207, salaries and wages $69,432,967, value of products $350,901,655.

Saskatchewan—Establishments 173, capital $7,019,951, employees 3,250, salaries and wages $1,936,284, value of products $6,332,132.

The cost of raw materials used in Canadain factories in the year 1910 was $601,140,765, which when deucted from the total value of finished products leaves a total of $563,634,767, representing the value added by manufacturers.

Wonderful as has been the progress during the past decade it is safe to predict, judging from all indications, that it will be vastly exceeded in the next ten years.

The farmers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are not yet taking full advantage of the home markets which the growth of the cities and towns is creating for them. When grain-growing as the specialty of prairie farming is supplemented by more mixed farming, it will be possible for the farmers to sell a much larger share of their products to the urban population of their neighborhood. The home market will then begin to assume to them the significance that it has in Eastern Canada, especially in Ontario.—Mail and Empire.

There is rather a striking contrast between the two political leaders in Canada to-day. According to the report of the Dominion Railway Commission just issued, the railway companies will this fall have twenty thousand more cars than they had last year, and four hundred more locomotives, with increased terminal facilities and warehouses. In addition to the heavy cost for equipment, the railways will have spent at the close of this season $4,000,000 on terminal improvements and enlargement. The report further states that as a result of the attitude of the board on the question of increased facilities the companies have been forced to take prompt action, and manufacturers of equipment, etc., have been flooded with orders, and that the railways appeared to have been somewhat relieved.

CIGARETTES IN CHINA

Their Sale Being Pushed Energetically Among the Celestials

The use of cigarettes in China is increasing rapidly among the natives, and it is possible that if the same methods were used to introduce chewing gum it would have a similar success. The British-American Tobacco Company entered this field several years ago. With headquarters in Shanghai, it has established large houses in each of the treaty ports, from which traveling men are sent through the cities and towns of the interior, placarding the walls with huge illustrated posters printed in Chinese. These salesmen distribute sample packages of cigarettes on the streets, giving away many thousands as an advertisement, and then arrange with some native merchant to carry a stock of their goods. By these effective and energetic methods they have built up an enormous traffic, which is steadily growing.

Building of 350 Rooms For The Election of His Successor

The Pope has decided to build a new palace at Rome to house the Cardinals when they are called to elect his successor.

When he was himself elected he was greatly struck by the bad accommodation provided for by Cardinals, and decided to make better provision for them on the first opportunity. The new palace is to be built on the site of the old Italian mint, which has been acquired by the Pope.

It will have 250 rooms, besides kitchens and halls, sufficient for the whole College of Cardinals, with their attendants, doctors, and cooks. It will be joined to the Sistine Chapel, where the actual election takes place.

Shoved a Baby's Head in a Can

Aiming to soft-pedal the cries of her two-year-old brother Joe, six-year-old Helen Mizocky of Shamokin pushed a lard can over the little fellow's head. The baby's muffled shrieks attracted the attention of the mother to the can. Although she held the baby on the floor and tugged at the strange damper it refused to budge because it was caught under the child's chin.

The harder the mother pulled the louder the boy cried. Finally the frantic mother took the canned child in her arms and ran with him to the railroad roundhouse, where two machinists attempted to remove the can. They finally had to resort to a pair of big iron shears to remove the can.

As the can came off blood flowed from both sides of the boy's head, and it was found that he had had a narrow escape from losing his ears, both of them being badly lacerated.

Where Would You be In Case of Fire

When you pay a Company to assume your risk you want to be sure that the Company is financially able to take care of it. Do not be satisfied with a statement that shows enough assets to pay any loss you may individually sustain. If a conflagration occurs at the time your own fire comes along and the Company is heavily involved, you may find as thousands of others have found before you, that your policy is of little value. Make yourself secure by taking a policy of the Manitoba Assurance Company, which is conflagration proof. Agents, J. W. Davison, Jas. H. Hudgins, Diamond & Diamond.

Tax on Bachelors Is Not New Idea

LONDON, Sept. 12.—In 1801 the French parliament had before it a bill proposing to divide the whole nation into five classes. In the first were to be the parents of ten children, who were to be honored by wearing a tricolor ribbon in their hats. On the other hand bachelors were to suffer all kinds of disabilities No bachelor was to be allowed to dispose of property at death, he was not to be permitted to attend any public meetings, and he was compelled to wear a green and yellow cockade in his hat whenever he went along the streets.

Germany, too, had the trouble long years, ago, and curious measures were put forward as remedies for it. A motion was introduced to make unmarried men pay so many taxes that it would be impossible for them to live in that state. Another suggestion was that half the income of childless couples should be forced from them, and that they should be forced to dress in official costume of a dark drab brown hue, which would make them the scorn and scoff of all other people.

Germany proposed that all married folk who had more than eight children should live with payment of but a third of the ordinary taxes, while if a courageous husband and wife managed to have more than a dozen children, they were to have a house provided by the municipality free of all rent and rates.

Bonus for Children

That famous ruler of France, the Grand Monarch, went even further than this in his efforts to mitigrate the much declining birthrate of his time. From an edict issued at Tornay it is found that the state actually offered very decent pensions to all parents who did their duty manfully and womanfully by having their quivers full as sayeth the Psalmist. Fathers of ten children were to be exempt from all taxes and rates whatever, if such men belonged to the aristricratic class they were to receive a yearly pension of $5,000 Should parents of this class contrive to have a dozen children they were to be given $10,000 as an annual gift from the state for life.

Sweden In Line

Sweden long ago had to face a similar problem. Her rulers found that if the birthrate did not materially improve before many more years things would be so serious that the little nation would be in danger of being overwhelmed by fierce rivals and surrounding foes who had long wanted the Baltic coast as their own. So Sweden offered many advances to parents who managed to have a certain number of little ones, and her benefits were arranged in a regular scale, increasing by something like a geometrical progression in value, after the lowest limit of six children was passed.

The chancellor of the exchequer, Lloyd George, has then, many good old examples to work from in his present attempts to improve the birth rate of the British islands. The Kaiser is equally anxious and keen in Germany today, for a similar tendency is manifesting itself strongly there with respect to the declining number of births.

NEW COURSE CREATED

Universities Will Now Give a Degree in Agriculture.

Ontario Government Realizes That Teachers Must Have College Training as Well as Scientific Qualifications and a Course of Two Years at Toronto, McMaster or Queen's and Two Years at O.A.C. Is Provided.

Toronto, Sept. 13.—In an effort to raise the standard of agricultural pursuits, the Provincial Government has effected an important change by providing new combined courses in agriculture and science at Toronto, Queen's and McMaster Universities. These will be provided next session and will necessitate two years' study at any one of the three mentioned seats of learning, and two years at the O.A.C., and upon graduation the student obtains the degree of B. Sc. Agr.

Sir James Whitney states that though the present system has been successfully operated for the past few years, there is every need for a radical change on account of the pressure of appointments as Government representatives, its appointees have not been able to give sufficient time to their classes conducted in continuation schools and collegiate institutes which the importance of the subject necessitates. It is with a view to securing for agriculture its proper share of education that the new courses have been originated, which will qualify the successful graduates to hold positions as regular members of school staffs exclusively.

The statement proceeds:

"Five years ago the departments of education and agriculture jointly adopted for the counties a scheme of agriculture education, under which graduates of the Ontaria Agricultural College are appointed to assist and direct farmers, and to teach agriculture in the high and continuation schools, and the collegiate institutes. In discharging the former duty, as representatives of the Department of Agriculture, the appointees have been eminently successful, but they are usually unable to discharge satisfactorily their duties as teachers in the secondary schools, partly owing to the pressure and importance of their duties as representatives and partly to the difficulties connected with arranging for their classes in the timetable of the schools. Experience has, accordingly, shown that in order to secure for the subject of agriculture its due share of education, the teacher must be a regular member of the school staff. For some years, however, not all the time of such teacher would be taken up with classes in agriculture, and, accordingly, at the request of the Minister of Education, the Universities of Toronto, Queen's and McMaster have established the new degree of Bachelor of Science in Agriculture (B.Sc.Agr.) the courses for which cover four years, the first two being taken at the universities, and the last two at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. These courses provide a good, general education, as well as a special knowledge of both science and agriculture. The foregoing courses will be provided next session at the universities and the college, and students in attendance at the university who have already completed the two years' course prescribed, may enter the college as soon as it opens in October. After a year's professional training at either of the faculties of education, the holder of the new degree B.Sc. Agr., will be granted a specialist's certificate in both science and agriculture, which will qualify him to teach both science and agriculture in a high or continuation school or a collegiate institute.

Under the new scheme the county representative will continue to discharge his duties as such and will, in addition, conduct, under the school board concerned, classes for farmers and farmers' sons throughout the country, while the holder of the new specialist's certificate will teach agricuulture in the secondary schools, and, if need be, the science and some of the classes of the general program.

Killed by Jiu Jitzu.

New York, Sept. 13.—Burton W. Gibson, the lawyer, whose client, Rosa Menschik Szabo, lost her life, supposedly from drowning, while boating with him on Greenwood Lake, N.Y., on July 16, was taken into custody yesterday charged with murder. He issued a statement asserting his innocence and declaring there had been no struggle.

The warrant was based on evidence given before Judge Royce by Dr. Shultz, coroner's physician, that there were tricks of jiu jitsu whereby Mrs. Szabo could have suffered a sharp blow in the throat which so affected the nerve as to close her air passage, thereby making it impossible to breathe. There was no water in her lungs. He demonstrated to the judge to prove this.

Home Rule Doomed They Say.

London, Sept. 13.—The Unionist press is jubilant over the capture of Gladstone's old seat for Midlothian as a knockdown blow to the Government. The Liberal morning papers demand that Premier Asuith insert in the next electoral reform bill a clause which either by provision for an alternative vote or for a second ballot will prevent a constituency from becoming represented by a minority vote.

New York, Sept. 13.—A cable to The Tribune from London says: The Midlothian election is regarded as more significant even than the Northwest Manchester election, and sounds the doom of the Government, and the death knell to home rule.

GURNEY-OXFORD

The Three Guardsmen

The Gurney-Oxford Range is fitted with three devices which constantly and uncompromisingly stand on guard to see that the fire is always under perfect control—that the coal bills are sheared down to the lowest figure—that the oven is always evenly and properly heated—that no clinkers obstruct the free burning and proper ventilation of the fire.

The Gurney-Economizer, fitted on the smoke pipe, is the only draft you have to attend to; a small lever put up or down entirely regulates the fire. It saves one ton of coal in six. It carries little heat up the chimney—only the smoke. It feeds the gases which burn to the fire-box, and it cannot be had on any other range than the Gurney-Oxford.

The Gurney-Oxford oven is surrounded by flues that carry an equal amount of heat to all sides. This almost guarantees results in cooking by providing an oven evenly heated, without cold corners or variation.

The Gurney-Oxford Grate is the result of exhaustive tests to find the proper carrying surface for the fire. The fire has abundant air to breathe, and the less amount of coal burned is all consumed. So then, the housewife who has the "Three Guardsmen" watching over her range, will experience security and satisfaction in cooking that is not provided by any other range.

McGRAW AFTER RECORD

If the Giants win the National League pennant, as is expected, John McGraw will then equal the late Frank G. Selee's enviable record of managing five National League champions. In the old days Harry Wright managed six championship teams for Boston, and "Pop" Anson led five Chicago champions in the '80's, while Frank Chance has a record of winning four pennants while he has been in Chicago.

Harry Wright won three of his championships prior to the formation of the National League in 1875. Of course his connection with the old Cincinnati Reds would further increase the record of the lamented Harry.

THE EVENING BIBLE CLASS.

"Uncle Anson was a merry old soul," says Jimmy Ryan, the one-time star of the champion Chicago team, "but he was also a strict old soul when it came to rules and discipline. He observed vigorous training laws himself, and he insisted that his followers should do the same. Poker was all right when on the cars—up to a limited extent and to a certain hour. A cold beer might be had right after a hot afternoon's hard work, but uncle frowned on the amber when the hours were late and the athletes ought to be in bed. He had ways and means, too, of finding out whether you were putting anything over on him, and somehow or other the old boy seemed to get wise to almost anything that was going on.

"One summer night in Boston, oh so long ago, we waited till we were quite sure that the old man, being very tired from the stress of a double-header, had retired. Then a select bunch gathered in Bill Everitt's room, and surely there was cheer and comfort for one and all. We had several pitchers full of cold stuff, and two tables, with six heroes gathered round each table. Two poker games, for very decent stakes, were soon in progress, and the clicking of chips and the gurgling of the beer made up a sweet medley of wholly inoffensive sounds.

"The fun had been under way for perhaps half an hour, when Tim Donohue stepped out in the hall for a moment. The next instant we heard Tim give a whistle of surprise. Then he came back, and called us out in pairs. The glass transom was resting at such an angle that the whole crowd in the room was reflected on its surface almost as clearly as in a mirror, and anyone stopping outside could see every detail of what was going on.

"'Boys,' hissed Tim in a stage whisper, 'I'll swear I heard feetsteps and breathings cut here a minute ago. Some devil has spotted us, and ten to wan he'll go an' tell th' ould man. Shall we quit the game?'

"'Quit nothin,'" said Bill Everitt. 'Watch me and take my cue!' Like lightning the ingenious Mr. Everitt got in his deadly work. There was a Bible, left by some religious association, on a table near the window, and Bill forayed into an adjoining empty room to get another. The cards were hidden. The beer was carefully concealed—interiorly—and the pitchers were filled with plain, cold water. We gathered around the tables again. At one table Bill Lange presided, with his bible open; at the other; Bill Everitt was in charge, and both began softly to read passages from the good books. At this juncture, we heard feet in the corridor. Sure enough, some cheap spy had spotted us, and gone to tell old uncle.

"The feet halted for a minute, and then there came a knock on the door. Then the door opened, and in strode uncle. His red face grew redder yet for a moment, and then turned a light apologetic pink.

"'Boys,' said uncle, 'this is a pleasant surprise. Some sneaking reptile told me you were boozing and gambling in this room, and I hurried up to see about it. I apologize to you all for ever harboring such unworthy suspicions, and I'll tend to the sneaking hound that lied to me as soon as I get downstairs!'

"Three minutes later, the chips clicked once more, but what little noise they made was drowned by shrieks and cries that came from the floor below, and told what was happening to the wouldbe knocker who had brought the dreadful tale to the good old man."

WOMAN SWAM 16 MILES.

She Still Awaits Opportunity to Cross English Channel.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Rose Pitonoff, of Boston, who has been waiting for two months to make an attempt to swim the English channel, swam the Thames from Richmond to Tower Bridge, a distance of sixteen miles. Her time was four hours and 32 minutes.

Miss Pitonoff was prevented from going further by darkness. She used the breast stroke throughout and took no nourishment.

MRS. JOHNSON DEAD.

Champion Pugilist's Wife Had Tried Suicide Twice Before.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—Mrs. Jack Johnson, wife of the world's champion heavyweight pugilist, who shot herself through the head Wednesday, died at 3.30 yesterday morning. She did not regain consciousness. Her husband and seven other persons, mainly relatives of the negro pugilist, were at her bedside in the hospital when she died. A Roman Catholic priest administered extreme unction.

Mrs. Johnson killed herself, after wrecking her health in caring for her husband, who was a victim of nervous prostration and had been afflicted with suicidal mania for a year on account of injuries and exertion during his fight with Jeffries. This was the testimony of Johnson at the inquest here yesterday over the body of Mrs. Johnson, who shot herself in her apartment over the champion's saloon.

Johnson said that the nature and extent of his sufferings after the championship fight had been kept secret by his wife and himself.

"I am still suffering from the effects of that fight to some extent," he said.

Johnson gave his testimony in tears. He declared that his wife's efforts to keep him from committing suicide were what broke down her own health.

Mrs. Johnson called her two colored maids into her bedroom and told them she wanted them to join her in prayer. With an arm about each of them, Mrs. Johnson knelt at the bedside. The maids followed her example and the three prayed together for several minutes.

As they arose, Mrs. Johnson, pressing her hands to her face, said: "God pity a poor woman who is lonely."

She sent each of the maids into other rooms on errands and before either had time to return a shot was fired. They found her on the floor fatally wounded.

Salvage by Compressed Air

A notable achievement in salvage work is recalled by the death at Gillingham, Kent, at the age of 78, of Mr. George Blaxland.

Between 40 and 50 years ago a new floating dock, designed by the late Sir Frederick J. Bramwell, was sunk at St. Thomas, West Indies, during a hurricane, together with the mail steamer Columbia and other vessels. The work of salving the dock was extremely arduous and several attempts to raise it proved unsuccessful.

Mr. Blaxland designed special air locks to obtain access to the various pontoons, and by means of air compressing engines constructed on the spot, expelled the water. Workmen were thus able to enter and effect the necessary repairs, and after several months' labor the dock was floated and repaired and is still in use at St. Thomas.

Mr. Blaxland was the first to suggest and successfully use the principle of compressed air for salvage purposes. The Columbia was salved by similar methods, although she had been submerged 18 months.

Mr. Blaxland held office for several years under the Spanish government as director of the arsenal at Havana and had control of the ships of the Spanish navy arriving there. During his term of office the American Civil War was in progress and several Federal and Confederate ships of war and blockade runners put into Havana for repairs, including the celebrated cruiser Alabama.

Mr. Blaxland was the son of Mr. George Blaxland chief engineer at Sheerness dockyard, for whom the claim was made that he was the inventor of the screw propeller. The Little Jane, a lifeboat converted by Blaxland, was probably the first screw steamer to cross the English Channel.

A man dislikes faint praise almost as much as he hates abuse.

EMPEROR'S OBSEQUIES

Imposing Ceremonies Begin at Japanese Capital.

Subjects of the Late Mikado Mutsuhito Assemble From All Parts of the Kingdom to Attend the Funeral—Princes and Ambassadors Represent Various Countries—Huge Casket Is Decorated According to Shinto Rites

Tokio, Sept. 13.—The funeral ceremonies of the late Emperor Mutsuhito of Japan, posthumously known as the the "Emperor of the Era of Enlightenment," began to-day amid surroundings in which century-old rites and costumes were mingled with modern military display. From the most extreme points of Japan, subjects have been assembling in Tokio. At midnight great crowds had gathered along the route of the procession. The weather was fair. A police cordon was established, shutting off the streets through which the body of the Emperor will be transported. A reservation was provided for 1,000 foreigners, both resident and visitors, at the request of Baron Yoshiro Sakatani, the mayor. Soon after midnight officials proceeded to the palace in preparation for the early ceremony.

Official representatives of every country had come to Tokio to participate in the solemnities. Among them were several princes representing reigning houses and special embassies commissioned to convey the condolences of republican presidents.

From an early hour in the morning the palace in its great private park in the heart of the capital, was the goal to which virtually everybody in Tokio made his way on foot. The late Emperor only occasionally during his life left the moated enclosure where his body has lain in state since Aug. 13. Since that date, on each tenth day solemn memorial services and sacrifices to the spirit of the departed ruler were performed.

The casket containing the body lay in state in the main hall. It has been decorated according to Shinto rites by a special corps of ritualists appointed for the obsequies. The casket was of enormous dimensions, measuring nearly ten feet by five, and weighing one and a half tons.

After a short wait during which the functionaries formed a procession, Emperor Yoshihito arrived. He was in the full uniform of commander-in-chief, with black crepe arm band and sword knot. He was attended by Count Watanabe, Minister of the Imperial Household, who were followed by court chamberlains carrying the imperial sword and seal. After them came Prince Katsura, the Lord Chamberlain, with Gen. Nakamura, the chief aide-de-camp.

The Empress then entered in native court dress made of hempcloth, her unbound hair falling on her shoulders. Her upper garment was of dark brown and her skirt of dull orange. The court ladies and maids of honor, as well as the princesses of the blood, were also thus attired.

The dowager empress' procession was of a similar character. She was in native costume and was preceded by the chief steward and followed by her ladies of honor. Prince Kan-In wore the uniform of a general with an ancient robe of black hemp. He carried a sword and staff.

Cigarettes Are Least Harmful

LONDON, September 12.—Contrary to the general belief, so far as nicotine is concerned, investigations reported by the Lancet show the cigarette to be the least harmful form of smoking and the pipe the worst, the cigar coming between.

The smoke obtained in all three forms of smoking was examined. As to the leaf itself, it was found that usually pipe mixtures contain the largest amount of nicotine (2.01—2.85 per cent.) and that Egyptian and Turkish cigarettes come next with 1.38—1.74 per cent., Virginian cigarettes 1.30—1.60 per cent., British cigar 1.24 per cent. and Havana cigar 0.64 per cent.

The cigarette, whether Egyptian, Turkish, or American, yielded the least amount of its total nicotine to the smoke produced; the pipe yielded a very large proportion (in some cases 70 or 80 per cent. of the total) of its nicotine to the smoke reaching the mouth of the consumer; while the analysis of cigar smoke gave intermediate figures.

But the suspicion arises as to whether too much importance has been attached to nicotine and too little to other constituents of the smoke.

Among the other constituents found is furfural, a toxic and highly irritating substance which is regarded by some authorities as a toxic constituent of immature whiskey. In the smoke of the cheap Virginian cigarettes there is very little ammonia, but a marked quantity of furfural. It is suggested that this fact affords a possible explanation of the cigarette being a source of throat trouble, especially when smoked to excess.

No Fall Session.

Ottawa, Sept. 13.—The Cabinet held another short session yesterday afternoon, but only routine departmental business was taken up.

The impression that the house will not meet until after the Christmas holidays is heightened by the announcement that Hon George E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, will leave on Sept. 27 for London to attend a meeting of the Imperial Trade Commission. It is believed that were it the intention to meet Parliament in November Mr. Foster would cancel the engagement in England.

Zapatistas Executed.

Toluca, Mexico, Sept. 13.—Twenty-two Zapatistas who were captured on Wednesday in a battle with federal troops near San Mateo, state of Mexico, were executed yesterday under the terms of the proclamation suspending constitutional guarantees.

John Gill, a British mining man, was rescued from a band of Zapatistas and brought to Toluca by Lieut. Liebano, who returned yesterday from an expedition into the rebel country. After having robbed Gill of 1,000 pesos and his clothing, the rebels carried him away.

TO JOIN REVOLT.

Bilingual School Order Arouses More Separate Boards.

Tilbury, Sept. 13.—It is believed now that the local separate school board will follow the example of the Ottawa board in putting up a fight against bilingual regulations of the Whitney Government. Expectation also is that numerous French schools in Essex and Kent counties will do likewise and to insist that French as well as English be taught in the schools.

A striking feature of the tenacity of the French for their language is the fact that 165 young men from Essex and Kent are now attending Quebec colleges and seminaries to complete their education in French.

No Action In Cornwall.

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 13.—The Cornwall Separate School Board will take no action in connection with the decision in Ottawa to defy Premier Whitney relative to the teaching of French in the separate schools

Interviews with a number of prominent French-Canadians here showed their unanimous approval of the action of the Ottawa board.

Will Abide by Law.

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 13.—In conversation yesterday afternoon, Gaspard Pachaud, chairman of the local separate school board, stated that he did not approve of any such action as Ottawa proposed. "When the law exists on the statutes, we will certainly abide by it," said Mr. Pacaud, who further states that the local separate school board will take no such action if he can prevent it.

Looking For a Way.

Toronto, Sept. 13.—An appeal of Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational Churches in eastern and western Canada for some official way to bring about union immediately, brought together yesterday in Toronto a special committee of all three denominations. The gathering, which was most representative of all the churches interested, was held in the Methodist Mission Rooms. The Presbyterian General Assembly, the Congregational Union and the Methodist General Conference Special Committee sent many of their leading clergymen to meet and discuss full and take action regarded as a very definite step along the lines of organic union of the three churches.

Three Men Killed.

Halifax, Sept. 13.—James Hiscock, D. Young and P. Dougan (colored) were instantly killed and four others seriously injured at the Woodside Sugar Refinery, Dartmouth, yesterday by the breaking of a derrick boom with a cargo of 800 pounds.

The derrick has been used here before to carry six tons and was thought to be in perfect condition. The men were all at work on the wall of the refinery building, which is being erected to replace the one destroyed by fire some months ago.

Roman Catholic Congress.

Vienna, Sept. 13.—The 23rd international Eucharistic Conference is likely to establish a record in the number of strangers in attendance, 80,000 tickets having been sold to foreigners as compared with 13,000 at the Montreal congress. It is estimated that not less than 120,000 visitors are here and the hotels are so crowded that titled visitors are glad to obtain sleeping quarters in the hotel bathrooms.

The French representatives complain that the central committee failed to invite them to speak at the opening meeting. It seems that the committee was disappointed at the small number of French delegates and considered that they were not entitled to have a speaker. It is reported that Cardinal Amette, Archbishop of Paris, has made a written protest and that the controversy is likely to be carried before the Vatican.

A Spectacular Escape.

Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 13.—Hundreds of terrorized spectators on the County Fair grounds yesterday breathlessly watched the desperate fight against death made by Frank Armstrong, an aeronaut, when he was carried 2,000 feet into the air by a blazing balloon.

Armstrong, whose home is in Celina, Ohio, was preparing to make an ascension, and was straightening out his parachute rigging when the balloon caught fire and his startled helpers let go Fighting like mad to release his parachute, the aeronaut was carried up in a tangle of ropes.

He succeeded in cutting loose a moment before the flames reached the parachute and the blazing balloon collapsed. Armstrong made a successful drop, landing inside the race track.

Cautious About Investments.

London, Sept. 13.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—"While we don't anticipate any serious setback in the near future, there are reasons, nevertheless, for practicing caution," says The Daily News, commenting on Canadian returns published yesterday. "Speculation in land has reached a dangerous point, and in the midst of this rush of prosperity it is well to remember the grave evils developing which will furnish many difficulties when the country has been further exploited and the trust system has gripped the country to an alarming extent. The railways possess a power which dominates the state, and labor is very disorganized politically." It concludes that Canada is far behind in its material development.

Women Police In Edmonton.

Edmonton, Alta., Sept. 13—The city commissioners have considered favorably the application of women for the position of policemen on account of the difficulty of securing men.

Douma Is Dissolved.

Bishop Carpenter Coming.

London, Sept. 13.—Bishop Boyd Carpenter, with Mrs. and Miss Boyd Carpenter, are sailing for Canada. The main purpose of the bishop's visit is in connection with the amalgamation of several theological colleges affiliated to McGill University. "It will, no doubt, be a great advantage over the present separate system of several denominations in respect to their theological colleges," declares the bishop. If circumstances permit he will take the opportunity of extending his tour to the Pacific coast.

Barnardo Secretary Coming.

London, Sept. 13.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Rev. W. J Mayers, senior secretary of the Barnardo Home, sails for Canada on the 19th on board the Sicilian in charge of an emigrant party of 200 girls and boys. The principal object of Mr. Mayers' visit is to advocate the claims of the institution for Canadian support, which hitherto has been very little. Mr. Mayers brings influential personal introductions from the Bishop of Durham, Lord Strathcona, Rev. Dr. Clifford and others.

The Dead Sea.

The Dead sea is 1,300 feet below sea level. There can, of course, be no outlet for the Dead sea, and the volume of from 6,000,000 to 10,000,000 tons of water that the Jordan throws into it every twenty-four hours must be carried away by evaporation.

THE MENACE OF RABIES.

Shut Up Your Dog When These Symptoms Begin to Show.

The first striking symptom in a rabid dog is almost invariably a decided change in its disposition. It either becomes more cross, irritable and sulky or shows unusual friendliness and wants to be continually petted. Obviously in the latter state it is a most dangerous menace to its owner, who easily may be infected through a scratch on the hand or by a bite during unusual playfulness. In either case the dog soon becomes extremely restless, lying down, then almost immediately getting up to run around nervously for a few seconds and again lying down. This rotation it keeps up without interruption for some time. The dog is easily startled, growls and barks at the least provocation. The owner or keeper who knows its disposition will easily discern this change and by simply shutting up the dog securely for observation will obviate all further danger.

The Pasteur treatment has been proved beyond peradventure to be a specific prophylactic against rabies. It will prevent the development of the disease if administered properly and if used in time. The report of the Pasteur institute of Paris (Annales de l'Institut Pasteur) states that during the past ten years 7,380 persons have been treated, of whom only twenty-one have died from all causes, a mortality of .28 per cent. The record in this country is almost as good.—Walter Peet in Harper's Weekly.

"THE OUTFITTERS"

The Belleville High School

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—For the information of those interested in the Belleville High School, I wish to submit for publication a few items in connection with this year's work and also last year's. To date this term 201 pupils have registered, 62 of these are county pupils. This year we have the whole building for high school purposes, and as a result have sufficient room for all the classes and also physical culture. A High School Cadet Corps will be organized this fall. In accordance with the regulations of the Education Department, the school is organised into a Lower, a Middle, and an Upper School. Two years are required to complete the work of the Lower School. Pupils who have made excellent records in the Lower School may enter the senior form of the Middle School and complete the work for Junior Matriculation, or Normal Entrance, part II. in another year. That it, it is possible for clever students to complete either Junior Matriculation or Junior Teachers (Normal Entrance part II.) in three years after entering the High School. The Upper School covers the work for Honor Matriculation and Entrance to Faculty of Education (Senior Teachers examinations). The work for Senior Matriculation or Entrance to Faculty of Education requires two years and should not be attempted in less time. Before concluding I wish to add that the results obtained at last June' Departmental Examinations, on account of having our third year pupils' work approved by the High School Inspector, only second year pupils wrote on the Lower School Normal Entrance examination, as a consequence the results at that examination would not compare favorably with schools which had both third and second year pupils writing on the Lower School Examination. For Normal Entrance part II., seven candidates were recommended; five passed, two with honors. Two candidates wrote on the examination who were not recommended, but they did not pass. Seventeen candidates wrote on the Junior Matriculation examination. Twelve passed in all the subjects, one in all but one subject, and one in all but two subejcts. One candidate wrote on McGill Matriculation and passed in all subjects but one. In the Upper School, two candidates wrote for Honor Mathematics, one obtained First Class Honors, the other Second Class Honors. Seven candidates were recommended for the Faculty of Education examination; four passed, one with honors. Three candidates wrote who were not recommended, but were unsuccessful. These results speak for themselves. I wish to thank you for the valuable space in your paper.

Lake on the Mountain Has Been Tested

The preliminary test of the Lake on the Mountain at Glenora, to ascertain to what extent permanent power of large horse power exists there, has been made and proved very satisfactory to those in charge The lake was tapped by a weir twelve feet wide and one foot deep, which would develop about one thousand horse power. The water was turned on for twelve hours during which time the level of the lake was lowered one and one half inches. The water was then turned off to ascertain what the rise in level would be, if any, which during the next twelve hours was one half inch. The test was made under rather unfair conditions, for the reason that when the water was turned on a strong south west wind was blowing, which would raise the water at the mouth of the weir to its highest point, which would naturally of its own accord recede as the wind abated.

The lake is now being surveyed to ascertain the amount of water it contains, after which a more extensive test will be made, reducing the level a foot, it possible. From present indications, however, it would seem that the source of supply is going to be equal to any demand.

RAIN COATS STOLEN.

The police are of the opinion that the lady's rain coat stolen from a vehicle at the fair grounds on Wednesday is at present in possession of a second hand dealer in this city. A coat answering the description has been located by the officers of the law. It was reported to the police last evening that a gentleman's rain coat was recently taken from a room of a public building in the city.

VAGRANCY.

On a charge of vagrancy Stephen Lynch was remanded to jail for a week.

FAILED TO APPEAR.

A number of citizens who have neglected to register their canines were this morning summoned to appear before the Cadi, but the majority of them failed to do so and their cases were enlarged for a week. The Magistrate stated that, in addition to the tax and costs, an additional penalty was liable to be imposed upon those who disregarded the summons.

Must Extend the Intercolonial Ry.

MONTREAL, Sept. 12.—Unless the Government intends to dispose of the Intercolonial Railway, it should at once build a double-track extension from Montreal to Georgian Bay, and share in the profit of the grain trade, as well as help materially to relieve the annual grain blockade. Such is the opinion of Mr. W. F. Tye, formerly chief engineer of the C. P. R., who has just returned from a trip to the West.

He stated that he was amazed at the enormous expansion of both freight and passenger traffic in the west since he was with the C.P.R. in 1902 and 1903 and stationed at Winnipeg. The C.P.R. yards which were then laid out, were the talk in railway circles all over the continent on account of their size, and were expected to be sufficient for 25 years, but already the company is compelled to provide additional yards with capacity for 10,000 cars. The handsome large passenger station is also entirely inadequate now, and will have to be doubled in size, while the hotel adjoining it was so crowded while he was there that a hundred cots had to be used.

The other railways are growing rapidly, he said, but in spite of what all have been doing there is going to be another grain blockade in the west this year as bad as that of last year. The G.T.P. and C.N.R., he said, will have to double track their lines from Winnipeg to Fort William, the same as the C.P.R. The latter piece of road is one of the best he had ever seen, and was able to carry great trainloads of grain.

A great relief to the congestion on the present railways would be afforded, Mr. Tye said, by the construction of a double track line from Montreal to the Georgian Bay, with very low grades. Both tracks should be laid once, as the traffic was there for such a railway to handle.

EXPLORED INDIAN GLACIER.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—A despatch from Shrinagar, India, in the Vale of Kashmir, says Mrs. Fanny Bullock Workman's expedition has completed its exploration of the Siachen glacier, fifty miles long, in the Karakoram Mountains. The party spent six weeks at a height of 17,000 feet and made various ascents ranging from 19,000 to 21,000 feet.

The avalanche which killed one of the guides some time ago, and which caused the circulation of a rumor that it was Dr. Workman who lost his life, nearly swept several others, including a woman, into the abyss.

Milk Cans Were Damaged by Storm

An aftermath of the heavy thunderstorm on Tuesday morning was a large number of damaged milk cans brought to the village that day. The cans had been upset from milk-wagons, to which were attached frightened horses.

At Springhill factory, near this village, a flash of lightning frightened the team of Mr. John Wiggins, and, in their efforts to run away, they collided with Mr. Danford's wagon, upsetting both loads of cans and milk. Fortunately no serious damage was done, although Mr. Danford received slight injuries to his back. A considerable quantity of milk was lost.

At Queensboro Mr. Geo. Love's team ran away, with disastrous results to his load of milk. The factory on the Eldorado road, near the hematite mine, was also the scene of a runaway with a milk wagon.—Madoc Review.

Japanese Emperor And a Wrestler

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The death of the Japanese Emperor, writes Reuter's Tokio correspondent, has given opportunity for the Tokio press to collect from one source and another a number of anecdotes, all of which are calculated to strengthen the admiration held for the deceased monarch on account of his benevolence and simplicity, as well as his wisdom.

At one time wrestling was a favorite pastime at the Japanese court, and His Majesty was able with ease to throw all the court attendants and officials. One man, however, Yamaoka Tetsutaro, was very anxious to throw the Emperor, because he was afraid the latter might become too proud of his prowess in that and other sports. Finally the Emperor challenged Yamaoka, and the latter threw the sovereign with great force. The monarch, as the story goes, was not too pleased with the defeat, but was too good a sportsman to say anything. Later Yamaoka resigned his position at court on the plea that, though he had defeated the Emperor for the good of the throne and the country, yet in doing so he had subjected his sovereign to a heinous indignity. The monarch, however, absolutely refused to accept the resignation, saying:

"You have done well to show that the ring is no respecter of persons, and I appreciate your loyal spirit in beating me." At all events Yamaoka was in high favor at court thereafter.

Another story, which, if not true, has at least the merit of being ben trovato, describes the confusion and nervousness of the ministers in the presence of the Emperor. It is recounted that Prince Ito and the present Premier, Marquis Saionji, were the only statesmen not afflicted with bad nerves when talking to the late Emperor, while Marquis Matsugata was so nervous that he was unable to say anything distinctly except, "I will have careful investigation made, Your Majesty." On one occasion His Majesty, after giving the marquis instructions, asked him: "How many children have you in all, marquis?" to which came the prompt reply, "I will have careful investigation made, Your Majesty," which is said to have caused the monarch intense amusement, for the monarch is blessed with a full quiver.

A message from Saga states that an elderly man named Shigeo Yamasaki has died as the result of an attempt to commit seppuku. Yamasaki was an old swordsman from the times of the Restoration Wars, and rather than live after his Emperor he plunged his sword into his stomach. He left a poem, in which he stated that his "heart was yearning after his Sovereign," and injunctions that he should be buried with his head towards the east, that is, in the direction of the imperial palace. The inhabitants of his village will bury him by public subscription.

RAGPICKER'S ESTATE

Six Hundred Claimants to Be Examined

ST LOUIS, Mo., September 12.—In the cross-examination to-day of Benjamin Foster Moynihan, of Ottawa, Canada, who claims a son's inheritance in the $64,000 estate left by Jeremiah Moynihan, "the millionaire rag picker," he was asked by the probate judge to count in German. He said that Jeremiah Moynihan was the son of German and said he spoke German himself. He counted well until he got to "sieben," his pronounciation of which the court questioned.

Moynihan was the only claimant questioned to-day but just before court adjourned for the afternoon Mrs. Ruth A. Cross, of Oregon, Ill., filed an affidavit in which she stated she was a daughter of Jeremiah Moynyihan. Six hundred other claimants will contest for the estate.

Antiquity of Shorthand

According to Professor C. M. Cobern, of Alleghany College, Meadville, Penn., an explorer of ancient ruins, who lectured in Cleveland, "The Sermon on the Mount," was taken down in shorthand. Professor Cobern, also said that it was stenography which preserved to the world the great facts and sayings contained in the Bible, and that probably some stenographic method was in fairly general use in Christ's time on earth.

HOT FLASHES.

Women in middle age often complain of hot flashes. They are at that stage of life—when their delicate organism needs a tonic and helping-hand which only Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can give them. Many women suffer needlessly from girlhood to womanhood and from motherhood to old age—with backache, dizziness or headache. A woman often becomes sleepless, nervous, "broken-down," irritable and feels tired from morning to night. When pains and aches rack the womanly system at frequent intervals, ask your neighbor about Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Mrs. J. Imnow, of 321 S. Bentalon Street, Baltimore, Md., says: "I wrote you about nine months ago, telling you of my condition. I have a fine baby girl—she weighed nine pounds when born. She is my third child and the strongest of them all. My suffering was only for two hours. I took several bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of Dr. Pierce's Smart-Weed. I never had a well day before I took your medicines. I was surprised how well I felt—could eat—was always hungry, and never had a sick stomach. The nurse who was with me said the medicine was wonderful because I got along so nicely after having had so much trouble before. She intends to recommend it to all her suffering patients. Everybody is astonished at me because I only weighed 102 pounds before and now I weigh 135. I have had several ladies come to me and ask about Dr. Pierce's medicine. I am willing to recommend it to all who suffer and want help. If any want information I will be glad to give it to them."

THE STORY OF A WANDERER

By JAMES GRANT

Author of "The Romance of War," "Under the Red Dragon," "Fairer than A Fairy," etc.

His lips seeme to be baked with fever, so I handed him an ostrich egg filled with water from a spring that gurgled down the rocks and he gave me a glance expressive of surprise and also of as much gratitude as his ferocious visage could assume.

"I little thought, even in sore extremity like this, to get even a drop of water from your hand Dick Haddon. I tried to do you wrong many times when I came upon your trail in the bush; but that is all past and gone now—past and gone." He moaned heavily and then added: "I thank God now that the girls got off free as I have heard—old Toby of Walcot's daughters, I mean. Yes I am indeed thankful for that, now that I find myself lying here!"

There was a pause; after which I said:

"You had your chances at home in the old country—chances like other men—and might have become respectable, had you lived industriously and quietly."

"Respectable and industrious! Ah, ah! What chance of being either one or t'other has a returned transport a ticket of leave man, whom every prowling detective or rural policeman whose sweetheart mayhap you fancy may talk about you, and say to your employer. 'Look out, don't trust him?' So a fellow such as I had never the ghost of a chance for doing good, Captain Haddon. Had I risen to be an elder in the kirk, the taint would stick to me, and the taunt be given. So I was best off where the waves and winds cast me, here in the wild bush, with all men's hands against me, and mine against all men."

"And in this terrible spirit you could actually assassinate your harmless countrymen—private soldiers who never injured your—poor fellows in our native tartan too!"

"What does it matter that they were so?" he growled. "Those same countrymen had hunted me and others like wild beasts from bush to rock, and from rock to tree, for many months, and thus I only shot those who would have shot me. It was my life against their lives, that was all! And yet, and yet— "His voice died away, and his nether lip quivered convulsively, and in a changed voice he said: "My mother lies in Kelso kirkyard, by the old abbey wall, far far away, where I shall never lie. Oh, happy, happy dead!"

"You wrong yourself, poor wretch" said I. "The lees of some good are in you yet."

"Do you think so, Master Dick? Perhaps the devil is never so black as he is painted, though Heaven knows I have been bad enough and black enough in my time; but law made me so."

"No doubt it was very impertinent of the law to punish your peccadilloes."

"Don't sneer at a dying man, Captain Haddon, a rascal though he be. Some day— tomorrow, tonight, perhaps—if Sandilli or Vonga get up on our trail, you may lie, as I now lie, face to face with Heaven. Yes" he added in a low tone and wailing voice, chocked with sobs, "face to face with Heaven."

He turned his haggard eyes as he spoke to the bright evening sky.

I threw some dry branches on the fire, and drawing forth a brace of the broiled partridges, rent them asunder, and offerel a piece to Sharkeigh, but he turned from it as if with loathing. I was starving for the lack of food, feeling faint, in fact, and so appeased my own hunger; but during this interval, or while I had been stoping over the sufferer Adrian Africander would seem to have stolen out of the cavern unperceived by either of us.

"You know the trick that old Prue Grubb and I played you after Halbert Haddon's death?" said he, after a pause.

"Too well—but too well. It ruined me; cost me my commission and the loss of one who was dearer to me than a thousand commissions. It made me a wanderer on the face of the earth. Mark Sharkeigh if ever one man revenged himself for a mere blow dealt in a scuffle, you have had a terrible revenge on me!"

"I shall make amends ere it be too late."

"How?"

"By writing a full confession of the plot."

"And your share in it?"

"Yes, a signed confession."

"But without witnesses of trust, what will it avail me?"

"Heaven will witness it!" cried the miserable creature, with a strange burst of fevor. "My signature is in the books of Jedburgh Castle more than once. Let those who doubt it compare my signed confession with the documents there."

"But paper pens ink—we are without them. Surely your mind wanders."

"It does not. There is an ammunition wrapper. Make me a pen with your knife, and I'll soon find suitable ink."

I smoothed out a piece of brown paper that lay near; cartridges had once been wrapped in it—and with my knife cut him a pen of a quill from a wild bird's pinion, for many lay strewed there.

With hands that trembled a little he laid the paper upon the crown of his broad hat, which he placed before him as a desk and deliberately dipping the pen into a black pool of his own blood, which lay in a crevice of the cavern floor, he proceeded to write out a brief but clear confession of the conspiracy which the Scottish courts of law had failed to clear up—the plot by which he and an artful hypocrite had defrauded me of my lawful inheritance, and brought about the fatal blight that fell upon Clarice and me, as I have already detailed in the earlier chapters of my story.

I watched him attentively as he wrote on, with long pauses at times either to choose words, or because he was faint and weak.

At last he signed it with the last effort of a bold hand ,and gave it to me. Legally it might, nay would certainly, be worthless; yet it was a link in my history, and thanking him for it, placed it where I carried the tattered letter of Clarice.

Now all the strength seemed to pass out of Mark Sharkeigh, and his head sank heavily against the wall of rock. I thought the man was gone. I felt his pulse, and it was beating still. I placed the shell of water to his lips; he drank some, and reviving a little, looked hurriedly about him.

"Where is Africander?" he asked huskily.

"Gone—stolen away," said I, now missing the sable rascal for the first time, so fully had my thoughts been occupied.

"Gone where?" asked Sharkeigh, with some asperity of manner.

"I know not."

"But I know!" exclaimed the other with new energy; "it is to betray you."

"To whom? Vonga?" said I, starting.

"No; oh no."

"To whom, then?"

"Some Amapondas and rebel Hottentots, who are encamped in the bush about three miles distant."

"Are you sure of this?"

"I have not a doubt of it. Adrian Africander is capable of anything."

"Yet no master could be kinder to a servant than I for years have been to him. The ungrateful dog!"

"So now begone, I implore you, Captain Haddon. You have been kind to me—have forgiven me, perhaps," said he, in a broken voice "and I would not have you caught and butchered here, as these Caffre devils alone know how to torture. Away; you have not a moment to lose."

"And you?"

"Leave me to die in peace. Man can do nothing for me now—nothing perhaps not even give me a grave."

Here was a dilemma for which I was by no means prepared. I was certainly not under such obligations to this man that I should watch by his deathbed at the risk of my own life. The latter I knew would be instantly sacrificed the moment Africander returned with his horde of Amaponda Caffres at his back. I resolved at once to quit the cavern and at all events, while there was yet time, seek shelter of the thicket in the kloof. After a space I might return, and before finally setting off to cross the mountain, pay a farewell visit to the dying sinner.

I said something of this to Sharkeigh, and he seemed deeply grateul to me. I then seized my rifle and hatchet, and quitted the Bushman's temple. The sufferer seemed then to be sinking into a kind of a trance, for his eyes were closed, his head reclined against the hard rock, and he seemed neither to hear nor see my departure.

All that had passed seemed like a dream to me, as I went plunging down the rough rocky face of the slope, and reached unseen, as I hoped, the thicket where my horse had passed the night. The saddle, wet with dew, was soon girthed on, and I now thought that while all remained quiet in this locality it would be wiser in me to get out of it at once as the wood would in all likelihood be searched for me.

I Mounted and set forth, after a careful reconnaissance, but I had barely got into the open portion of the kloof when I saw behind me a mounted band, consisting of many horsemen.

They seemed about two miles distant, and by the sudden quickening of their speed and change of direction to be undoubtedly in pursuit of me.

Rural Delivery

Canadian people are catching on to the advantages of the system of rural mail delivery. Many applications are being received by the post office department, especially from Ontario. There are now 850 rural deliveries, 250 of them having been added in the past year. The greater number of applications come from Ontario where most of the routes are now located. Twenty-five thousand delivery boxes have been erected.

BURGLAR WAS CAUGHT IN ACT

Stranger, who Gave His Name as Frank Smith, was Trying to Enter Goodsell's Store.

At about 2.30 this morning Mr. James A. Goodsell, who is domiciled over his place of business on Front street, was awakened by a noise as if some person was endeavoring to effect an entrance into the rear part of his store. Mr. Goodsell did not go to where the noise came from, but telephoned to the police. Sergt. Naphin and Officer Deshane responded to the call and arrested a man who gave his name as Frank Smith and the United States as his residence. That he intended to effect an entrance into the establishment was evident; as a pane of glass had been broken out of a window being of such dimension as to allow a person to get through. Smith was taken to the police station and locked up. He is comparatively a young man and claims he was born in Texas.

Smith appeared before the Magistrate this morning when a charge of shop breaking was preferred against him. The accused said he did not desire to be tried for a day or two and he was remanded to jail for a week.

We are informed that an unsuccessful attempt was made to enter by the rear another business place on Front Street.

Considerable credit is due to Mr. Frank Granger the genial night clerk at the Crystal Hotel for the energy displayed by him in assisting to secure the police within a short period to the scene of the attempted burglary.

Deck Hand's Leg Cut Off by Rope

Special

IROQUOIS, Sept. 14.—While the steamer Alexandria was swinging out after calling at Iroquois wharf yesterday morning, Robert Gates, one of the deck hands, who was sitting on the snubbing post waiting his turn to pull the rope off, got a leg tangled in the line and the limb was completely cut off. He was hurried to Brockville hospital for treatment in charge of Dr. Johnson. Gates' home is at Eric P.O., near Kingston.

Novel Feature At the Fair

The novel feature of the Belleville fair was the exhibit of farming implements operated by electricity and different household helps, also operated by electricity that was shown jointly by the Seymour Power & Electric Co., and the Trenton Electric & Water Co.

In this exhibit was shown a large buzz-saw for use on the farm, a straw cutter operated by motor that attracted considerable attention, a root cutter also operated by a motor, a pump that will look after the water supply of the average house and which does not take any more power to operate it than an ordinary 32-candle power lamp, a meat grinder that was operated by a self contained motor, a washing machine that received considerable attention from the ladies present, as this machine which costs about a half a cent an hour to operate it, washes the clothes and by a special attachment wrings them.

A demonstration was also given of cooking by electricity.

One of the out-standing parts of the exhibit that attracted a great deal of attention from the dairymen and farmers, was the apparatus for mechanically milking cows. This apparatus is entirely operated by electricity, the attachments are placed on the cow and do not injure the animal in any respect and in fact is used on a great number of prize cattle. Towards the latter part of the afternoon two cows were procured, the same being two prize animals that were shown, and the cows were milked before an enthusiastic audience, showing that it did not frighten the animals in the slightest degree. These cows were never milked in this way before, but did not seem to pay any attention to the fact that they were being milked by a mechanical milker.

Taking the exhibit as a whole, it was a very creditable one, attracting a great deal of attention and no doubt our farmers will look forward to the time when these appliances can be used on the farm.

Germany Got No Orders for Warships

English and French Firms are Only Foreign Builders To Receive Orders From Russia

Special

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—The well informed "Kieler Neueste Nachrichten" states that Russia has "entirely overlooked" German dockyards in connection with orders for her new fleet, on which $645,000,000 is to be spent in the next five years.

English and French firms are the only foreign builders who have been asked for tenders, while two-thirds of the fleet will be built in Russian yards.

The Kaiser was quoted by the Russian press as having actively solicited orders for German yards at the time of his meeting with the Czar in the Finnish Skerries. It was stated that he had taken with him the German Dreadnought cruiser Moltke to show what German yards were really capable of producing.

G. T. R. Employee Was Injured

Mr. George Cornish, a young man employed in the G. T. R. yard here, was last evening, shortly after nine o'clock the victim of an accident which might have resulted fatally, but fortunately he was not seriously injured. It appears that Cornish was riding on the side of a box car which was being shunted, when his body came in contact with the arm of a switch. The blow knocked him off the car and he fell, beside the track and away from the passing car. At first it was feared that he was badly hurt as he was unconscious. The ambulance was called and Cornish was as speedily as possible conveyed to the hospital for medical attention. The bar of the switch struck him across the stomach, inflicting some internal injuries, but fortunately not of a serious nature. His escape from being killed was almost miraculous.

Let your light shine in your home, and don't be afraid that it will become too bright. Don't be turning it down all the time, as some people do their gas.

FREDERICK STAPLES' DEATH WAS PURELY ACCIDENTAL

Such was the Verdict of the Coroner's Jury in the Grand Trunk Fatality Last Night—Deceased was in the Discharge of His Duty—A Mass of Evidence Taken Before Coroner Dr. Farley — A Full Report of the Proceedings.

"We find that Frederick Staples came to his death on the morning of Sept. 11th, 1912 when in the discharge of his duties as a brakesman in the employ of the G. T. R. in the company's yard in Thurlow Township, by being crushed between cars, and that it was in an accidental manner.

"The jury, after carefully considering the evidence given would recommend that the company give more definite instruction to the yard foreman as to the proper use of signals at this particular part of the yard for the protection of those employed at this work."

Such was the verdict rendered by the coroner's jury who investigated the case of the unfortunate accident in the G. T. R. yard here whereby Frederick Staples lost his life. Dr Farley was coroner, Mr. Anderson represented the Crown, Mr. Carnew appeared for the deceased's family, and Mr. D. Taylor for the G. T. R. company. The jury were out but a few minutes considering their verdict.

Charles Tebworth, sworn, said he was a G. T. R. engineer and was on switch engine 1221 switching at the west end of the yard when the accident occurred to Staples. He knew Fred Staples and saw him on the morning of the 11th inst. Deceased was squeezed between two cars. Deceased was a yard brakesman. The accident occurred at 4.50 in the morning. Witness saw Staples immediately after the accident. Witness could not say why Staples went between the cars. An engine from the east end was pushing some cars together which were disabled by having the draw bars off. This would allow the cars to come close together—probably four or five inches apart.

Cross examined by Mr. Carnew—A blue flag or blue lamp is used to protect workmen when shunting is being done on what is called the disabled line. There was no blue light exhibited at the time of the accident, as witness considered it was not necessary.

To Mr. W. Alford—Witness was about four car lengths away from Staples. Foreman Hopkins was about the scene when the accident occurred. Witness' engine was standing still and an engine from the east came along with some cars and shunted into his string.

Mr. Hopkins, sworn, said he was a G. T. R. yard foreman and was at the scene of the accident. Staples was assisting witness at the time. Staples was standing between Nos. 9 and 10 tracks. Staples and witness knew the cars were disabled. Witness went to go away and as he did so Staples went in between the cars and he (the witness) shouted to Staples to duck his head as an engine with some cars bumped into the cars where Staples was standing. The west part of the train did not move. When Staples went in between the cars there was but a small space—probably 18 or 20 inches. Witness was going to the east end of the train to protect Staples when the cars moved. He could not see the east end engine.

To Mr. Carnew—He heard no signal from the east end engine. Witness told Staples that he (the witness) would go down east to see that no cars came in. Witness had not moved away more than half a car length when the cars moved together and Staples was between them. Witness saw no light from the engine from the east end.

To Mr. Alford—Witness, when he saw Staples was between the cars told him to keep his head down. He did not have charge of the east engine coming in, but was in charge of engine No. 1221. It was necessary for Staples or witness to go in between the cars to make a coupling.

BELLEVILLE'S BUILDING DEVELOPMENT IS GREAT

City Engineer Lindsay Tells of the City's Steady Progress—Permits Taken up to August 31st Foot up $370,000—Guelph and Stratford Exceeded—A Brillant Prospect for the Near Future

The following letter, supplied the Financial Post—Canada's leading financial journal—from our City Engineer's department, indicates perhaps as nothing else could the remarkable development now going on in our midst, of which many are ignorant. It is pleasant to have these figures as certified to by Mr. Lindsay, and which he states are very conservative, inasmuch as a considerable amount of work in alterations is carried on without permit, as some are still unaware of the permit system.

Nothing boosts our city more than publicity of this kind, and we congratulate the Engineer on keeping Belleville in the foreground.

City Engineer's Office,
Belleville, Sept. 9, 1912.

Financial Post,
c/o MacLean Publishing Co.,
143-149, University Ave., Toronto

Dear Sirs,—I have pleasure in enclosing figures relating to Belleville's building permits up to 31st August, and would state that Belleville's building development is, I understand, well in line with that of the most progressive cities in Ontario, exceeding this year, I notice, Guelph, Stratford and such busy centres.

The growth is steady, no inflation Served now by three leading railways, C.N.R., G.T.R. and C.P.R., and with a Government dock to be constructed at a cost of $250,000, Belleville is destined to develop at a rate beyond that of many more pretentious cities. I should say the permits to date do not include any part of the $250,000 being spent by the Government.

Yours truly,
JAMES G. LINDSAY, C.E.,
City Engineer.

MIDDLEBORO, Mass., Sept. 14.—A life preserver from the steamship Titanic which sank five months ago is being exhibited here to-day.

Another Step in Church Union

Special

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—Arrangements for the formation of Union Churches where so desired, until organic union between the Presbyterian Methodist and Congregational churches is consummated, were discussed last night by a special committee composed of representatives of the Union Committees of the three churches.

Rev. Dr. Carman, General Superintendent of the Methodist Church, was made chairman, and Rev. Dr. Ramsay of Ottawa, Secretary. The meeting was called in response to appeals from churches in the West for some organization to supervise the Union Churches which have been formed in the sparsely settled districts. Several schemes were considered, but nothing definite decided. The committee adjourned until December 3 in order to secure further information.

Two Funerals Held Yesterday

FREDERICK STAPLES.

Yesterday the funeral of the late Frederick Staples, who was killed in the G. T. R. yard here, took place, and was largely attended. It was under the auspices of the Orange Society of which deceased was a member. Service was held at the family residence conducted by Rev. R. C. Blagrave and Mr. A. Farrell, as Deputy Master of the Orange Society. The remains were then conveyed to Carmel Church in Thurlow, where Rev. W. G. Clarke preached a funeral sermon]. Interment took place at Carmel cemetery. The bearers were members of the Orange Society, namely: Jesse J. Thomas, Arch. Collins, C. L. Smith, S. G. Kerr, Robert Adams and Ira A. Scannell.

MRS. H. ROBLIN.

The funeral yesterday afternoon of the late Mrs. Harry Roblin was largely attended by relatives and friends. At the late home and at the Centenary Church Rev. Mr. Howard conducted impressive services. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, evidencing that the deceased had many friends. Interment took place at Belleville cemetery. The bearers were: Jas. Ray, J. H. Spafford, B. Bedell, J. Boyd, A. and D. Thrasher.

LETTERS OF A SLIM-MADE WOMAN TO HER FAT SISTER

First Letters: On the Fallacy of "Training Down" to a Comfortable Size.

Dear Sis:—If you could see me now you'd surely wonder what witchery had wrought the transformation—for you wouldn't recognize your Amazon sister in the gracefully molded figure sitting here.

Yes, I have a surprise for you—that huge mountain of fat you once knew as sister is no more—I'm as trim a body now as you'd meet in a day's walk. And the change from fat to just plump was so easy, and gradual, and natural, and perfectly harmless, that I didn't realize it was taking place.

You remember that horrible nightmare that confronted me every day—the physicians called it "exercise"—but as I look back on it now I can call it nothing but torture. Lying flat on my back and trying to kick holes through the ceiling with my feet. Attempting to stand on my hands on a chair when nothing less than a derrick would lift my bulk into the air. Standing with stiff knees and trying to touch my toes with my fingers—when I couldn't even see them. And other things as ridiculous. "Exercise!"

I just quit it all. A few months ago I got a mixture of 1-2 ounce Marmola powder, 3-4 ounce Cascara Aromatic, 4 3-4 ounces Peppermint Water at the drug store, took a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime—took it persistently and faithfully—and now, sis, I really have a beautiful figure, smooth skin, firm flesh and the digestion of an ostrich. It's simply wonderful.

Lovingly, BETTY.

CARRIED BOER BULLET FOR YEARS NEAR HEART

MONTREAL, Sept. 13.—There is an almost unbelievable touch of romance about Mr. Frederick Irvine, of Maisonneuve, who came out of Royal Victoria Hospital yesterday afternoon. Ever since he, as a British soldier, fought the engagements of the English in the South African war, he has carried around with him a Boer bullet, encrusted in a shred of his pierced tunic. The lead has been tucked all these years, neatly between his lung and his heart. A few days ago it was removed by local doctors and yesterday Mr Irvine was declared perfectly cured.

Irvine was shot at the taking of Ladysmith, in the early part of the South African war. He soon recovered, apparenty. So well did he become that he went back again into the battle, and remained with the English forces until the end of the campaign.

This wound after a while troubled him slighty. In England he underwent examination by army surgeons. But they failed to locate the bullet. Instead they assured Irvine that the shot had undoubtedly struck one of his ribs, and immediately glanced off his body.

He was unable therefore, to secure a pension.

About eight years ago Irvine came to Canada. He secured employment here and settled in Maisonneuve.

A month ago the old wound began to trouble him. So he underwent an examination. The X-ray declared that the Boer bullet was cosily nestling near Irvine's heart!

The Montreal surgeons insisted that an operation was imperative.

When the lead was extracted, curiously enough, it was found that a bit of the Khaki tunic worn by Irvine in the Ladysmith engagement was still sticking.

"I'd better send it back to the British War Department before I get accused of trying to steal part of a uniform," smiled Irvine to-day, just after he came out of the hospital.

Irvine showed the bullet-pierced book that helped to save his life.

It was a souvenir of a queer working of Fate. Just previous to the firing Irvine took his small diary out of a right hand inner pocket of his uniform. He replaced the book in another pocket just over the heart.

When the bullet struck the harder substance it undoubtedly proved of some resisting powers and lessened the strength with which the lead entered Irvine's body.

As a result, the shot stopped just short of Irvine's heart.

The hospital surgeons claim the extracion of the bullet from Irvine was perhaps the most delicate operation of a similar nature ever performed in Canada.

A Mystery From Belleville

Belleville has a mystery. The Intelligencer—over the destinies of which that consistent protectionist, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, presides—is deeply concerned over it, but sees no light. The Intelligencer states the mystery in these terms:—"On Friday, August 24, prime sirloin beef sold in London for 19½ cents a pound, and in New York for 28 cents a pound. Just at present meat prices in the United States and also in Canada are higher than ever before, while the identical cuts which bring such high prices on this continent are sold in London for less. This despite the water haul of 3,000 miles, and two rail hauls, first from Chicago to the Atlantic seaboard, and from Liverpool to London. The United States beef trust, of course, denies having anything to do with boosting prices, but these facts remain. A certain proportion of the beef sold in London is American beef. There is the mystery. How does it happen that beef is carried across the ocean from the United States to England and sold in London at much lower prices than those charged in New York, if the New York prices are not extortionate?"

The Intelligencer admits that the mystery is just as mysterious in Canada, where prime sirloin costs 22 cents, although we, too, sell the animals from which similar meat is carved in Britain at 19½ cents.

The beef trust in the United States and the bigger market in Britain are given as partial explanations of the mystery, but The Intelligencer is not quite satisfied with these explanations, for it says: "It is to be hoped that the Government will respond favorably to the prayer of the Toronto petition—a petition in which every municipality in Ontario would do well to join—and appoint a Royal Commission to examine into a state of affairs as to which there is a universal protest in the country."

While Sir Mackenzie is groping about in the dark trying to catch the cause of high prices how would it do for the rest of us to demand the repeal of all duties on meats? It is Britain's policy of free imports that gives her cheap food. Every producer of food animals in the world knows that the British market is open duty free night and day for all the foodstuffs that the world cares to send. The Belleville mystery is no mystery at all. Taxed food is bound to be dearer than tax-free food. And as Sir Mackenzie is for taxed food every time, he ought to have grace enough to pay for his beefsteak without making such a row about it. First thing he knows Brother Flavelle will get The News to read him out of the party.

The foregoing, which is copied from The Toronto Globe, is a fine sample of the elephantine wit of that ponderous periodical—wit which cannot fail to cause the reader to laugh at, instead of with, its author.

The Globe's contention appears to be that, if Canada admitted beef from the United States free from taxation, the price of that article of food would be reduced in this country; but how that reduction could be effected while the price of beef is higher in the neighboring country than it is in the Dominion is a "mystery" which the "economic thought" writer does not even attempt to explain.

Another "mystery" to the elucidation of which our confused contemporary might, now that it is again advocating reciprocity with the United States address itself, is how would Canadian farmers under that arrangement, receive higher prices for their products and the Canadian consumer pay less for those products.

The defeat of the Liberal candidate for Parliament in the old Liberal stronghold of Midlothian bodes ill for the Asquith Government. Their defeat at the next general election seems highly probable.

The proposal to erect a monument to General Brock by the school children of Ontario, in this anniversary year of the battle of Queenston Heights, where he laid down his life, is in every way commendable. Entirely free of a jingo spirit, no figure that has crossed the pages of Canadian history did more to perpetuate the freedom and independence we have so long enjoyed than Sir Isaac Brock, whose name will ever be cherished with reverence by every Canadian worthy of the name.—Hamilton Spectator.

The great democracy which Sir George Reid represents has done something substantial without making much fuss about it. It has armed and is drilling every able bodied youth in the country between the ages of 14 and 26, and is building up a navy in time of trouble. Sir George is entitled to point Canada to the example set by Australia. It may not be expedient for this country to choose the Australian way of contributing to the defensive forces of the empire, but it should do something worth while, and do it quickly. The largest mammoth the modern world has ever seen is now on view at Stuttgart. The bones that compose the huge skeleton were found in the sandy soil of Steinheim, on the River Murr, a region that has long been noted for deposits of prehistoric remains. The mammoth is more than 13 feet high, and because of its remarkably long legs, it is believed to be a predecessor of the diluvian mammoth. Moreover the tusks are shorter and have a different curve from those of the later mammoth. It is believed that the Steinheim mammoth lived between 200,000 and 300,000 years ago, long before the stone age.

An incident which has recently occurred shows how little reliance can be placed upon the so-called 'alienist' evidence in the case of persons whom it is sought to prove insane in order that they may escape punishment for crime. A year and a half ago Joseph G. Robins was tried at New York for embezzling bank funds, despite the fact that thirteen medical specialists pronounced him insane. It now turns out that during Robbins' incarceration in the Tombs he has made a fortune in Wall Street. Just what explanation the doctors have to give of their testimony it is not easy to see, but one is forced unwillingly to the conclusion that they must have had The Almighty Dollar in their eyes when they stood in the witness box.—Brantford Expositor.

Despite abuses which the Federal and State Governments of the United States are now trying to correct by law, cold storage has been of great benefit to man, yet the reputed inventor of the process, Charles Tellier, a Frenchman, is in actual want. He spent a fortune in proving that cold storage was practicable. In 1875 he equipped a ship and with a cargo of fresh meat cruised around about the equator for several months in order to demonstrate the worth of his plan. Fortunes have been built up as the result of his invention, which has gone a long way in solving the food problem of the cities and has made possible foreign commerce in perishable provender. Tellier is now 84 years old and subscriptions are being requested to relieve his poverty. Argentina has contributed $5,000 to the fund.

LONDON TIMES DISCUSSES THE CARTIER CELEBRATION

In an Able Editorial, the Great English Paper Traces the Life and Work of the Famous Canadian whose Name will be Honored and Perpetuated.

(From London Times, Aug. 26.)

As we announce elsewhere, it is proposed to celebrate the centenary of the birth, in 1814, of Sir George Etienne Cartier, one of the chief fathers and founders of the Canadian Dominion, by the dedication of a monument erected to his memory on the slope of Mount Royal, overlooking the city of Montreal. The site is associated with the name of Cartier singularly well chosen for it has been ever since Canada has been known to mankind.

It was an earlier Cartier, Jacques by name, a man of the same race as the latter Canadian statesman, who was the first European to set foot on Mount Royal, then overhanging, not the city of Montreal, but the Huron-Iroquois village of Hochelaga. He, too, had he been gifted with the prophetic vision of his later namesake, might have felt like "stout Cortez when with eagle eyes he stared at the Pacific" as he gazed at the broad waters of the St. Lawrence and the Ottawa gleaming away to the westward.

The rapids of Lachine barred the further progress of his boats, but it was Jacques Cartier who first discovered the St. Lawrence and gave it its name, giving at the same time the name of Canada to the region it traversed and of Mount Royal to the hill on which he stood at the furthest point of his westward pilgrimage. The name Canada merely means a village in the Indian language from which he took it, and that again is significant in its symbolism.

It is recorded of Themistocles that he pleaded that, though he had "no skill to tune a harp nor a viol, nor to play at a psalterion, yet if they put a city into his hands that was of a small name, weak and little, he knew ways to make it noble, great and strong." This is just what George Etienne Cartier did. We know not if he was any more of a musician than Themsitocles was, though in the estimation of his countrymen he was no mean poet in the tongue of his race. But he knew ways enough, and he followed them too, to make the village which Jacques Cartier had named into a Dominion, noble, strong, and great.

George Etienne Cartier was born on September 6, 1814, at St. Antoine, in the county of Vercheres, in the Province of Quebec. He was educated for the law, and becoming a member of the Bar in Lower Canada, he soon acquired a lucrative practice in that profession. He took some part in Papineau's rebellion of 1837, and had for a time to leave the country. But he soon repented of his youthful aberration, and returned to Canada as a loyal and enthusiastic subject of the Britsh Crown. From that time forward all his energies were devoted to the consolidation of all the Canadas and their development into one great self-governing Confederation, destined to grow into freedom, concord, content and tranquility under the British flag. His attitude and sentiments in this regard are best expressed in a few words from a speech delivered in London in 1869 at a time when he was a member of the first Dominion Government. "The Canadian people desire to remain faithful to the old monarchiel flag of Great Britain, that flag which waves over all seas, that flag which tyranny has never been able to overcome, that flag which symbolizes true liberty." If that was the universal sentiment of the Canadian people in 1869, it was largely owing to Cartier's personal influence over Canadians of his own race that it had become so.

This was the higher spiritual element of his work for Canada—a passionate aspiration combined with unceasing effort for the reconciliation of the two races which in his youth had been so bitterly estranged. But his prophetic vision also led him to work with no less enthusiasm, not only for all domestic legislation, that might make for the concord and unity of the two races that dwell together in Canada, but also for the extension, development, and consolidation of that great Dominion that now stretches as John Bright once said of the United States, "from the wild billows of the Atlantic westward to the calmer waters of the Pacific main."

We need not enumerate the many measures both of internal organization and of external expansion and development with which his name is associated, the many Ministries of which he was either a member or the chief the many colleagues who shared his labors and contributed to their noble results. It suffices to quote Lord Dufferin's appreciation of them in a letter written in 1872, when he was Governor-General of Canada and Cartier was within a few months of his death. "Your name is indissolubly incorporated with the most eventful and most glorious epoch in your country's history, commencing, as it does, with your entrance into political life, and culminating in that consolidation of the Provinces to which your genius courage, and ability so materially contributed."

To such a man, who is justly held by his countrymen to have been one of the most honest, upright, and far-seeing Ministers who have ever held office in the Dominion, it is eminently fitting that a worthy monument should be dedicated on the hundredth anniversary of his birth. We commend the proposal to all who realize the greatness of Canda, her inspiring memories of the past, and her not less inspiring ambition to bear a part worthy of her mighty destiny in the fortunes and burdens of our common and united Empire in the future.

A committee has been formed for the purpose under the presidency of Mr. E. W. Villeneuve. It has received encouragement and support from men of light and leading representing all shades of opinion in Canadian politics and public life, and from others of like prominence in this country. To judge by the list of names we have received, some of the most prominent of which we mention elsewhere, the promoters of the memorial are, as is natural and fitting, well-nigh equally divided between French and English Canadians; and in particular both Mr Borden, the present Prime Minister of Canada, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, his distinguished predecessor, are, as might be expected, united in its support.

The Prince of Wales has been invited to visit Canada in the year of the centenary and to preside at the dedication of the memorial, and, should His Royal Highness be able to accept the invitation, it will, we are sure, be felt that the occasion is eminently worthy of his presence and countenance. Invitations have also been sent to the Premiers of all the British colonies. Thus the whole British Empire will in spirit be gathered to do the honor which is justly due to the memory of the man who, albeit not of British blood and race, was one of the first to comprehend the majesty and dignity of the Empire, and one of the foremost to promote its unity.

A Beautiful Range—Yet Easily Kept Clean

Glance at the "PANDORA" as it stands complete—a handsome range surely, yet easily kept clean. McClary's famed "Duplex" nickelling cannot burn off—it never becomes tarnished. About it there is no superfine "impossible-to-keep-clean" tracery—the nickel adornment is rich—the carving bold.

"PANDORA" Range

"PANDORA" surfaces are "burnished." The McClary system of burnishing is a special process that produces surfaces as smooth as plate glass. "PANDORA" surfaces keep their color indefinitely—they retain our special water-proof dressing. So, you can keep the "PANDORA" bright and clean by simply rubbing a dry cloth over it.

The "PANDORA" is more than a handsome range. It is also a permanent investment because it is built to endure—it is the one range that is as strong and compact as it looks.

The "PANDORA" cooking surface is made in sections with expansion top—the covers and cross-bars fit into them—this allows for expansion and contraction without any possibility of cracking or warping.

Top sections are reversible—you can place a boiler cross-wise on the "PANDORA" if you wish to use front pot-hole over fire. "PANDORA" lids and entire top are extra heavy and guaranteed not to crack or break under ordinary usage.

N. B.—You can have the story of "PANDORA" Efficiency in detail by simply asking for our free book, "REASONS FOR 'PANDORA' POPULARITY."

CLARE BROS & Co LIMITED PRESTON ONT
Burns wood as well as coal.

No Gas

FUSED JOINTS CANNOT LEAK

Comfortable heating is possible only with a Furnace that cannot leak gas and dust. At every joint where a leak might otherwise occur, the Hecla is sealed tight. We do not trust to bolts and cement. The wear due to constant expansion and contraction would grind out the cement and leave a series of leaks for the escape of gas or dust. To make a joint that will be as tight after years of service as it is when new, we fuse the steel sides and cast-iron frames of our radiators by a patent process. This welds the iron and steel into one piece.

Homes heated by Hecla Furnaces 20 years old are getting as pure air from the registers as when the Furnace was new.

And this Furnace saves one ton of coal in seven.
Isn't it worth looking into?

NAP LAJOIE THINKS JOHNSON'S THE BEST

"Walter Johnson is far away a better pitcher than Joe Wood," said Larry Lajoie, than whom there could scarcely be a better judge of pitching.

"Wood has been pitching 'way beyond his ability this season, simply because he has had a great team working with him. There never was and I doubt if there ever will be as great a pitcher as Johnson. He simply has so much stuff and speed that if he turned loose his hardest throw with his stuff on it, no catcher could get down in time to receive the ball.

"Every ball he throws has stuff on it. Some of the hops his fast ones take are bigger curves than the biggest the average pitcher has. I've seen him throw balls up to the plate that didn't look larger than a pin head. Wood is a good pitcher, all right, but he is simply not in Johnson's class, nor anybody else.

"Wood broke into the league from Kansas City against us in 1908, in Boston. There was a little house out in centre field and we had about seven men who were hitting around .300

"Wow! What a grand reception he got! First, we'd knock a brick out of the chimney, then a few shingles off the roof, then we'd shatter a window pane. We had that little house ready for the wrecking crew to cart away when we got through.

"Nobody ever did anything like that to Johnson, and never will. When a fellow is coaching off first when he's pitching, it's next to impossible to see his fast one. If he didn't have good control, he would kill so many batters he would be barred from the league. He'd wreck every club he pitched against. There's next to no chance to duck or back away from his balls.

"He hit this kid Martin of the Highlanders on the head last spring with one of his curves or slow balls, and Martin was out for weeks.

"Almost any time you get a hit off Johnson don't figure that you're smart. Just figure it that you're lucky: lucky that you happen to make that blind swing in the spot where the ball came.

"If all the pitchers in the league were like Johnson the pitcher's box would have to be placed at second base so one club could get a run without the game going into extra innings."

GRIFFITH THINKS THE GIANTS WILL BE LICKED

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 12.—"There is little hope of our beating out the Red Sox, and the Giants have about as much chance of winning the world's series from Stahl's team," said Clark Griffith in a fanning bee over the present outlook for the Boston club.

"Right now the Red Sox are a much stronger team than the Athletics at the same time last year. Stahl has shown great wisdom in his handling of the players. When Yerkes appeared in Washington in the spring he looked like a fair minor leaguer. He could hit them a mile, but that's all; by judicious handling Yerkes has developed into a good infielder and his hitting is good enough for any club. It is by little things like that that a manager proves his real class. Stahl has proved his.

"The Giants do not play as smooth a game behind any other of the pitchers as they do behind Mathewson. I know for I have had a team in the National league for three years. The moment Matty enters the box the Giants steady and become a great baseball machine. However, 'Big Six' has been through a memorable experience against this bunch of Boston Red Sox, he must remember what Speaker did to his curves in 1910. Tris hit him for an .800 percentage, that's all.

"I figure the Giants will win about one, possibly two, out of the coming world's series if they are fortunate enough to win the title in their league. Marquard is unsteady, and yet he is the only one of McGraw's pitchers of class outside from Mathewson. Crandall, Ames, Wiltse and Tesreau are hardly to be depended upon in such a series.

"To oppose the Giants and win added laurels for the American league, Stahl has Joe Wood, Ray Collins, Buck O'Brien, Hugh Bedient and Charlie Hall. Hall is good in the spring and late fall, and may prove the real winner of the Boston bunch, together with Wood. I can't see the Giants."

Golden Text—Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Matt. xi:28.

1.—Verse 20—What is the different degree of blameworthiness to one who rejects the gospel after having had many opportunities to accept, and one who rejects it having had but few opportunities?

2.—Verse 21.—If two sinners, practically duplicates of each other, hear the gospel and the one under very great influence accepts, while the other under a less influence rejects, should we blame the latter for rejecting or the influence for being too weak? Why?

3.—What "mighty works," if any, are recorded as having been done in Chorazin?

4.—What proportion of the "works" and sayings of Jesus would you say we have recorded in the four gospels?

5.—What amount of blame must we give to Tyre and Sidon for not repenting now we know they would have done so if the influence had been stronger?

6.—Verse 22—Will there be degrees of punishments for the wicked and degrees of rewards for the good in the future state? Why?

7.—Verses 23-24—What would you say is the literal meaning of the doom which Jesus pronounces upon Capernaum?

8.—Why was Sodom, that very wicked city deserving of less blame than Capernaum?

9.—Which entails the greater guilt, and why, the degree of sin or the degree of resistance of salvation? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

10.—What had Jesus done in Capernaum which laid that city under such a debt of obligation?

11.—When do you think the "day of judgment" will be?

12.—Verses 25-26—What class of people were they in that day which most readily accepted the story of the gospel?

13.—What class of men and women, for the most part, were the special friends of Jesus?

14.—In what way does God hide spiritual truth from "the wise and prudent" and reveal it "unto babes?"

15.—Why is it that a proud educated man or a proud rich man cannot perceive spiritual truth?

16.—What class of persons are those who see, hear and obey God?

17.—Verse 27—Upon whom does our eternal salvation and our communion with God depend? Why?

18.—Verses 28-30—Who are the burdened and heavy laden to whom this invitation is given?

19.—What is the nature of the rest which Jesus gives?

20.—Is it hard or easy, and why, to live a perfect Christian life?

FRECKLES

DON'T HIDE THEM WITH A VEIL; REMOVE THEM WITH THE NEW DRUG.

An eminent skin specialist recently discovered a new drug, othine—double strength, which is so uniformly successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion, that it is sold by J. S. McKeown under an absolute guarantee to refund the money it it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first night's use will show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely. It is absolutely harmless, and cannot injure the most tender skin.

Be sure to ask J. S. McKeown for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money back guarantee.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

BLED BY POLITICIANS

Inspectorship in New York Police Force Cost $15,000.

Commissioner Waldo Before Board of Investigatin Says a Captain Was Asked to Pay That Sum to "Politicians and Others" Before Being Promoted — Police Head Warmly Rejects Immunity.

New York, Sept. 14.—The sum of $15,000 was the price asked of a police captain by "politicians and others" for promotion to the office of inspector, according to testimony given by Police Commissioner Waldo yesterday as a witness before the aldermanic committee, which is investigating alleged corruption in the police department. Mr. Waldo swore that he had an affidavit from a captain that he was approached and asked to give such a sum for his promotion.

The commissioner was not asked as to the identity of the police captain or the "politicians and otherwise," but last night Mr. Buckner, counsel for the aldermen, sent a letter to Mr. Waldo asking him to produce the affidavit.

"Do you," asked Mr. Buckner, "do you waive immunity, Mr. Waldo, in case your testimony—" He did not finish.

"I don't want any immunity and I don't waive it," snapped the commissioner. "Furthermore, I do not understand that this committee has any right to grant anybody immunity. I consider the mention of such a matter a gratuitous insult."

"Do you want immunity," insisted Mr. Buckner.

"I consider this an insult," repeated the witness.

"Then I understand that you would refuse immunity," broke in the examiner.

Mr. Waldo's voice was shaking with emotion now. He leaned forward and again exclaimed that he considered such a matter unnecessary.

"Well, then," said Mr. Buckner, pleasantly, "we'll drop it."

Mr. Buckner plunged into a list of about thirty men who have been appointed to the force during Waldo's administration, after having been rejected in the preceding administration of Commissioner Cropsey for various crimes and other unfitness.

"The demoralization of the entire department is due to the civil service," said Mr. Buckner.

"I deny that allegation," flared up Mr. Waldo. "There is no finer body of men in the world than the New York police force."

"You don't think it worth while to investigate personally the character of a man who later might become an inspector," pursued Mr. Buckner.

"Before he could become an inspector," answered the commissioner, "he would have to pass a civil service examination for lieutenant, another for captain, and another for inspector. Unless he passed them, he could not be an inspector. That is the way the new men are promoted in the department now. I have an affidavit from a captain in which he says he was told he would not be made an inspector unless he put up $15,000. He didn't pay and he was not appointed. The committee can have the affidavit if they want it."

"Pay $15,000 to whom?"

"To politicians and others."

This statement created a stir among the audience and resulted, after Mr. Waldo had left the stand, in a request that he make public the name of the police captain who had made the affidavit. Mr. Waldo would only reiterate that the committee could have the affidavit if they wanted it, adding that the committee would be privileged to make it public.

The hearing was adjourned until Wednesday next, when Mr. Waldo will resume the stand.

Can't Go to Germany.

London, Sept. 14.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Col. Sam Hughes, Major Robertson and Col. Landry returned last night, having shortened their visit to France to attend the launching of H.M.S. Audacious from Cammell's and Laird's shipbuilding yard, Birkenhead, this afternoon. The launching and naming ceremony will be performed by the Countess of Litton.

Col. Hughes, referring to his visit to France, said they attended the manoeuvres at the express invitation of the French War Office, and were given a cordial reception by the French officers.

Col. Hughes now finds it impossible to attend the German grand manoeuvres next week, owing to the clashing with the British manoeuvres proper, which also begin Monday.

"I have had a hearty invitation to go," said Col. Hughes, "but I can't be in two places at once."

Six Months for Fraud.

Toronto, Sept. 14.—Ernest B. Burleigh, on four charges of false pretences, aggregating in all $425.45, was sent to the Central Prison for six months by Magistrate Denison in the police court yesterday. Burleigh's operations were in fake real estate deals. He represented himself as being an agent for a Calgary real estate firm and sold lands purporting to be for sale by that company. He had blue prints of the lands, and was able to sell quantities of it to various Toronto people. One local woman was victimized to the extent of $250. The others lost lesser amounts. They have no redress, consequently the amounts they paid are a total loss to them.

Farmer Killed by Train.

Sherbrooke, Que., Sept. 14.—Heland Wright, a well-known farmer from Glen Sutton, was found on the track near here, having evidently been run over by a train, as his body was terribly mangled. Wright had been attending Brome Fair and evidently fell from the train while on his way home. The leaves a wife and a large family.

DEATH FROM POISON.

Coroner's Jury In Zeipe Case Implicates No One.

Hamilton, Sept. 14—That Rose Zeipe died from strychnine poisoning, but by whom the poison was administered could not be determined, was the verdict returned last night by Coroner Rennie's jury, who investigated the 19-year-old girl's death.

The evidence of Analyst Rogers, assistant to Provincial Analyst Ellis, to the effect that one and one-tenth grains of strychnine was found in the dead girl's stomach, and its contents was the only material information added to the case.

Excepting for this evidence, the principal features of last night's session of the inquest were the recital of the sordid details of the relations between James Bruce and his wife, and the presence of a crowd of morbidly curious people who packed the court room at the central police station, and stood straining their ears to catch fragments of the evidence, in the corridors after the court room doors had been closed.

At the conclusion of the evidence Crown Attorney Washington announced that Bruce had the right to make a statement if he desired to do so.

C. W. Bell, Bruce's counsel, then stated that in view of the fact that his client had been detained in connection with the case, he would decline to make a statement. Neither the police nor Crown Attorney Washington last night would say what the next move would be in the case.

DAIRY COMMISSION.

First Meeting of New Federal Body Held In Cornwall.

Cornwall, Sept. 14.—A meeting of the royal commission appointed to enquire into complaints regarding the methods followed in weighing butter and cheese, etc., was opened at the town hall, with the commissioners all present, namely: R. A. Pringle, K.C., chairman, and Messrs. S. J. McDonnell of Strathmore and A. J. Hodgman of Montreal.

At the afternoon session W. A. Edwards, Aultsville; W. O. Wert, Avonmere; W. Eager, Morrisburg; J. Q. McLeod, Cornwall Township; J. S. Myers, Bonville; P. N. Tait, Millerochs; A. T. Cline, Cornwall, and M. LaPlante of Coshions Glen, addressed the commission. The opinion expressed by all was that the general conditions at Montreal were satisfactory, only a couple complaining of the methods of dealing with short weights.

A suggestion that met with approval was to have an official referee appointed by the Government to deal with differences that arise in respect to weight.

None of the speakers made any suggestion as to an improvement in the system of payments for cheese, but it was thought the commissioners might devise some means for better protection against loss by the makers.

Farmers Prove Good Sleuths.

Berlin, Sept. 14.—The efforts of J. S. McNally and Dr. Henhoeffer, members of the Waterloo County Farmers' Protective Association, have resulted in the recovery of three horses lost by three farmers during the past two years.

After waiting for two years for the county police to do something, they set out themselves on a clue and after a careful search among the farmers around Tavistock, they were successful in locating the missing animals. They quietly returned to Berlin and a further investigation followed, with the result that the horses were recovered and John Hubbell of Stratford has been arrested and brought to Berlin for trial.

China Fails Again.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The expectations of the State Department have been fully justified in the complete collapse of the effort of certain private interests to conclude a $50,000,000 loan to China in the face of the known disapproval of the great powers.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

AN IMPOSING FUNERAL.

Late Emperor of Japan Is Carried to Burying Place.

Tokio, Sept. 14.—The second part of the ceremonies in connection with the funeral of the late Emperor of Japan, Mutsuhito, took place last night, when the casket containing the body started on its journey to Aoyama, when it will be taken to Monoyama for final burial.

Imposing as was the ceremonial attended by the great dignitaries in the palace earlier in the day, when the funeral service, serving to emphasize the contrast between the ancient Shinto rites and the twentieth century militarism, was conducted, the passage of the funeral car through the streets was even more impressive. Hundreds of thousands stood for hours in absolute silence along the route.

The streets and boulevards were brilliantly lighted by torches and arc lights, intersecting which were placed large sacred trees, and at frequent intervals black and white cloth covered poles surmounted by wreaths of evergreens.

The funeral car, attended by a large number of Japanese of high rank wearing the ancient national court mourning costume, consisting of an upper robe of horse chestnut color, dull-colored loose trousers and coronet caps of black silk, was then brought to the gate. To the wailing notes of a Shinto dirge the immense coffin was wheeled from the main hall. Chamberlains marched in front of the funeral car, and following it were the grand master of ceremonies, bearing the departed monarch's sword, and the master of the household, carrying the imperial sword of state. On each side of the casket walked high officials of the household carrying lighted candles.

The hanging screen in front of the catafalque was removed by the ritualists, and the Shinto band played a soft dirge on instruments resembling flutes of three kinds, and peculiar drums. The chief ritualist and his assistants offered the offerings of sacred food, after which other offerings of red and white cloth enclosed in widdow boxes were made. Prayers for the dead were recited by the chief ritualist.

Then the Emperor, the Empress, the Dowager Empress and the princes and princesses advanced toward the casket and worshipped the spirit of the departed Emperor.

The funeral services will extend over a period of three days, and will cost about $1,000,000.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Scattered showers Thursday night and yesterday morning have interfered with threshing at many points in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Judge D. J. Donohue of Renfrew, formerly of London and St. Thomas, passed away at Guelph yesterday. He was born in Elgin County in 1860.

The fourth annual convention of the fire chiefs of Ontario concluded at Woodstock last night, Chief F. L. Wetmore of Sault Ste. Marie is the new president.

Business organizations last night appealed to Governor Eberhart for troops to help quiet the riotous outbreaks in connection with the car strike in Duluth.

Although a heavy rain fell throughout almost the entire day, there was a large attendance upon the various meetings of the Eucharistic Congress at Vienna yesterday.

As a result of being kicked in the abdomen by a horse while unhitching the animal from a plow, Robert Thompson, living near Holyroad, succumbed after great suffering.

Out of courtesy to the Japanese people, the flag on the Dominion Parliament Buildings is at half-mast yesterday in connection with the funeral of the late Emperor Mutsuhito.

Bleeding from self-inflicted bullet wounds in the breast and behind the right ear, Thomas Lebo, aged 60, was found by boys on the agricultural grounds, Leamington, yesterday.

Mary Leigh, the suffragette, who recently was sentenced to five years' imprisonment for wounding John E. Redmond, is in a dangerous condition in Mount Joy Prison as a result of being forcibly fed.

Brutally Assaulted.

Toronto, Sept. 14.—John Scott, 23 Elm street, was assaulted early this morning by two men opposite the Elm Street Methodist Church. They came upon him unawares, threw him to the pavement, and, after maltreating him dreadfully, left him. His family missed him after 12 o'clock and went to look for him. They found him in front of the church. They immediately requisitioned a police ambulance and had him taken to St. Michaels' Hospital. It was said there early this morning that he had a severe fracture of the skull, and that it was not likely that he would survive.

WANT ACT REPEALED

Labor Congress Dissatisfied With Lemieux Measure.

Sharp Criticism Is Directed at the Labor Disputes Law, Framed by the Laurier Government, and Delegates In Committee Vote to Ask Its Abolition—Question of Organizers Comes Up For Debate.

Guelph, Sept. 14.—A discussion of the Industrial Disputes Act, otherwise known as the Lemieux Act, was the order of yesterday afternoon's session of the Trades and Labor Congress, Sir George Askwith being an interested spectator. Opinion was strongly against the measure, and the delegates voted in the committee stage in favor of endorsing the resolution of last year, asking the repeal of the act.

Magnus Sinclair of Toronto pointed out defects in the act, though, he said, street railway men had gained in some ways from its operations. He contended that if the men were properly organized they would be able to settle difficulties without conciliation laws.

Delegate Hoop of Winnipeg said the act was not wanted in the central west, it took away the right of striking and the spirit of the measure was wrong.

Delegate McLennan, Nova Scotia, opposed the act because it defined the power to strike. Delegate Rigg, Winnipeg, took the same ground, maintaining that the Lemieux Act invariably worked out to the benefit of the companies. Delegate Fisher corroborated, maintaining that the cattle on the farms had better conditions of existence than many of the miners of Nova Scotia. Organizer Bruce admitted the good to certain strong organizations through the act, though opposed to it. Delegate Lowe, Kingston, favored it.

Delegate Wilkinson, Vancouver, said the principal fault with the act was the long waits until a finding was made and that in almost every case, the chairman of the arbitration committee was opposed to the workers. Other delegates took part, nearly all condemning some phase of the Lemieux bill.

The harmony and good-will at the Labor Congress was rudely disturbed shortly before noon yesterday.

The resolution of Delegate Rolls of Hamilton, that the congress confine itself to legislative matters and discontinue spending its members' money on organizers precipitated a discussion which threatened at times to become violent.

Magnus Sinclair of Toronto denounced the proposition as the product of a "disgruntled imagination." Delegate Arcaud of Montreal, on the other hand, vigorously opposed the work of the organizers who had spent their money to help the Amalgamated Carpenter, "the worst enemies the United Brotherhood had."

James Simpson made a vigorous defence of the organizers. They had done much to consolidate the laborers and make the Trades and Labor Congress the representative body it was.

At noon the debate was getting hotter when Alphonse Verville, M.P., moved the adjournment of the debate, but the delegates were determined to finish the fight while they were hot and carried a motion to continue in session till the question was disposed of. A few minutes later a motion was sprung calling for the previous question. Immediately a dozen more were on their feet demanding to be heard. One delegate accused a member of applying "steam roller" methods. The retort was "I would rather be a steam roller than a gas pipe."

Delegate O'Dell of Hamilton remained on his feet and made a determined effort to speak through a fusilade of cries of "question."

The resolution was defeated and the session broke up, the debate still being continued by groups of heated delegates all over the hall.

Delegate MacLennan of Springhill, N.S., presented a resolution asking for legislation making it illegal for private corporations such as the Nova Scotia Steel Co. to employ private police.

Resolutions aimed at wider freedom of speech, the universal eight-hour day, asking for legislation making it an offence for employers to hire help without notifying them if there was a strike or lock-out in progress, were introduced. All three carried with unanimity.

Buying Land In North.

Toronto, Sept. 14.—The fact that American capitalists realize the advantages of Northern Ontario is again proven by the purchase of between 80,000 and 100,000 acres of land in the Nipissing district of Northern Ontario by a syndicate of United States men, who intended to colonize it and open it up for agricultural purposes.

The land, instead of being purchased from the Government, is being bought through agents, who deal in veterans' land grants, and from the veterans themselves. In this way the purchasers get the title to the land. The purchasers of land recently by the Government for similar purposes did not get the title, and will not until they have proven that their scheme is a good one. The men now buying get the title deeds which were given to the veterans when they received their land grants.

Mentioned for Ottawa Commission.

Ottawa, Sept. 14.—The names of W. H. Rowley of Hull and Controller Parent of Ottawa are prominently mentioned for the vacancies on the Ottawa improvement commission in succession to Senator Frost of Smith's Falls and Joseph Ropelle of Ottawa, both of whom have resigned. The appointment will be made by the Federal court.

"THE OUTFITTERS"

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Stratford, Ont., Sept. 12th. 1912.
The Intelligencer Office, Belleville, Ont.

Friends.—There are two attractions that will visit Belleville soon and as the same companies have recently played here in Straford, I feel that I must speak a few words of praise for both and at the same time warn Theatre going folks of Belleville, that the attractions are worth their every consideration and that they can buy tickets with satisfaction that they will receive full value, for both are of the highest class and deserving the very best support.

Fisk O'Hare, in "The Rose of Kildare." A solitaire in a Tiffany setting and of rich value. Tell the folks that they can fill the house and then some.

"The Light Eternal" and it is great, as a scenic production the best, and a cast that will class the best ever. Now I am not boosting these attractions by request of the management of either company, but purely of my own accord, for I want them to get what they really deserve and if I can help by saying a few words I will think I have done my share. I know Belleville will patronize the good ones, but the others—better not stop over.

Well, good luck to all.

Yours etc.

MUSICAL PLAY THAT PLEASES

(From Toronto World)

The Princess Theatre has "The Girl of My Dreams" this week, and there were capacity houses yesterday The crowds were a matter of course, but the reception they gave the "musical play" does not always follow. It was enthusiastic, abounding in encores, boisterous with laughter and deservedly so. The piece is something of the order of the old extravaganza, and there is not enough plot to be tedious, but enough to hang all the spontaneous humor upon that John Hyams, Leila McIntyre and their fellow players care to put into it. In a delightful interlude, when repeated encores had driven them out of breath. Mr. Hyams made an absurd explanation, which convulsed the house and concluded: "We ask you from the bottom of our hearts, for God"s sake don't interfere with the plot." We won't, except to say that it revolves around a hat, yellow, and trimmed with red poppies. It serves to introduce a youthful and pretty chorus, who sing melodious madrigals and display a new line of charming costumes, with plenty of dancing and several decided novelties. Of these, Miss McIntyre's 'Dr. Tinkle Tinker', had perhaps the record of encores, and her nursery rhymes repeated little girl fashion, are quite the best thing of the kind. Miss McIntyre has a quaint three-cornered smile of bliss and a fascinating personality which recalls the Violet Cameron of a generation ago. The peculiar ease and smoothness with which John Hyams gets off his good things harmonizes excellently with his Quaker air and dress, and the combination kept the audience screaming. The music begins well with the overture and is bright and tuneful throughout, an augmented orchestra rendering the score in good fashion. The harp was highly effective in the overture and in the song "The Girl of My Dreams," but it is the first chorus, "Hazel Eyes," which is worked into the finale in both acts, which is the popular one. Miss McIntyre's song "Quaker Talk", was another popular one—"If thee Loves Me as I Love Thee, Then Thee Shouldst Live Thy Life With Me." Harry (Mr Hyams) has succumbed to the charms of Alice and abandons his faith as president of the Bachelor Club. "Don't talk to Me of City Girls," he sings. "They've cured me boys, of bachelor joys, I'm ready to quit, and be good." But he has an accident with his motor car. Did he know the people?, asks Lucy. "No, I ran into them," he replies. This is when the mysterious hat gets damaged, whereby the milliner, Daphne Daffington, capitally rendered by Alice Hills, is dragged into the plot to mix it up with Generalissimo Bombastino and his wife (Francis Gaillard and Della Niven,) Count von Schnigglefits (Irving Brooks) and Pigeon (Neil Burns) contributed to the general merriment, and Frank McEwen, as the disappointed poet, makes the most of his chance. An old friend full of pert humor is Frankie di Silvia as Cuddle. The curtain falls on a genuine surprise amid a distribution of favors to the audience so that the piece is a rush from the first till the last moment. Those who have seen Karl Hoschna's "Three Twins," "Madame Sherry" and "Dr. de Luxe" will be delighted with this new work of his.

THE ROSE OF KILDARE.

Fiske O'Hara, the Irish tenor, and his latest romantic drama, "The Rose of Kildare, will be offered by Augustus Pitou, jr., at Griffin's Opera House on Friday night, Sept. 20th. The play is described as a tensely interesting one throughout and of that fascinating type so rarely seen nowadays, in which one touches elbows so to speak, with heroes, statesmen and chivalric beings such as we dream of in youth. The scenes of the play are, of course, placed in the Emerald Isle and the authors have selected a period that has been renowned for its brilliancy the world over, the last part of the 18th century. It was a time of political excitement, brilliant oratory, high ideals and lofty sentiment, and this atmosphere pervades the play which Messrs. Paulton and Bradley have provided for Mr. O'Hara. Manager Pitou has equipped his star with a supporting company of rare excellence and has spent money with a lavish hand on the scenic costume enhancement of the play During the performance Mr. O'Hara will sing several new songs, written especially for the play by Edward Paulton, one of the authors, and which are said to be among the best that O'Hara has ever had. This production is now playing at the Grand Opera House, Toronto, and is pleasing large audiences every night.

BISPHAM ON MUSIC IN THE SCHOOLS.

David Bispham is a great believer in the teaching of music in the public schools. A great deal of the musical development of this countrw in recent years, can be traced, he believes, to the increased interest in music among pupils and teachers.

In reviewing the history of music in America, Mr. Bispham said recently: "Fifty years ago the great music of the world had been written, including the works of Wagner. Not all of it had been reproduced, but speaking broadly, it was then in existence. The music of the past fifty years is largely a copy of the great compositions that have gone before.

"In these fifty years there has been a steadily increasing demand for good music. The cultivated people of both continents are paying an immense amount of attention to music, and are satisfied only with the very best. You see evidences of this development on every hand. The number of orchestras now playing evidences the very general, the almost universal nature of our musical taste. We see evidences of it in the demand for gifted soloists, and in the patronage of Grand Opera. All this contributes to the movement of the great renaissance in musical art.

"Let music be taught in the public schools. There is already a gratifying movement in this direction. Good music should be heard in the schools every day, and thus does public taste develop and public standards improve."

David Bispham concert is announced for the City Hall Monday night, Sept. 16th. Prices for single tickets, 50c., $1.00, $1.50. Course tickets $3.00.

Frederick Staples Death Accidental

To Mr. C. J. Wills—Witness did not tell Staples not to go between the cars, but said he would go and see that everything was right in the east end. He said this, thinking he was protecting Staples.

To Mr. Taylor—Staples had been working with witness about 10 days previous to the accident.

D. Murray, sworn, testified that he was fireman on engine 1221 when the accident to Staples occurred. The first he knew of the accident was when Mr. Hopkins told Tebworth and witness what had occurred. Witness did not hear or see the engine coming from the east. Staples was apparently instantly killed. Witness or Tebworth could not have done anything to have prevented the accident.

To Mr. Carnew—Witness did not see Hopkins or Staples upon the track.

W. A. Morden testified that he was engineer on engine 1665. About 4.50 in the morning his engine came in on track No. 10. He gave no whistle signal when he went upon the track as it was not considered necessary. From the signal he received he knew he would bump into other cars. When he struck the cars he was given a signal to stop, and he immediately got another signal to back out again. At that time he did not know an accident had occurred.

Mr. Smith, being sworn, said he was a yard foreman on the G. T. R. at the east end on the morning of the accident. He opened the switch to allow engine 1665 to run into track No. 10. He did not know that there was an engine and other cars on that track. He gave the signal to the engineer on engine No. 1665 to go ahead. He saw no person about and saw no lantern. The cars were being moved slowly at the time. He put two cars on No. 10 track and then gave a signal for the engine to back out as he had cars to put on No. 11 track. He was about the place where the accident occurred about 20 minutes previous and the other engine was not there.

To Mr. Carnew—A.F. Campbell was assisting witness at this time. Yard engines are operated at both ends of the line. The two cars he put on No. 10 track, going against the other cars caused the accident. He did not see the other engine or any person. If any person was chaining up cars witness should have been notified.

A. F. Campbell swore that he was a yard brakesman on the G.T.R. and was working in the yard on the morning of the 11th inst. He was under Mr. Smith. As far as he knew no signals were given from either engine which were operating on that particular siding. He did not see the accident, but heard of it shortly afterward.

Mr. Walter Partridge testified that he was fireman on engine 1665 on the morning of the accident. Witness did not know Staples or any of the men as he was a stranger. Witness did not see engine 1221 that morning.

Richard Lott, being sworn, said he was yard master. He was home at the time of the accident, and could not throw any more light upon the matter than that given by the witnesses examined.

This concluded the evidence and the coroner briefly addressed the jury in reference to the evidence submitted.

WHY SHOULD NOT OLD PEOPLE RETAIN THEIR YOUTHFUL VIGOR

No Reason Why Men And Women Of Sixty, Seventy And Eighty Should Not Be Well—The Secret Of Happy Old Age

"Fruit-a-tives", The Famous Medicine Made Of Fresh Fruit Juices, Again Proves Its Great Value In Curing Kidney Trouble.

Old age pays the cost of living. Few men and women of fifty, sixty and seventy are free of Kidney Trouble. Hard work, mental strain and general debility, tell in the long run. And many men and women show they have Kidney Trouble by suffering with pain in the back, headaches, rheumatism, sciatica, bladder disease.

To such people "Fruit-a-tives" has proved one of the wonders of the age—and the most remarkable discovery of the century in modern medical science. This fruit medicine has performed hundreds of cures where the sufferer had been told that the case was incurable.

Take, for instance, Mr. Geo. W. Barkley, a prosperous farmer and one of the leading citizens of Dundas County, Ontario.

At seventy-six, he is the picture of health—with the vigorous actions and the sprightly step of a man of fifty.

Yet for twenty years, he suffered with Kidney Trouble. He took "Fruit-a-tives" and it cured him.

CHESTERVILLE, ONT., JAN. 25th, 1911

"For over twenty years I have been troubled with Kidney Disease, and the doctors told me they could do me no good, and said I would be a sufferer all the rest of my life. Nearly a year ago, I tried "Fruit-a-tives". I have been using them all the time since and am glad to say that I am cured. I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit of doing what the doctors said was impossible."

GEO. W. BARKLEY.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit, and is the only one that acts directly on the kidneys. It cures. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE STORY OF A WANDERER

By JAMES GRANT

Author of "The Romance of War," "Under the Red Dragon," "Fairer than A Fairy," etc.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

By this mode of riding, and the round white jacket which he wore, I knew one of those horsemen to be Adrian Africander.

In this new pressing danger I nearly forgot all about the poor, despairing sinner who laying dying in yonder cavern, incapable almost of fashioning a prayer with his pallid lips to that Maker before whom he was so soon to appear, for his fate might soon be sealed if any wild animal came that way and scented the blood of his wounded limb.

Galloping onward into the wooded kloof between the mountain slopes, I was not without hope of distancing these pursuers, or, at least, of successfully eluding them, and getting by a detour in their rear amid the thin morning mist, which was now curling upward, white as snow in the golden sunshine, from every hollow place.

My horse was in tolerable order, but a good feed of corn would have given it more mettle than the grazing had done, and thus I soon became aware that I barely preserved the distance between myself and the Amaponda Kaffirs, who were alike fleetly and well mounted. Indeed, ere long by the sounds that the wind brought towards me, I became painfully conscious that they were gaining on me, and that unless I found concealment or succour they would ultimately ride me down. Succour was hopeless, and concealment I could find none.

The hot morning sun soon exhaled the mist upward, the kloof became more open and destitute of trees. I soon left it, and the mountains, too, behind, and for miles there stretched before me another karoo, or plain, covered by long grass and aromatic shrubs, by wild lilies and tulips of wondrous beauty, but no shelter, unless a green ridge, some hundred feet in height, which rose in the midst of it, could afford it; and that did not seem very probable.

Each time I gave a hurried glance behind, I could see that the figures of the men and horses were becoming more and more distinct as they neared me, and ere long their cries of triumph came plainly to my ear. Flight seemed useless; yet life is precious—oh, most precious in such a time—so I continued to ride blindly and breathlessly on.

"This day," thought I, "may—nay too probably must—see me perish by a miserable and obscure death in the desert—a death of which Clarice can never, never know. I shall disappear—be mourned for a time, and then—forgot."

The horsemen saw the ridge that rose before me, and, very naturally, supposing that I must ride around it to the right or the left, they opened out in extended order, so that some should be close to my skirts, if I took either way. But before I could determine what to do, a final and unexpected catastrophe occurred to me.

The ridge in question consisted of high gray crags of basaltic rock, that rose perpendicularly from a green and sloping bank, which was thickly covered by dead pine trees. These stood up all bare and white, denuded of bark, like skeletons, presenting a singular and ghastly appearance, as their leafless stems and branches glistened in the sunshine.

As I was nearing this place, a cry or gasp, escaped me, and in a moment I found myself rolling prostrate on the ground. My horse had put his foot in a hole, and falling headlong forward, threw me, at the same time breaking his off foreleg just above the fetlock.

The animal was totally useless now, and my life I deemed as lost. Half stunned, I scrambled up and secured my rifle and hatchet. The poor horse was making ineffectual struggles to rise and get afoot, but always rolled heavily over on his side, moaning and whinneying most plaintively. I could not shoot him to end his misery, not having a cartridge to spare, and so I had to leave him to the vultures or wild animals. These I knew would soon end his sufferings by devouring him.

The yell with which my ferocious pursuers greeted this catastrophe acted as a spur upon me. I resolved to sell my life as dearly as possible, and begun the ascent of the ridge on foot with all speed, seeking to reach a chasm or cleft in the rocks where I might defend myself till my last cartridge was expended.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES.

There was a large and enthusiastic meeting of the ladies of the Auxiliary on Thursday afternoon. They have made provision for the winter equipment for the thirty bedrooms, nearly all of which are occupied.

The W.C.T.U. met on Friday and planned for a great rummage sale in October in the City Hall. These ladies undertook to raise funds for providing sufficient chairs for the auditorium.

The business men will gather up their running shoes, etc., and meet Mr. Powers in the gymnasium on Monday evening.

The Board of Directors will on Tuesday evening at 6.30 lunch together after which the first Board meeting of this fall will be held. The various committees will be appointed and active work commenced.

An Unbreakable Will at Last

Here's a Will That Cannot Be Disputed.

When a piece of machinery is so strong and simple that it cannot go wrong, it is often called "foolproof." The same thing might be said of the Bax Will Form but for the fact that a fool never makes a will, and he is the only man who does not.

Every man or woman of intelligence realizes the importance of making a will, even when the amount to be left is small. Some people, however delay the matter because they do not wish to incur the expense of lawyers' fees or wish to avoid publicity. It is to these people that the Bax Will Form appeals. It costs only 35 cents, and there is no necessity for letting any person else know the contents of the will. With each form there is a specimen will made out correctly, with full instructions for your guidance.

The will made on the Bax Will Form is positively legal and indisputable. See that the name "Bax" appears on the form.

For sale by C. B. Scantlebury and G. L. Sills Belleville, at 35c, or sent on receipt of price by the Bax Will Form Company, Toronto.

Cause and Cure of Headache

The cause of headache as you know, is the stoppage of the circulation resulting in pressure on the delicate nerves of the head. In time nature will start the blood going again, but meanwhile we suffer and are unfit for duty.

Assisted by two ZUTOO Tablets, which by the way are as harmless as the soda they contain, nature will remove the pressure and stop the headache in twenty minutes. Why continue to suffer? Why be unfit?

It is really remarkable how many people now use ZUTOO to cure their headaches. Do you? If not, why not?

SHANNONVILLE ANNUAL AGRICULTURAL FAIR

"World's Fair" the Proverbial Success—While Quality Superceded Quantity, the Showing was Creditable—Side Attractions Numerous, Including Belleville's Scotch Band—Races Tame But Honest—Only a Single Accident During the Day—The Prizes in Full.

O Shannonville, famed Shannonville,
Scene of the world's great fair;
Where country folk from round about
May cast aside all care—
Where fruit of hand and earth are found,
And live stock crowds the stall—
Where booths galore, with varied wares
Have something nice for all.

The annual fair of the Tyendinaga Agricultural Society, more familiarly known as the "World's Fair," was held at Shannonville on Saturday afternoon last, and proved the usual success in every particular. While the exhibits were, perhaps, not quite as numerous as those of some years, the quality was quite up to the standard. In horses and cattle the judges, who exhibited a spirt of the utmost fairness, experienced a degree of perplexity in deciding upon the disposition of prizes, yet, so far as is known, the awards were quite satisfactory. Throughout the entire work of judging the officials manifested a marked degree of interest, and great credit is due the mangement for the impartial manner in which the exhibitors were treated. Fruit and vegetables appeared to be of an unusually fine quality, and in the domestic departments the handiwork of the ladies was worthy of special mention.

Aside from the general exhibits the attractions were of the usual order—selling booths with their varied merchandise where a spirit of jocular saying were freely heard—the Ferris Wheel, fully patronized from the opening to the closing of the gates, and the proverbial horse races, without which the occasion would not be fully up to the times. And especially pleasing was the entertainment given by the Kilties Band of Belleville, rendering its quaint selections, Drummer Sharpe's handling of the sticks attracting wide attention.

The crowd, which rapidly increased in the afternoon, went up into the hundreds, yet it was estimated that the attendance was considerably under the usual mark. A pleasing feature of the day was the cordial spirit manifested on every hand, and the freedom within the grounds from intoxication and ill behavior of any kind. It was a place where all could enjoy a pleasant outing, without fear of undue familiarity.

If the racing was a trifle tame, owing to several of the entries failing to put in an appearance, at least those who did take part in the trials of speed were out for the prizes and jockeying was not in evidence. The only accident in this line of sports, and of the entire day, for that matter, was in the 3 minute class, when Iona, owned by Mr. Stuart of Deseronto, tripped at the start of the first heat, turning a complete somersault, throwing the young rider, Master Clarke Watson into the air, who lighted on his feet like a cat, without injury. The mare, however, was less fortunate, her left foreleg being injured to such an extent as to necessitate her withdrawal from the race, and possibly putting her out of racing condition for the future. The accident was regretted as the animal was thought to be the speediest of the trio, and would have aided materially in putting up an exceedingly interesting race. Following is the programme as carried out:

Little Boy Was Severely Hurt

Roy Kleinsteuber, a child but three years of age, whose parents reside in Tweed, was brought to the hospital here yesterday, suffering from painful injuries. The child, in company with his father, was in a stable on Saturday, when in some manner he was knocked down by a horse, which stepped upon his head, fracturing his skull. Dr. Mather of Tweed, accompanied the victim to the hospital here, and with Dr. Dolan of this city, removed a piece of bone three inches by one inch, which was pressing upon the brain.

The little one's condition is serious and at present it is difficult to say what the result will be.

Prospectors Had Narrow Escape

Special

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Sept. 15.—The steamship Algerine, Capt. J. Bartlett, chartered by by Capt. H. Munn, to prospect for minerals in North Baffin's Land, was nipped in the ice off Pond's Inlet, latiude north 73, on the 16th of July, during a terrible squall and snowstorm. She sank in thirty-five minutes after the squeez began, in two hundred fathoms of water, her contents being a total loss. All hands were saved in the boats and landed on the ice, where they subsisted on very scanty provisons until the 1st of August, when the steamship Neptune, chartered by "Lucky" Scott, arrived at Pond's Inlet. The crew and party were taken aboard, and departed for St. John's on August 21st, arriving here yesterday, all well.

The ice in the Arctic Ocean is unusually late and heavy. The Algerine was insured, but there was no insurance on her contents.

In mineral results the Algerine expedition was a failure, though the objective point was reached and thoroughly prospected.

LEADER OF ALLEN CLAN CAPTURED

After Long Immunity He Was Traced to His Place of Refuge by Means of a Woman

Special

DES MOINES, Iowa, Sept. 15.—Sidna Allen, leader of the Allen clan, which shot up the Carroll County courthouse at Hillsvale, Va., March 14, killing Judge Massie and four others, and his nephew, Wesley Edwards, to-night are manacled in cells at the city jail, as a result of a love affair which led detectives to them.

Edwards, for the love of whom Miss Maud Iroler, of Mount Airy, Va., had innocently led detectives to Des Moines, was captured to-night as be was returning to his boarding house. The arrest of Sidna Allen was effected earlier in the day.

A visit by Edwards to Miss Iroler in her Virginia home about a month ago and the acidental loss of a letter put the detectives on the trail. The fugitives had been in Des Moines since April 28. Allen, under the name of Joe Jackson, was employed with a city paving gang. Allen was arrested at the home of John Cameron, at Eleventh and Locust Streets, where he and his nephew had been rooming. The arrest occurred a few minutes after Miss Iroler stepped into the Cameron home to meet Edwards, whom she was shortly to wed.
